The Mountain

Accepting challenges is part of his nature, contends timekeeper-contractor Alex Madonna. He sees himself as a big one that for everyone's sake we hope he succeeds in overcoming.

Winter rains are coming, and Madonna claims in a Telegram-Tribune story he is collecting ideas about how best to seed the slopes where he has carved his "fire roads" on San Luis Mountain. Originally Madonna believed the bulldozer area would re-vegetate on its own.

The San Luis Obispo City Council wasn't so sure of that and in July sent a letter to Madonna describing its fear of possible erosion effects. It might be too late for Madonna to cover his tracks on San Luis Mountain. It would be ironic if the Madonna knife woke up one morning and found half the mountain sitting in its front yard.

Madonna's statement about his propensity for accepting challenges was included in an interview of the local baron in Outpost. The interview revealed the propensity for accepting challenge was part of his life. The San Luis Obispo City Council also laid he probably would instigated by "misinterpretation on the community," meaning the San Luis Obispo residents have as much ownership of the view of San Luis Mountain as they do the sky. Madonna said he thinks 80 per cent of the community is behind him and that percentage might hold for the Cal Poly population. This is a figure picked out of thin air, especially when Poly is concerned.

At any rate, he described some extensive plans for "Our Mountain Inn" for ostensibly having only thoughts about building since the controversy blew up. Madonna added he thinks 80 per cent of the community is behind him and that percentage might hold for the Cal Poly population. This is a figure picked out of thin air, especially when Poly is concerned.

Student Fees May Increase By Winter

Jorgensen noted that the membership of the Board includes 10 students who voted on the matter. He said the decision by the Board was only a recommendation to the administration based solely on the projected operating deficits.

According to Jorgensen, the next move regarding University Union fees lies up to Kennedy, who has input on the matter and what the eventual decision on the increase in union fees will be totally up to Kennedy. And Jorgensen added, "I don't know what he's going to do."

Asville School Seeks Needed Volunteers

Reading, writing and speaking are skills we all take for granted. It's hard to imagine the self determination a handicapped person needs to learn the basic skills for normal life.

There are 56 developmentally disabled and physically handicapped adults attending the Avila School. Student Community Services has a volunteer program for students who are willing to spend time with these handicapped adults.

"Volunteers are needed from every major on campus," said Pam Harten, Project Coordinator for the Avila School functional living program. "We need students who can teach basic academic skills such as reading, math and language. Students are also needed to show grooming, cooking and other vocational skills.

The school is old and in poor condition, according to Harten. The facilities need to be redesigned and repaired. The school is not handicap accessible.

"There is room enough for the place and only one teacher," said Harten. "The program really depends on Cal Poly volunteers."

Volunteers work with the teacher and students on an individual basis. You need to stand right there and show the handicapped person how to do something, says Harten. "Even for something as simple as brushing their teeth."

A meeting for all interested people will be held November 12 in UU 216 from 7:30-8:00 p.m. or contact Community Services at 546-5159.

New Stadium In The Drawing

A tentative design concept for a proposed multi-purpose stadium will be presented at the conclusion of a two-day architecture workshop today. President Robert Kennedy will be on hand for the three hour session to hear the results of the two day planning session. City officials from the planning department were also expected to be present.

A “take part” workshop, employing the talents of city and campus administrators along with student architects, began work yesterday on “Brainstorming ideas for the proposed complex.”

Results of the brainstorming sessions will be made public today from 2 to 5 p.m. in the Architecture Gallery in Engineering West.

The workshop is the brainchild of senior architecture student Larry Kurtz, who is the coordinator of a senior project group that has worked on a stadium design concept. He is coordinating his efforts with a group of professional architects, led by Jim Burns, who are considered experts at this type of workshop.

At yesterday’s opening sessions, each city official was to Mayor Kenneth Schwartz, President Education head Robert Merc, Assistant to the Dean of Students Bob Timone, University Police Chief George Coctield, Peer Phillips of the city’s facilities planning department and the Dan Lawson of the university’s planning office met with Kurtz’s senior project group to consider the problems involved in designing the concept.

The need for a wide range of expertise was explained by workshop director Burns.

“These people are an important factor when it comes to deciding what is important for the city. We need to get a valid input. This is not an academic exercise.”

While the workshop’s results will not be the final say in how the stadium is designed, said Burns. “It will be an important resource for whoever finally gets approval to design and build it.”

Hydrant Painted For Bicentennial

It’s finally happened. The Bicentennial craze currently sweeping America has finally filtered down to man’s best friend.

Dogs on campus will now be able to do what comes naturally on a patriotic red, white and blue fire hydrant, thanks to Sigma Kappa sorority.

“The painting was held Thursday on an unseasonably hydrant in conjunction with the campus’ Week of Giving, part of a celebration of the group’s 101st birthday.”

Sigma Kappa each year undertakes projects to benefit the community and its alumni, the elderly, the campus. Painting the fire hydrant was the campus project.

“We heard that the campus was going to paint the hydrants for its own Bicentennial program,” explains Sigma Kappa Membership Chairwoman Judy Marker. “So we volunteered to do one for them.”

And the dogs? What if they can’t see it if the hydrant is a hydrant? “They could easily find a bush,” Ms. Marker says. “I don’t think they’ll have any problems.”

Gestalt Workshop Set

An exploration of awareness, perception and personal responsibility will form the basis of an experiential workshop in Gestalt Therapy presented here this weekend.

The course, worth 1 and one half units of upper division university credit, will clarify many Gestalt principles as they fit into the process of personal experience. Tari thin will be given to Gestalt groups, providing an opportunity for individuals to observe the experiences of others. There's Nothing Better Than A Letter

by MIKE CONWAY
Daily News Writer

Waiting College students are good at it. They wait to register, they wait for bus, books, they wait for graduation. And, sometimes they wait for their mail.

The lobby of Tenaya Hall is jammed with students waiting for mail. One group is pacing in front of the office. A group of about seven people are sitting facing the office. Occasionally one of them glances towards the mailboxes now being filled. And, sometimes they wait for their mail.

"Have you seen the mailboxes? There's Nothing Better Than Letter in't," the added.

The lobby of Tenaya Hall is always waiting. College students want to start undying right away, "Bengjke it's there," one said. "Why are they waiting for their mail?" "Because it's there," one said. "But usually it isn't," she added. "When you get out of classes for the day you don't want to start studying right away," Best said. "So you come down here and worry about getting mail.

"Do you know what a box looks like?" Paula Chamberlain asked, referring to the dorm rooms. "Then you know how you go crazy if you stay in one too long. Waiting gets us out of our rooms."

One girl explained how waiting is a scheduled activity in her day. "I go to lunch before 12. From 12 to one is mail time." And one girl described the waiting period as a "social activity." We just sit around and talk," she said.

What are they expecting the postperson to bring them? "Anything," Lorri Ware said in mock desperation. "Those little flyers, advertisements, even a phone bill. Anything from anybody."

"I'm waiting for a postcard or letter from Europe," Jeff Cohen said. "It's from my girlfriend."

Others said they were expecting mail from their boyfriends, girlfriends, mothers, families, friends and collection agencies. Everybody wanted to get money, but few expected to receive anything.

One person said they had received money in the past. "My aunt sent me 20 dimes for the driers," she said. The postal carrier was carrying a few surprises this time.

One resident received a personalized form letter from Bank of America informing her that she was overdrawn. Another girl got a postcard from her boyfriend in Hawaii showing a topless wife.

One girl got a letter from her boyfriend whose cat had died. "Someone else received a letter from an ex-boyfriend. He said he's broke but he's still in love," she told her friends. Also in the mail was a letter from parents. Cohen's postcard from Europe, and a batch of pre-stamped envelopes which might be a marketing campaign.

Hedge's Image Trimmed

by SUSIE WHITE
DAILY TAIL WIZARD

The infamous Hedge House on Foothill Blvd., once home to Cal Poly's most raucous revellers and rennents, is now as respectable as an—old—college sorority house.

In fact, that's what it is, and for Cal Poly, that's a first.

The Alpha Phi's, the first Poly sorority to own a house, bought the Hedge House last spring.

The ousted tenants, eight students and several dogs and cats, have lamen­ tably thrown their last shiving in the old two-story house.

It all started last May when the Alpha Phi's national headquarters decided to loan the Cal Poly chapter the money to buy a house.

The girls had been meeting Monday nights in the University Union since they were first organized last January.

Needless to say, they were excited by the offer.

With the assistance of an Alpha Phi alumni who works for the national headquarters and other alumnae living in San Luis Obispo, the girls found the Hedge House.

Said Sandy Springer, the blond Alpha Phi president: "It took a lot of work to get the house in shape. The boys who lived here before spent three days just cleaning up the kitchen before they moved out. Doors were missing and the carpeting was filthy. We even found loads of beer cans in the bushes. I guess that's why their parties were so much fun."

The sorority bought the ex-party house, which is on almost an acre lot, for $50,000. They've spent another $50,000 on redecorating, remodeling, and painting.

The bright gold color they painted the outside makes it hard to miss if you're within eyewright of the house. The Sigma Delta Phi fraternity crowned it the Pumpkin Palace because of its radiant orange-glow.

According to Marcia Huber, a Pumpkin Palace member, the city told them they could only paint their house gold or grey. Although they complained reluctantly, they're now kind of partial to the color.

Despite the color controversy, the 11 girls now living in the house, as well as the 44 live-out members, are working to make the house home.

"We've become closer by just working together on the house and in the yard," Sandy said. "We've done all the yard work ourselves and that means we're more relaxed, we're responsible, and the work is done."

Dorm Mail: Students Wait

While him to write more often.

After being asked if she got any mail, Lorri Wade said, "I'm not even going to look because I know there's nothing there."

Steve Bates doesn't get ex­cepted over the mail either. "For me," he said, "receiving letters is about as impor­tant as writing them."

haven't written a letter since he came to school.

Perhaps the best mail a person can get is a package. And the contents of the packages vary quite a bit.

Common items in packages are cookies, apples, apricots, salami, cheese, crackers, birthdays presents and more pre-stamped envelopes.

But the most talked about package in Tenaya was one two girls paid $3.50 a piece to receive. It was their very own Mark Eden Bust Developer. They say they are renting it out and business is booming.

Hubert Tung said what a lot of people were thinking. "It's kind of nice to get mail," he said. "Part of it's loneliness, having just gotten out of high school. I know my friends are lonely now so I write to them."

So the mail mongers sit and wait for it to come.

Hedge: Alpha Phi Moves In

"We're also planning to enlarge the house in the next three or four years. The garage would make a good sleeping porch and we'd like to change one of the bedrooms into a living room."

For now each live-in member has certain weekly duties, like cleaning a room in the house. Marcia said, "We take turns cooking dinner and cleaning up, and it worked out really nasty so far." The Alpha Phi's don't have a housemother or housemen (men for kitchen duties). Instead the house manager and the treasurer pay the bills and buy the groceries. Each live-in pays $40 a month for food and $100 rent, plus $7.50 for liquor, $40 a month for food and $7.50 for liquor. Each live-in pays $100 rent, plus $7.50 for liquor, $40 a month for food and $7.50 for liquor. While the girls were not permitted to see the president's mind when asked why no boys in the bedrooms, no liquor anywhere on the premises and no food in the living room. The students are also observed at night. Sandy admitted, "Being new, the girls fought against having rules enforced by certain house rules."

The workshop consists of live-in interviews. One participant felt that this was the root of the problem. Sandy said, "There are many disadvantages."

Dislikes centered around the parking lots and the Highland drive underground. One participant felt that this area was critical in terms of bringing cars into any event held at the stadium.

Late in yesterday's session, the participants drew up a list of priorities and design possibilities. These were analyzed last night by the workshop leaders who will present a final concept at today's final meeting.

"The style we're doing is rich in New Orleans first," said Williams. By the 1920's it had moved to northern parts of the United States. "From them on it evolved from the typical swing styles to the more popular styles known."

Williams played several different jazz versions of jazz to his foot-tapping audience. Among the styles he played were Dixieland, Chicago, Big Band, the Swing and the Cool. The first jazz musician didn't follow arranged music, said Williams. They merely played around a theme. Williams played some vintage jazz featuring Louis Armstrong to illustrate his point about a "happy, infectious style." Said Williams, "The style changed from the 1920's to the 1950's. The new style was called the Swing. It had more skilled and stylish book arrangements than Dixieland.

However, another style in the 1940's did not receive a warm reception. It was called the Bop. And, according to Williams, the Bop was thought to be somewhat revolutionized. "It was a difficult style to play," Williams said. "But it had some innovations which were truly remarkable."

At about the same time, the Cool was beginning to receive acclaim. Like its name, the Cool represented a conservative and understated theme according to Williams. The rhythm sections kept time with the music.
Accidents

No Bones About It, They’re A Real Pain

by DOMI TOMATE

Daily Staff Writer

Each academic year starts off with a bang. It also ends up with more students suffering from broken bones and time spent in a hospital—a big pain, which, in most cases, could have been prevented.

Dr. Billy Mounts, director of Cal Poly’s Health Center expresses his deep concern over the increasing number of injuries students take habitually resulting to because of their lack of concern towards the seriousness of accidents.

He received of the approximated 5,000 after hour visits, which are nights and weekends, isolated in a year, one third are suffers of traumas or injuries. Mounts said, “While I was on duty one weekend, we had cases of a fractured back, a triple fracture of a face region, a fractured hand and a fractured toe.” Concerning laceration-type injuries, Mounts counts up to a half a dozen a week.

Injuries remained from student accidents, according to Mounts, come from motorcycle, skateboard, bicycle riding and weekend football games between competing franchises and high-spirited students. Mounts described that many serious accidents come from riding skateboard and bicycles. On a skateboard, Mounts cited an example when a student had fractured his left hand so badly that it was permanently deformed.

In an incident with a bicycle rider, the front wheel flew off during a high speed ride, resulting to the rider falling hard onto the pavement.

Also, Mounts said, students usually report in Friday nights from hard falls from “flatspots,” and similar alterations resulting from alcohol.

Alcohol brews its share of problems—more-than-their-share of alcohol.

But of all the injury-producing activities, football games bring in a large quota.

Taking this from a general feeling, rather than of a fact, from a Sunday afternoon go at the playing field, there are about four or five injuries traced in the emergency room with a couple waiting to be treated.

He mentioned the center can only treat two consultations a weekend, which, Mounts said, is about average.

Dr. From Collin medical officer of the Health Center, said, “These injuries are all preventable. It’s just that students take certain levels of calculated risks when they’re out there.”

He suggests better supervision, training and preparation to roll with the blows as a means of preventive medicine.

“There are some activities that have inherent hazards. Football is one of them. Everyone should be aware of the circumstances of injury,” Collin said.

“I am not against intramural football,” says Mounts. “But I am against alcohol. I am here to be an advocate of physical education and similar related activities. Students in intramurals should be aware that they are not promoted like the members of a college team are.”

A Dedicated Athlete

by GREGG SZANTO

A good distance runner must work hard, have great determination, and be willing to get up an hour early every morning to run five or 10 miles.

The distance runner is a man for all seasons. He runs in rain, cold, or extreme heat.

Unlike the football and basketball players, the distance runner is seldom in the limelight.

Tony Reynoso is a distance runner. He runs for the Cal Poly cross-country team. He may not be as well known as the other athletes on campus, but he is one of the best.

Tony transferred to Cal Poly from UC Davis so he could work on his animal science major. "They have a good animal science department here," says Tony.

Directing The War...
Silent, vocal, decisive, the chief executive strategically leads his warriors into battle.

... A Gladiator in Motion

John Madden can never sit still. Not when he was a Cal Poly undergraduate in the late fifties or now as the head coach of the Oakland Raiders of the National Football League. Madden is a pacer, never resting in one place, constantly on the move. He looks too young to be a football coach and would look more at home driving a bus with his Jackie Gleason appearance. But the six-foot-four 260-pound redhead proved himself on the football field leading his Raiders to five American Football Conference championships since the beginning of his pro coaching career back in 1987. This year Madden has been voted Cal Poly Alumnus of the Year.

Madden had his start playing offensive tackle for Poly and made All-Conference before graduating in 1969. The 39-year-old Madden went on to try out for the Philadelphia Eagles, but after one year, a knee injury cut short his Pro Football career.

Madden is one of the youngest coaches ever to be in charge of an NFL pro bowl team, and was head coach for the AFC all-stars in 1971, 1974, and 1975.

Before landing his job at Oakland, Madden worked as an assistant coach at Hancock Junior College and spent three years as defensive coordinator at San Diego State University, during a span when they were ranked number one in the country.

and the people you hire are the greatest," said Tony. He adds that, besides Steve Simmons and Eddie Cadena, they are two of the best around.

Tony has been running competitively since tenth grade. His times have improved every year, so his success this year came as no surprise to those.

Tony ran over 500 miles this summer, and he now runs between 80 and 90 miles a week. He won three Tony's natural talent.

Reynoso's outstanding running has led Cal Poly to a 5-0 record in dual meets, and has established the Mustangs as a threat in the CCAA finals.

The most amazing thing about Reynoso is that he has led Cal Poly, he forced to sit out a year. Simmons has been shaken with Tony's progress this year.

"It's difficult to stay out of competition for a year and come back and do as well as he has, claims Simmons. "Tony has made the transition from no competition to become our top man monthly," added Simmons.

Tony sees Jim Warrick as the key man (or Cal Poly in the CCAA finals.

"Jim has improved his time a minute and a half since the first meet. And the way everybody on the team has improved, I'm confident that we'll do well in the CCAA finals. But Norndal has great depth, and they have the best chance," says an enthusiastic Tony.

After the cross country meet, anyone can run the mile and three miles for the track team.

"I want to run the mile in the next year and then three miles for the track team."

Cadena hopes will springboard his Poly Cross-country championship race is slated to the two-year end to the two-year behind the Physical Education building on the Cal Poly campus.
Coach Eddy Cadena figures the home course will be helpful to his top runners, Tony Reynoso, a redshirt transfer from U.C. Davis, and captain Jim Warrick, a Northridge.
Two-time champion Cal
Northridge returns in Overlook LA. State," Cadena noted.

The Mustangs are coming on an upset 56-35 victory over the powerful Spartans and will be aiming to put an end to the two-year CCAA division by Cal Poly Northridge.

Cadena is in charge of football scheduling made a gross mistake this year. Homecoming games are sup-pposed to be a piece of cake. Sure wins for the hosts school. It’s when the alumni return to town to see a victory.

That’s why USC usually schedules William and Mary for their Homecoming classic.

Cal Poly’s supposed to schedule Dublin JC and let everyone who is suited up carry the ball. But someone fo­ got to give the schedule makers the word. They were and passed Poly against the number seven-ranked school in division II.

The Idaho State Bengals will invade Mustang Stadium Saturday with a 7-1 record. Idaho State will be trying to make their bid for a regional playoff spot, look that much stronger.

The Mustangs will be trying to save some face and prove to some people that they are still a good football team.

Coach Joe Harper’s crew, sporting a respectable but disappointing 6-5 record, will have their hands full come game time. The Mustangs are coming off a breakthrough 10-7 loss to UC Riverside last week.

The loss all but eliminated Poly from the CCAA race. Harper will have a hard time getting six players motivated from here on out. The only thing there is to play for is pride.

While pride is what it is supposedly all about, sometimes players don’t perform well when there won’t be any postseason rewards.

But knocking off Idaho State should be reward enough. The Bengals released the Mustangs, 17-9, last year in the midseason. Idaho was a 5-5 team then and they have improved immensely since that time.

Coach Bob Griffin’s team has been relying on overall depth and experience. They are led by versatile wide-receiver Randy Mitchell. Mitchell has great toughness, speed and intelligence. He has played fullback, quarterback, and wide receiver while at Idaho State.

Poly again will have to depend on their effective running game. Gary Davis, who was held under 100 yards for only the second time this year last week, will be playing his second to last game in Mustang Stadium. John Henson and Rocky Chapman, will be giving Davis some support in the backfield.

Homecoming Game Won’t Be a Pushover

by JON HASTINGS - Daily Sports Editor

After a winning season in football, it’s time for some alumni games. The alumni games are a good way to give the students a break from the rigors of school and a chance to see some old friends.

This year’s alumni game will be held on Saturday, October 15th at Mustang Stadium. The game will start at 2:00 PM.

The Mustangs will be playing against the Bobcats from Idaho State University. The Bobcats have a record of 5-2 and are coming off a close win over the University of Idaho.

The Mustangs are coming off a strong season last year, finishing with a record of 8-3. They hope to carry that momentum into this season.

Coach Joe Harper believes that his team is ready for the challenge. "We have worked hard this offseason and are ready to show what we can do," he said.

The Mustangs will be led by quarterback Gary Davis, who had a breakout season last year. Davis threw for over 2,000 yards and 16 touchdowns. The Mustangs will also rely on their running game, led by running back Phil Harris, who had a strong season last year.

The Bobcats are coming off a disappointing season, finishing with a record of 3-9. They will be led by quarterback Max Johnson, who had a rough season last year.

The Mustangs and Bobcats will face each other in a high-stakes game, with the winner taking home the annual alumni trophy.

Coach Harper believes that his team has the talent and experience to win the game. "We have a strong group of players," he said. "We are ready to show what we can do."
