Giving The Students A Sporting Chance

"Leadership backed by experience." This is the phrase we have been using to describe Ray Davis in his bid for the office of Vice President. I would like to make this slogan more meaningful to those who have not had the opportunity to meet and talk with Ray.
I have known Ray for the past two years, and we have been using to him in Student Affairs Council for part of that time. His participation on the body is what has mainly prompted me to actively seek his election to the post of Vice President.
His calm, critical examination of issues has more than once prevented SAC from plunging into what might be an unwise course of action. I have watched him for the office of ASI Vice President. Generally, I have been quite satisfied with his performance and the way he has handled the business of the SAC.
I believe it is his experience in his previous position in Student Affairs Council that has prepared him for the office of Vice President. He has the potential to contribute much to the workings of the ASI as Chairperson of the Finance Committee, a member of the Academic Affairs Committee, and as a member of SEC and SAC and feel that he is the most qualified candidate for the position. His experience and breadth in the activities of the ASI has prepared him for the office of Vice President.
Meland Can Do
Editor:
We, the following concerned students of Cal Poly endorse Ole Meland for ASI President. We have observed his past activity in the workings of the ASI as Chair man of Finance Committee, and as a member of SEC and SAC and feel that he is the most qualified candidate for the position. Throughout his campaign he has specifically talked about issues of concern to all students of Cal Poly. He is concerned about the budget. He has made positive proposals for increased student services. His involvement in the ASI, his experience and the Joachim Association of America for student programs and the restructuring of the ASI to make it more effective and responsive to the changing needs of the students.
Ole Meland has shown that he can effectively work within the ASI, with the administration, and utilize the lobbying power of the California State University and College Student Presidents Association to bring about positive changes for the students. Because of his involvement in the ASI, we feel that Ole Meland can step right into the job and start working for the students of Cal Poly instead of spending the first quarter becoming acclimated with the workings of the ASI.
For these reasons we feel that Ole Meland is the most desirable candidate for ASI president and recommend that the students of Cal Poly get out and vote for the candidate with the positive and specific goals for the ASI, Ole Meland.

Architecture To Remain Impacted

Student architects will not be more plentiful here next fall despite projected completion of the architecture building shortly after the quarter begins. Executive Dean of Architecture E. Douglas Gerard said, "Completion of the building does not change the impacted status of the school of architecture. For the past two years we have been renting a portion of Stenner Glen for the architecture students. In mid-June we will give up the rented facilities."

Facilities in the new architecture building include 18 labs and three classrooms. Gerard said the labs contain a total of 396 stations and the classrooms a total of 180 stations. He said official capacity of the building is 300 full-time-equivalent students.

Students will not begin the quarter in the new building as construction is four to five weeks behind schedule. Gerard said the delay is due to the fact "the contractor is a little bit slow." Classrooms in the building should be ready for use by the second or third week into the quarter. Gerard said, however, the state of the School of Architecture and Environmental Design should be able to move into the new offices before fall quarter begins.

Gerard estimates construction on the building began spring quarter 1975. By the time construction is complete cost of the building will be close to $8 million. The $6 million figure includes costs for design, movable equipment and operating charges. Parking in the area previous to construction will not be restored, Gerard said. He indicated parking in the area had only been temporary. The road which had allowed access to the Business Administration Building will also remain closed until California Boulevard was extended sometime in the distant future.

Minority Career Seminar Scheduled

A one-day seminar will be held May 14 dealing with graduating Cal Poly minority students and their availability to the job market.

According to Richard C. Lee, a senior in Journalism, an Ethnic Career Seminar Day will feature Cal Poly speakers and include representatives from Pacific Telephone and KNBC-TV (Los Angeles).

Cal Poly speakers include representatives from the placement center and Affirmative Action.

The seminar will serve as Lee's senior project in Journalism.

Lee says, "The goal of the seminar is to help the graduating minority student develop a beneficial interchange of ideas with the business world. Students will be exposed to a realistic look at the job market."

The seminar, Lee says, will cover a variety of topics dealing for the graduating students what will be expected of them once they are in the job market. Lee explains that the subjects will range from writing resumes to what the students will need to expect once they are employed. This seminar will be an opportunity for students to acquaint themselves with research people on campus. Lee says, as well as to prepare the students with actual job searching methods.

"A majority of seniors graduating are unaware of many basic procedures necessary in seeking employment," Lee says, explaining that he has not many minority students ready to graduate this June who do not know how to find employment. "Through this seminar," Lee says, "students will be exposed to many facets of the real business world."

Lee is hopeful this will "equalize their chances of finding suitable employment in an already tight job market."

An Ethnic Career Seminar has never been held at Cal Poly before, Lee says.

Lee is hopeful questions such as: "Where am I going and how do I get there?" will be answered.

"Career seminars help develop strengths, skills and understanding of realistic options so each individual can readily adapt to career demands and opportunities," Lee says.

The seminar will be held Friday in Rm. 220 of University Union. It will start at 9:30 a.m. and end at 5 p.m. Everyone is invited.

Oceanographer To Speak Here Thursday

The world's oceans will be discussed by Sigma Xi National Lecturer Dr. William A. Nierenberg this Thursday. Despite Nierenberg's credentials of being the Director of the World Institute of Oceanography and Vice Chancellor for Marine Sciences of the University of California, San Diego, his talk will be geared toward interdisciplinary audiences.

Nierenberg has held many prestigious public service assignments, including NATO's Assistant Secretary General for Scientific Affairs, the President's Science Advisor, Adviser to National Security Affairs, and the Department of Defense.

The speech, sponsored by the Cal Poly Sigma Xi Club will be Thursday at 11 a.m. in Ag. Eng. Rm. 125.

Jockeying For Winner: All Vote In SAC

A group of Cal Poly students and faculty — concerned about the Student Affairs Council tonight may pass a bill which would, in effect, cut ASI-funded athletics by 20 percent over three years — is making a play of its own to see the bill fail.

The Board of Athletic Control (BAC) — with the rager blessing of Athletic Director Vic Buccolu and several members of the Poly coaching staff — has initiated a drive to sign students names in a petition which urges a no vote on ASI Bill 76-1.

The bill, as it now reads, would direct ASI to follow the results of a controversial ASI Budget Survey in the letter. This would mean not only a slash in athletics, but also in allocations to several musical groups, including the Cal Poly Marching Band. And the chances of its passage at the 7:15 p.m. meeting tonight in University Union Room 226 are good enough to send the athletic lovers surrying on an end sweep with a petition of their own.

The petition now in circulation throughout campus states: "We the undersigned believe that Athletics should not be cut over the next three years." It also denounces cuts in the ASI budget of monies now funneled to musical groups like the marching band — cuts that would be automatic if SAC votes in favor of Bill 76-1 tonight.

The petition cites the athletic program's high degree of success and the "necessary service" it offers the university as reasons which make the program worth saving from the budget-cutter's axe.

It further states music has proved "excellent service" and a chance for a "well-rounded lifestyle" to Poly, and for these reasons, should not be cut.

The petition concludes that the two programs — music and athletic — "should receive high priority" budget considerations.

A theory that runs counter to the findings in the ASI survey which called for a cut in these programs and a boost in programs like Program Board is a body which brings rock concerts and special events to Poly. It is not known how many students have signed the petition, but its proponents feel it's as valid a pace of the student body's budget beliefs as the ASI Survey taken earlier this year.

That survey — mailed to 500 randomly selected students and answered by 302 of those students — has drawn considerable flak.

Most of its critics don't believe it is statistically valid and argue that it should not be taken on face value.

"We need to take the pulse of students," said one of them, Men's Physical Education coach Dick Hixon. "But we can't make such budget decisions on just the opinion of 302 students. I seriously question the validity of the survey because we provide a service and we cannot if we have to take such cuts as listed in the budget survey."

Heaton, of course, isn't the only upset with the ASI survey results and the move to take it at face value. The BAC, two SAC representatives, Kim Wasick and Paul Curtis, "We are being forced to stope to the level of athletics and counter signature for signature..."
Poly Gay Student's Union received official recognition in January after a long five-year struggle. Now, with newly elected officers, the group considers that a recognition of beginning and not an end.

"A large part of our energy went towards getting recognition," Adrian Chayie, the newly elected GSU president said. "That goal has been replaced by what our bylaws state as our purpose: an intelligent study of homosexuality."

The members of the GSU have changed since its official acceptance.

"There is a diversity of personalities, people from all areas not just a clique," Chayie said. "It is even hard to say that the one common bond between us is homosexuality. I could not categorize them into bisexual, homoromosexual or homosexual. I wouldn't be that brave. Everyone must find their own sexual awareness and not react to the roles we assign them. To categorize our membership would be unfair."

With an active membership of about 20, Chayie realizes the GSU is not meeting the needs of all the gay on campus.

"We are getting there. But basically we are internally oriented. First, we must meet the needs of the membership."

A task force is now at work to come up with a plan for restructuring the group to make it more responsive to the members.

Members interested in community service are working with sex offenders at Atascadero State Hospital.

"The group is limited to those who are preparing to leave for good behavior. We serve as a bridge to let them know what to expect in the outside world," Chayie said.

According to Chayie it is especially difficult for these gay people, because they realize their sexual identity while in confinement, sheltered from the attitudes of the society.

Another section of the GSU is working on a speakers bureau, not to promote homosexuality but to educate and bring an awareness and acceptance of homosexuality.

"We have decided to keep a low profile. We are here and we are going to be," Chayie said.

Still they have to fight the attitudes of unsympathetic people.

At a recent meeting, Chayie related, a group of girls stopped at the doorway and asked what club was meeting. When they were informed it was the GSU they immediately started to giggle, and ran down the hall, laughing uncontrollably. The club members burst into applause.

Margo Terrill, GSU member, said, "In this town we're a controversy, but it's no big thing. It will come."

"Communications and Education" will be the theme for the seventh seminar of the first year for the Agricultural Leadership program which will be held Thursday, May 19.

The three-day meeting will include workshop sessions and a tour of the P.G.&E, Diablo Canyon Nuclear Power Facility. The sessions at Cal Poly will also cover practical applications of parliamentary procedure, school and community relationships and persuasive speaking.

Beach Party

The Cal Poly Women's Club will sponsor a beach party for International Students. The beach party will be at Avila Beach on Saturday, May 28. For information or transportation phone 541-0675 or 549-8079.

SAC To Meet

A report on campaign reforms will be submitted by Greg Fowler. SAC representative from the School of Communication Arts and Humanities, at Wednesday night's SAC meeting.

Fowler asked Michael Devin, Cal Poly's attorney to look into the recent Supreme Court ruling which states in essence that a candidate's personal financing of his campaign cannot be limited. Fowler wants to find out if this applies to campus campaigns as well as national.

Also on the agenda for this week's SAC meeting is the SAC meeting bill 76-1 which deals with budget priorities and discussion of the 1976-77 school year budget. The May 12 meeting will be held in room 202 of the University Union at 7:15.

Badminton Tournament

A coed doubles badminton tournament will be held in the Men's Gym this Saturday morning at 11 a.m. There is a 50 cents entry fee and sign-ups are being held in the Intramural office from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Awards will be given.

College Republicans

The monthly meeting of the California College Republicans will meet on Thursday, May 19 at 7 p.m. in Agriculture Building, Room 229. Yearly elections will be held and three candidates for assembly will give their platform and answer questions.

Civil Liberties Leader

Frank Wilkinson, field representative and executive director of the National Committee Against Repressive Legislation, will speak at 11 a.m. tomorrow in the University Union, Room 204. Admission is free and the public is invited.

Wilkinson will be on the Cal Poly campus for a presentation before a political science class later in the day and is expected to use Senate Bill 1 as the topic for his talk.

Russian Requests Protection

MOSCOW (UPI) - The Soviet Union delivered a strong protest to the United States Tuesday over its alleged failure to halt attacks on Soviet properties and personnel in New York by "Zionist elements."

It insisted the U.S. government guarantees the safety of Russians working there.

The note quoted "new facts indicating that the American authorities are not taking effective action to stop the outrages in spite of all assurances that they would do so," by Soviet news agency TASS said.

The Foreign Ministry summoned a senior American diplomat to receive the protest. Normally the U.S. embassy receives copies of protests delivered in the United States but it was not immediately known if the protest was submitted in Washington or New York.

TASS did not give the text of the note but described it as "strong protest" which blamed "Zionite elements" for the violence.

The Jewish Defense League has claimed responsibility for most of the violence involving the Soviet U.N. mission, trade offices and the Aeroflot airline offices. It said the JDL aimed was to protest treatment of Jews in the Soviet Union.

Today’s Well Day
At Health Center

Nickers will take a back seat at the Health Center today when the Cal Poly clinic sponsors “Well Day.”

Well Day will include demonstrations, displays and self-instructive emphasizing the role of preventive medicine in the Health Center’s daily activities. The program will be held from 4 a.m. to 9 p.m. It will be open to the public as well as Cal Poly students and faculty.

“Well Day is intended to help students avoid the discomfort of illness and repair jobs,” said Mike Lawson, Cal Poly health educator and coordinator of Well Day. “This program is designed especially for the students who visit the Health Center only when they are sick. Prevention of illness is our purpose,” said Lawson.

On-going audio-visual displays and demonstrations will be featured. Subjects will include arthritis, alcohol, allergies, athletic medicine, automobile safety, cancer, child-proof packaging, colds, drugs, economics of care, first aid, flu, genetic advice for couples, hay fever, heart problems, hypertension, venereal disease, women’s health problems and other topics.

“New toothbrushes will be distributed to the first 250 persons who turn in an old toothbrush,” said Lawson.

“A free polo reinvigorating, in the form of a sugar cube, will be given to the first 500 students under the age of 18.”

“Three free physicals will be given away as door prizes,” said Lawson. “These are all part of the program in preventive medicine.”

The Mustang baseball team finally placed up to its pre-conference form over the weekend, as it took three of three games from UC Riverside.

Unfortunately, however, the series was the loss of the season.

Cal Poly finished the year with an overall record of 36-22-1 and a California College Athletic Association mark of 10-6.

The CCAA mark was good for third place, and put the Mustangs behind only first-time champion Cal Poly Pomona at 11-7, and Cal State Northridge at 10-8. Riverside finished in the cellar with a 7-11 record.

Poly pitcher Bruce Fosvetick shook off a one-run-loss stigma in Fray's game as he shut out Riverside 6-0 while allowing just seven singles and no walks.

The junior righthander's season was one of frustration and near-misses, as the average of his walks were by just one run, throwers were by two runs, and the last was a four-run decision in which five of the_opposing team's outs were on strikes.

But Friday's contest was most memorable for Frayetter, who did not allow a runner to advance beyond first base. Gary Williams homered and doubled, and Oake Smith reached to lead the Pol's attack.

The Highlanders lost more than they gained Friday, when outside their own nest they had to be taken to the hospital with a broken jaw after colliding with starting John Musto while both were going after a fly ball.

Poly had a tougher time in the first half of Saturday's doubleheader but picked up the win in the sixth, pitching a shutout.

The Mustangs scored both their runs when Dennis Martindale walked and stole second, Smith singled, and Mike Gregorich doubled both bases.

Senior Sam Sills tied his record for the season with a .457 Cal Poly victory Saturday's final game.

The Mustangs swept the three-game series against the Highlanders and finished in third place in the conference.

Economy Run Results

"These are only EPA estimates, your actual mileage may vary.

The Environmental Protection Agency uses this statement to qualify all auto advertising in which mileage is quoted, and none enough, it does vary, as a Cal Poly group discovered last month.

The Poly chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers' Clean Air Group held a fuel economy run covering 91 miles of scenic roads and found an Opel and an MG passing the most miles per gallon.

Cal Poly student John Kennedy, driving his 1967 Opel Kadett, won the contest of the year by covering the course at 1.8 gallons of gas 50.56 MPG average.

Brian Merry drove his 1965 MG Midget with nearly equal frugality, and finished second with 45.55 MPG. Bob Grant and Gary Fox tied for third, and Jim Lupineni was fourth. Faculty advisor Dr. William Wire made an unofficial run of gas 46 MPG in his propane-powered Volkswagen van last year.

The economy run is held twice and is open to all motor vehicles. The next run will be held sometime in the Fall quarter of the next school year.
