Post election leftovers

You can breathe easier now—the elections are over.

The inevitable activity that is characteristic of political campaigns has died down even to normal.

There won’t be any Presidential debates to pre-occupy the entire world. The posters have been taken away and the campaign slogans are no longer loud enough to compete with the news. Anyone who did not already know the outcome of the election, will now start to forget.

As the election results are all now in, there are a few trends and topics that may be interesting to discuss.

The most obvious trend is the lack of change. The same individuals who were in power before the election are still in power.

Will the signs of this election season last? Will the billboards and posters continue to dominate the landscape? There is a tendency to remain unchanged at least until the next election.

A telephone survey of Republicans and Democrats office workers shows that a significant number have made plans to remove campaign signs. All of the respondents said that they didn’t want any=null illegally placed signs up in their areas on utility poles—and that most of the papers were placed on private property by individuals who agreed to take them down after election day.

Hopefully the signs will come down quickly instead of remaining indefinitely. Fingers crossed. Who wants the candidates to run forever?

Luscious library on way

Cal Poly moved a step closer towards getting a new library to replace overcrowded Dexter Library. On Friday the director of the State Employment Development Department, Mary S. Grillo, announced that the project is feasible and possible federal financing. The final decision will be made after a federal screening expected in January.

The library is estimated to cost $11 million and would be completed in one year. The new library will be located on the present building. For those of you tired of the current building, Dexter, the plans include carpeting, air conditioning and a central courtyard to make it more livable.

Submitted with the library proposal was a plan to rebuild campus roads at a cost of $300,000.

The federal funds for the construction would come from a bill approved in 1976 in the Public Works Employment Act of 1973. The act, designed to create jobs in areas of high unemployment, was passed into law over President Ford’s veto.

Let’s hope the future doesn’t hold a veto for the library proposal.

Five cents of ecology

No painting research is required to prove that throwaways bother and cause trouble. They are left on the streets and in alleys—along the beaches, along highways, roads, in the parks and on all over town.

Finally, after nearly a year of study, the University of California State Agency for Instructional Related Activities was again to do something to cut down on litter on campus.

The E.P.A. has outlawed the sale of beer and soft drinks in throwaway containers in forests and parks, on military bases, and off-campus facilities. The affected agencies and departments have deadlines in which to reduce or stop the sale of such containers.

The E.P.A. rules require a $100 deposit on all beverage cans and bottles. The consumer carbonates must be picked up by a deposit collector and they will return it.

An attempt to enact such a law in California was made last session of the legislature. Unfortunately, because of intense lobbying activities by the bottle and can manufacturers, it died on a 44 tie vote in the Senate Natural Resources and Wildlife Committee.

The bill should be revived and enacted during the next session.

Graham moves minds as well

She modestly attributed the honor bestowed upon her at the White House last Thursday to “a new attitude toward the arts and dance” in America. But Martha Graham has been as responsible for that new attitude as anyone in the past 50 years.

When President Ford presented the Medal of Freedom to Miss Graham, it is the nation’s highest civilian award. But an even higher award in the gratitude of people throughout the world—those lives have been touched by the persistent efforts of one woman to press new forms and innovative shapes on the staged images of the dance.

In February 1975, the Ford administration held a full Arts Festival. At that point, the new money from the festival was allocated. At the time, we believed that funding would be continued and that Instructionally Related Activities would be “fully funded” with money coming from the Arts and the state.

I would like to know just how much of an increase those activities have received since then.

I suppose that the Finance Committee thinks they are looking for the future of their officers and staff, but shouldnt they also look for the present life and the future of these very important parts of student life?

Carter and Ford: A photo finish

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jimmy Carter moved closer to a tie in his race with Ford in their first debate for the White House on Tuesday night, Pennsylvania and New Jersey state ofﬁce battle in pivotal November elections.

Democrats control House and Senate

WASHINGTON, UPI—Democrats won control of the U.S. Senate in Tuesday's elections, relaying 51-49, a gain of two seats over the previous Congress, to give the party control of both houses of Congress. The Democrats will hold the majority in the House as well, with 267-165, and they will add 13 seats in the Senate, to 51-49.

In the House, the decision of Representative James Santore of New York was the deciding factor. Santore, a former member of the House, switched his allegiance from the Republican Party to the Democratic Party, giving the Democrats a 261-161 majority.

The Senate race was also decided in favor of the Democrats, with 51-49. The Democratic candidate, Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, defeated Republican Williamasey of Maine, by a margin of 11,392 votes.

Early local poll returns

In the local races for the House, the most interesting contest was in the 6th district, where incumbent Representative Bob Snow, Republican, was challenged by Representative Santore, Democrat. Santore won the race, 42-39, with a margin of 34,732 votes.

In the Senate race, incumbent Senator Edward Kennedy, Democrat, defeated Republican Williamasey, 11,392 votes.

In the gubernatorial race, Governor Michael Dukakis, Democrat, defeated Republican Williamasey, 51-49, with a margin of 281,672 votes.

In the presidential race, President Jimmy Carter led Republican George Bush, 49-47, with a margin of 2,683,380 votes.

In the race for the U.S. Senate, Democrat Edward Kennedy defeated Republican Williamasey, 11,392 votes.

Air and sea search continues for massive marijuana cargo

Authorities continued an extensive air and sea search for marijuana bales dumped during a 48-mile sea chase that ended in the arrest of 18 persons and the confiscation of the largest single marijuana seizure in the nation.

A San Luis Obispo sheriff's department spokesman said they believe between five and seven tons of pot—"that's our estimate"—marijuana may have been thrown overboard off the San Simon point Monday by the crew of the 76-foot fishing vessel named the Spot.

The 76-foot vessel apparently abandoned the narcotics before it reached the capture by the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Cape Hedge. The crew apparently was warned by radio minutes before law enforcement agents had arrested men in the suspect boat on the island of Wilmington and near the San Simon point south of the cove.

Authorities have confirmed the theft of this largest single marijuana seizure in the nation.

A spokesman for the sheriff's department said it was estimated at 48 miles, or a quarter of a million, although some narcotics experts said such value estimates are often wildly exaggerated.

"The operation was carried out by a special agent of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, and we are going to look into that," the spokesman said.

The suspects in the operation were arrested on a gold bullion in a

Forensics sweep collegiate contest

The Cal Poly Debate Squad is off to an excellent start this year, says the group's advisor, Dr. James Conway, chairman of the Communications Department.

The squad won the sweeps tiebreaker at the annual Los Rios Invitational Tournament held at Sacramento City College on October 22 and 23, beating U.C. Berkeley and Cal State San Bernardino.

"The team is off to an excellent start this season," Conway said. "We have won the sweeps tiebreaker at the annual Los Rios Invitational Tournament held at Sacramento City College on October 22 and 23, beating U.C. Berkeley and Cal State San Bernardino."

Conway said the tournament victory was important in placing his squad in the national ratings, but that it would take more wins for the team to secure its standing.

Conway said the squad has sent small teams to tournaments in Stockton, at U.C.D. and at Arizona State U. at Tempe, and a large team to a Cal State Northridge tournament last month.

Members of the squad are

Poly swine flu clinic

A swine flu vaccine clinic will be held next Tuesday on the north lawn of the Cal Poly Health Center in U. at 2 p.m.

Although the clinic is part of the county-wide inoculation program the health department is conducting, only Cal Poly students, staff, and faculty may receive the flu shot.

According to Dr. Thomas Collins, Health Center director, the swine flu virus is a relatively new strain of influenza A, one that is currently of low virulence and, therefore, not likely to cause a pandemic. However, the virus is of concern because it has been shown to cause severe illness and death in certain populations, including young children and elderly people.

Collins said that because this is a new strain of flu, the vaccine is not expected to be 100% effective, and that people will need to take other precautions, such as washing their hands frequently and avoiding close contact with sick people.

The clinic will be open to all Cal Poly students, staff, and faculty who are currently on campus, and will be staffed by licensed vocational nurses.

Violence mars Puerto Rico elections

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — One and a half million votes were cast Tuesday in the "dirtiest election in the island's history in which one youth gunned down a death worker and mayor was shot in the final hours of the campaign.

Campaigning: In what Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon called the dirtiest election in Puerto Rico's history, 11 candidates ran full slates until the polls closed at 1 a.m. and 1 a.m. with partisans of the rival partiesResourceId: 3554553539193752712

Under Puerto Rico's lock-in voting system, voters gather at a designated station under a 2 p.m. deadline while guards carrying clubs keep order permitting no one to enter or leave until the number of persons inside is counted and making sure they coincide with the number of persons inside.

The expected 150,000 registered voters were expected to vote for the governor, the bicameral legislative body of 29 representatives and 17 senators.

In previous elections, a young gunman shot the mayor of a small town and, in another election, 17 competitive out of a total of 173 candidates.

Inn offers ale, fun

by FRANCES C. JENSEN
Daily News

The paint is chipping away, the screen door sagging and the most old established bar, near beer signs flourish from its shaded windows.

Santa Margarita Inn, built in 1926, is the oldest bar and also bar shop Highway 101 from Los Angeles to San Francisco, according to owner and bartender Frank Kansteiner.

"It used to be a bootlegging operation during prohibition, but when prohibition ended it turned into a bar," he said. "And now, we serve the oldest beer in the county.

The inn, situated along Santa Margarita's main drag, has been a favorite stop for old-timers, passing travelers and young folks alike. Many Cal Poly students catch the train at the bar to San Luis Obispo and take it up to Santa Margarita Inn, just so they can have a drink of 'Prank's Margarita.'

"The 'Prank's Margarita' is the specialty of the house. Our local Elephant Beer, imported from Ontario, Canada, is popular and only because of its taste, but also because of its 11 percent alcohol content.

"The taste is hearty, but not overpowering," said Kansteiner, a Cal Poly Ornamental Horticulture major. "It goes down real easy."

For those beer drinkers who prefer a milder, more American taste, Kansteiner also serves seven percent Adolph Busch as in Anheuser-Busch.

"I don't get people who like the country," he said. "I prefer to live in an apartment which he owns behind the inn because he said, "If the musician drops in occasionally, live entertainment will come to the Santa Margarita Inn. It is never planned, Christiansen added.

"If the musician drops in to want to play, then he plays.

"Besides running the bar, Christiansen also serves as a Cal Poly student. He owns three planes which he charters out of Van Nuys airport. He owns property in Palm Springs, Los Angeles and New York, but prefers to live in an apartment which he owns behind the inn because he said, "I like the country.

"It's the people that Christiansen enjoys as he works at the inn.

"The people are nice, I'm always meeting people I like. I don't get people who are trouble makers-they are all nice," he said. "Cal Poly students are good customers."

"I come to Santa Margarita Inn because of Frank. It's a good place to be, cold Elephant beer. It has the barkeeper in the shade as far as I'm concerned. I haven't tasted anything better yet. What more could I want besides a shuffle board, pinball machine and of course, a pinball machine."

The science of eating as seen by Marjorie Cho

by KENNY MELLIN
Daily Bell Writer

Marjorie Cho's food is more than just meals—a concept that's a cornerstone of life. Dr. Cho is a food and nutrition scientist at Cal Poly Pomona and a published author. Her research in the field of nutrition and dietetics has been published in numerous journals, and her contributions to the field have earned her recognition as a leader in the industry.

Food and nutrition are closely tied to health and well-being. The science of nutrition is concerned with the study of nutrients and how they affect the body. Nutritionists, like Dr. Cho, work to understand the benefits of various foods and how they can be used to promote health and prevent disease.

In this article, Dr. Cho shares her insights on the science of eating and how it can be used to improve health. She discusses the importance of a balanced diet and the role of nutrition in preventing chronic diseases. She also highlights the role of food in cultural and social contexts, and the impact of food policies on public health.

Dr. Cho's research has been influential in shaping public policy and improving the health of communities. Her work has helped to raise awareness of the importance of nutrition education and has contributed to the development of healthy eating guidelines.

Dr. Cho is a passionate advocate for the science of nutrition and a tireless educator. Her dedication to promoting healthy eating and preventing disease is evident in her work and in her commitment to sharing her knowledge with others.

In conclusion, Dr. Cho's work in the science of eating and nutrition is an important contribution to the field. Her research and insights have helped to shape our understanding of the role of food in our lives and have contributed to the development of healthier eating habits. We should all strive to learn from her example and make the science of eating a part of our daily lives.

Despite heavy mud, numerous player injuries and the entire University of California at Riverside team walking off the field in protest, the Mustang soccer team scored its first win of the season in the California Collegiate Athletic Association tournament. The Mustangs were able to hold off the Dragons of Midwestern State University, 2-1, in the second round of the tournament. This tournament is open to only the four highest-seeded teams in the CCAA. The Mustangs finished second in the conference standings, behind Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, 17-5-2, and will face the winner of the other quarterfinal game in the semi-finals. The Mustangs last played in the quarterfinals four years ago, losing to the University of California, Santa Barbara, 0-1. Cal Poly finished 17-7-1 overall, winning the CCAA regular season championship.

The Mustangs scored the opening goal in the 26th minute of the game on a penalty kick taken by Angel Jimenez. Midwestern State tied the match in the 58th minute, but Mustangs midfielder Frank Grillo scored an unassisted goal in the 78th minute to secure the win. Mustangs goalkeeper John Nowak made two saves and Midwestern State’s goalkeeper made six saves in the match.

Mustang head coach Joe Harper praised the team’s work ethic and effort.

"We had a lot of injuries and players had to play a lot of minutes, but they kept fighting," Harper said. "I’m proud of them for being able to come out and win."
