Peer help now going in center

Peer counseling, under the direction of the Counseling Center facilities from the Health Center, is available to Cal Poly students Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Health Center lobby.

Ken Ruggles, one of the 22 student counselors involved in the project, said peer counseling is done by students with other students. "We offer something immediate to those right here today," he said, explaining that professional counselors are not always available when students need help.

Jeri Waite, another student counselor, said the counseling center was developed at Cal Poly because of the number of student suicides that have occurred during the past year.

Ruggles said that problems students have are often derived from outside factors (parents, teachers) and that talking to an older counselor is threatening to the student.

"I would rather go in and talk and promote my own self help problem," Miss Waite said.

All peer counselors are students and seniors drawn from various schools in the university.

"We're students who have gone through what they're going through, so there is no reason to be afraid to come and talk too," Ruggles added, adding that it is not necessary for students to give their names when they seek peer counseling. "No records are kept here.

The 22 peer counselors went through a three week preparatory course about confidentiality and problem solving techniques before the peer counseling began on April 28.

"We don't profess to be psychologists," said Ms. Weite. "Our purpose is to solve someone's immediate problem.

Many women students have had professors make passes at them, ranging from subtle hints to the extreme," says a staff member of the Counseling Center who prefers to remain anonymous to protect the confidentiality of her clients.

"This hasn't happened to just a few, but to hundreds of women," says the counselor. "It has caused many women to drop out of classes or worry about how their grades will be affected. The sad thing is that although this has happened so many times, women aren't talking about it. Right now there's no place for them to go.

A woman Biochem major reports she was driven out of Animal Science by the "sexist jokes and putdowns I encountered in the classroom." "They have prompted the Women's Collective to set up a grievance procedure for women to report discrimination experiences, with double objectives of helping the individual women, and defining the extent of sexism on campus so that the university can begin dealing with the problem.

In addition to fielding complaints about specific incidents of sexism, Women's Collective is also handling complaints about the curriculum.

Missy Green, a spokeswoman for Women's Collective, says that both women and men are being victimized by such things as "archaic lecture material that perpetuates traditional sexual stereotypes without offering information about alternatives."

An example cited by Ms. Green is the course title. "Dating, Courtship, and Marriage." She feels Cal Poly should also offer a course that would specifically define and discuss alternatives to the dating-marriage-marriage syndrome, since traditional lifestyles are now undergoing changes.

Many see the grievance procedure as a way for students to change sexist attitudes in the campus community.

"It is definitely an effort to change behavior, to help people (continued on page 5)

After reading Marji Nieuwsma's "no-endorsement" editorial I feel I must respond to her claims on monetary expenditures.
I have not spent an "exhorbitant amount of money" on my campaign. Marji should have added that it was in her opinion.
I donated over 12 hours of his time and effort, they put into making them. And I would further like to compliment them on the professionalism of these signs. Marji also states that my "one concern" is for men's athletics. Yes it is one of my concerns. But certainly not the only one. I am concerned for every program on this campus. She apparently did not take the time or the effort to read the brochure I gave her.
Furthermore, if any student or administrator does question the fact that I have spent too much money, I urge you to call me or any student and we will tell just how my finances stand. Marji Nieuwsma would be justified in saying I spent an excessive amount of money on my campaign. As evidenced by my platform, I have taken the time to find out what the students want. How can she fault me for that?
If Marji had only taken the time and effort in researching her accusations of me, then I am sure she would have perceived things much differently. But as she did not even take the time to call me or talk to me whenever I was in her office, then I must conclude that Marji Nieuwsma has effectively instigated the "mudslinging" she so emphatically stated she wanted to stay away from. If Marji Nieuwsma has effectively instigated the "mudslinging" she so emphatically stated she wanted to stay away from.
Perhaps that is why they look so professional, tons, and brochures. Perhaps that is why they look so professional. Likewise all my outdoor signs were hand-painted by students. I think I have not spent an "exhorbitant amount of money" on my campaign.

Rejection
Editor:
My attention has been drawn to a distinguishable candidate for ASI president; his slogan is "A student worker for students," his leaflet states his personal qualities: "Experienced, Straight-forward, Dynamic."
The candidate is Gregory M. Fowler. The aforementioned campaign claims are what I wish to address in this letter.
Working for Students: He advocates altering student government so that it serves the needs of all students. Two years ago he was the foremost proponent of the status quo in offering a column on the origins of the Women's Movement. His declarative statement at that time was that supporters of the Movement were "Hell-bent Bitch Wizards who have very little in common with American women... taken in an aggregate fashion...who express the most jealousious ideas." Now his stand is "Outspoken representation of the rights and interests of ALL Cal Poly students..." Maybe because of the law of political survival Mr. Fowler would not verbally indicate that women had particular places in the Movement, but he has not shown that he sees his place in the country.
In conclusion, I stand as an alternative "all students" then can vote for. Fowler believes that the entire system that allocated funds away from student government is a system that allocated funds away from student government. He does not believe that the entire student population, all students, can vote. He is the one person who believes and practices altering student government. Mr. Fowler is the one person who values and practices altering student government.

O'Connor
How much backbone does one need in order to run for A.S.I President? Obviously, by working with the students and trying to alleviate the housing problem, being on the University Union Board of Directors, and being the A.S.I Representative for Gay Country Affairs (GCA), Kevin O'Connor is more than enough for the Editor to consider that this is the type of person that we need in an A.S.I President.

Defacing blasted

Editor:
As a concerned Cal Poly student I am very upset with the manner in which a majority of Poly students have conducted themselves during this last days prior to voting. I have to complain with those students who do not wish to participate in the voting, but there is something that does upset me very much, that is the defacing of campaign billboards. Across the street from where I live I have noticed some election billboards torn into numerous pieces. Later I noticed another billboard with spray painted initials all over it. There were other election signs all around but they were not defaced for some reason. I am appalled by the type of conduct perpetrated by the small minority of Poly students. This kind of conduct makes the entire university look bad. Does this small majority of Poly students really believe that they can control an issue by doing something so immature as defacing billboards? These kinds of personal campaign tactics can only make me reverse my voting position. Any candidate that lowers himself with these types of tactics will never get my vote and hopefully will not get the votes of other concerned students. I further believe that a majority of the voting students will reject him as well as his campaign tactics. I do not know whether this kind of conduct will have an effect on these misguided students, but I hope it will spark a little thought in you next time you see a defaced election billboard. Democracy was created by man, it can be destroyed by man also.

I've had the opportunity in the last week to hear all of the five candidates for ASI President. I am supporting Greg Fowler for ASI President for one main reason, and I hope you'll think it over and do the same. Fowler is the only one of the five candidates who is talking about issues, and not personalities.

He thinks the structure of student government doesn't allow enough interaction and communication from the non-student students. We have 15,000 students that ASI must represent and work for: yet student government's structure hasn't determined on page 5.

Defacing blasted

Editor:
Unfortunately, many people are as yet undecided on who they'll support for ASI president. The problem is clear: although almost all the candidates have their strong points, they also have serious faults which in several cases outweigh these strong points.

Meanwhile, in the race for ASI vice-president, there is a difficult choice to make between two apparently outstanding candidates, Phil Bishop and Roland Hill, who are capable of handling the post with competence, and it is too bad that both of them can't serve us in this capacity.

However, my support goes to Roland, whom I believe to be more assertive of the two, a quality badly needed in a vice-president at this time. He has served the students of this campus well as director of the Legal Aid Office, as can be attested by those students who have utilized the office. Hill has the ability to work with people and administrators, with whom he disagrees, and is not hindered by many people or by getting overly-emotional when doing so. I am not in a position to guarantee that Roland will do the better job of the two, because I'm not that familiar with Phil Bishop. However, from what I've been and done by both candidates, and from my working with him in the past, I firmly believe that Roland Hill will serve the students of Cal Poly in the most progressive way possible, at a time when service is needed most.

I’m very upset with the five candidates who have been involved in student government, and also for those of you who are aware of the issues afflicting the students on all levels, to be concerned enough to take a strong stand and actually participate to ensure that the best candidates are elected. The President and the Vice-president of the ASI are the spokesmen for the student body as a whole. Thus, it is vital that the interest of the students be their top priority.

From swarm to new home

by MARK MARIETTA

When Eleanor McMillan found a bee swarm in her yard, she called a friend who used to be a commercial beekeeper. Eventually she found herself talking to Richard King.

King, a Ornamental Horticulture major, is the instructor of the beekeeping class at Cal Poly. For a lab he took his class out to catch the bee swarm.

"There's nothing to it," said King as he shook the swarm off a branch into a hive. Stung twice, King quietly said, "These bees are being kind of aggressive."

While the class, a few students protected by heavy gloves and a pit helmet with a screen on it, examined the new hive, King said the bees will start building immediately.

A student asked why some bees were still on the branch. King said they were scouts and would find the hive by the scent radiated by bees fanning their wings outside the hive.

When a colony gets overcrowded the old queen and a swarm of bees leave the colony to start a new one, King said. The swarming season runs from mid-March through June, he said.

There are 32 people in the class this quarter and 26 were on the add list. "Until recently there was not much interest in beekeeping," said King.

Russ Wood, 19, Electronic Engineering major, said, "I got interested in bees about four years ago when I took a class at private school."

Mike Chambers, 20, Architect major, said he got interested in bees by reading some books about them. "I'd like to start a few colonies of my own. They're pretty valuable," Chambers said.

Lyle Bettagar (RIGHT) begins to cut down a bee swarm of unusual size that has formed on a tree branch. After cutting it down he carefully places it into a new hive box (BELOW LEFT) where a new hive will take hold in a few days (BELOW RIGHT). Once inside the box the new bees explore their new home (EXTREME BELOW).

Problems in the photographic process at Mustang Daily resulted in the omission of four candidates' pictures running for the SAC representative position, from the Tuesday campaign issue of the paper. The omission was not the fault of the candidates in any way. The students omitted include: Gil Rosenberg, SAC rep candidate from Agriculture and Natural Resources; Daren Warren, SAC rep candidate from Business and Social Science; Ray Davis, SAC rep candidate from Engineering and Technology; and Kenneth Hunter, SAC rep candidate from Science and Mathematics. Mustang Daily regrets the unavoidable omission of these photographs.

Rainier Sightings Spread to North Dakota

Zap, North Dakota: Dr. Heinrich Tschutter of the North Dakota Citizens' Committee on Carbonated Phenomena displays an authenticated photograph of a Mountain Fresh Rainier taken recently near Zap, North Dakota. "This time there is no doubt," said the indefatigable MFR tracker, "MFR's are proliferating in pockets throughout the Great Plains." Although Mountain Fresh Rainiers are said to number in the millions throughout the Pacific Northwest, and observations have been made as far west as Hawaii. Dr. Tschutter's sightings at Zap are considered a major breakthrough. "There are additional reports of sightings in Williston, Minot, Bismarck, Dickinson, and New Leipzig." Dr. Tschutter told enthusiasts, "and I for one am delighted. They are fresh, friendly beings, golden in color with foam-like white tops. Apparently they are quite at home in North Dakota."

Sightings of Rainiers dropped precipitously in the Northwest during the years 1920 through 1933. This sighting near Svenson, Oregon, was viewed by several hundred people in 1936, when there was a flurry of MFR sightings.

This snapshot of an MFR was taken in 1958 by a Humptulips, Washington, hardware store owner. Telephoto lens shows family of Rainiers in field near Payette, Idaho.
The Cal Poly Women's Tennis team played in the 1977 annual California Women's Intercollegiate Conference league finals held at Cal State Northridge. The Mustangs top seeded singles player, Rose Bachman, drew a bye in the first round of competition. The sophomore defeated J.J. Chapman from U.C. Irvine 6-5, 6-1 in the second round. Ms. Larchman advanced to the semis where she was defeated by Cheryl Newbrough of Cal State Bakersfield 6-2, 6-7, 7-5. Ms. Newbrough went on to place first in the finals.

Rhett Gilliup, No. 2 player for Poly, won her first round against Kerry Hyman of U.C. Irvine 6-5, 6-7. The senior from Caruthers won her second round by a default from Debbie Millet of Cal State Bakersfield.

Gilliup went on to place in the semifinals where she defeated Susan Kueh of Cal State Los Angeles 6-4, 3-6. She then advanced to the finals where she was matched against Cheryl Newbrough of Cal State Bakersfield. Gilliup was defeated in the finals by score of 6-4, 6-8, giving her a second place in the tournament.

The doubles team of Jan Melnab and Nancy Meyer made it into the quarter finals before they defeated their opponents from Cal State Dominguez Hills 6-8, 6-4, and from U.C. Irvine 6-8, 6-4 in the opening round. They were then defeated in the quarter finals by Maria Wexler and Kathy Burke of U.C. 6-2, 6-2.

The weekend's league finals wrapped up the season for the Mustangs.
Big John returns

by JON HASTINGS

It is an old college custom to have some big name alumnus come back to the campus and speak at a banquet. In the case of Cal Poly alumnus John Madden, his name isn’t the only thing that is big.

Madden, the large 9-2 coach of the Oakland Raiders, spoke at the annual spring awards banquet of the Cal Poly chapter of the California Association for the Health, Physical Education and Recreation Tuesday evening.

The 30-year-old Madden told a large Chumash Auditorium crowd that four qualities make a great American football player:

"While having the unfortunate pleasure of coaching the Pro Bowl three out of the last five years, my coaching staff and I have noticed that all great players possess the same four characteristics," said Madden.

The former Cal Poly football and baseball star said toughness, dedication, intelligence, and pride are what make a great football player.

"When I say toughness, I don’t mean bar room toughness. I mean the kind of toughness it takes to absorb punishment when you know it is coming," said Madden.

"Our quarterback (Oakland) Ken Stabler is the toughest guy on our team because he stands in there and takes shots when he knows they are coming."

Madden said Oakland wide receiver Fred Biletnikoff was the perfect example of a dedicated player.

"Fred works out twice a day every day of his life and he made himself into a great football player," said Madden.

Madden said the day the dummy football player is over and intelligence is a key to success in football.

"With all the plays and audibles, a player has to be smart," said Madden.

Pride is the final quality of a great player and Madden said he thinks it is just a combination of all the other qualities.

"To be great you have to want to be the best and that is what separates the average players with the great ones," said Madden.

Madden also commented on coaching and said a coach was as important in the press as he is in the huddle.

"I have coached at the junior high, high school, college, and professional levels, and coaching plays the same amount of importance in all of them."

When talking about coaching Madden is an authority. In six years as head coach of the Oakland Raiders he has won five AFC Western Division championships and compiled a phenomenal .766 winning percentage. He was the youngest coach in the NFL when he took over the Raiders in 1968.

Madden coached at Hancock JC in San Marin and San Diego State before showing up to the Raiders as an assistant in 1967.

Longtime friend of Madden and master of ceremonies for the CUSPER banquet Ed Zornelli commented on Madden.

"Cal Poly has produced a lot of fine engineers and architects, but I don’t know if it has ever produced a finer person than John Madden."

The Oakland Raiders have never won a Super Bowl championship and Madden said this could be their year. Win or lose, Madden has a long name, a lot of kids and he is pretty big in the field of class too.

Cinderella results

The SLO-O-Town trackmen ignored a steep hike to come up with a few outstanding performances Saturday at the San Jose Invitational.

Jim Schanck broke the school three-mile mark by 11 seconds, running a 13:08.2. But coach Steve Simmons isn’t satisfied yet.

"I think Jim can pick up the hill at the half-mile mark and run a 13:50’s when he has to. It was a superior performance and he’s still not in top shape."

Coeds finish fourth in softball tourny

The coed softball team met some stiff competition over the weekend in a double-elimination tournament at Huntington Beach. The Mustangs split their four games, 2-4, finishing fourth in the eight team tournament.

Coach Mary Nalland’s team played their first game at 5 p.m. Thursday and were blanked 4-0 by the University of Nevada at 1:30 p.m. Friday.

Yvonne Carrillo pitched the first four innings and was relieved by Kim Graham. Later the same day, the Mustangs came back to nip UC Berkeley, 5-4, after Graham ended the win.

On Friday, the Mustangs dropped the rubber game of a double double against Sherry Fleming with the winning run.
