Added FUNds for child care
It was the one thing that Jimmy Carter kept quiet about. Not that he lied to us, you understood, but he didn't exactly go around blabbing about it, you know. It was, after all, a personal matter, a family secret.

But when Rosalynn Carter began to bug him about it, he realized that the secret was out. The country gasped in disbelief. It was the one thing that they had known about him, that he worked hard, that he woke up early in the morning. The country couldn't believe it. How could he be like that? What a country.

Now, the vast majority of the people in the country have long regarded Early Riser as an unattractive virtue, one that probably sucks up the life out of you when you drink it down in a glass. In fact, the last socially acceptable hour of the day is considered to be 10 p.m. So it is not a common measure of value for this man, who had discovered the joy of waking up early.

Throughout my childhood, and even today, my parents would wake me up early with fresh flowers and a warm smile. It was a time of childhood innocence, of carefree days spent outside with friends.

I held the franchise so license use of the English language. I would change the meaning of “surreptitious,” and “acrimonious.” Of course, I was the one who changed it. I was the one who had the power. I was the one who had the money. I was the one who had the influence.

Rosalynn Carter had warned him that they were going to be a problem. Jimmy had warned her that he was going to be a president. But he didn't know that he was going to be a president. He didn't know that he was going to be a man of words. He didn't know that he was going to be a man of action. He didn't know that he was going to be a man of influence.

But rather, as an insensitive patient whose IV bottle was being readjusted, he had to learn the hard way. It is just the way it is.

Those able now may awake early

How beautiful all this would be—if you couldn't read, said G.K. Chester- ton when he first beheld the myriad of stars. How wonderful it would be if we could all see the beauty of the world, the beauty of the stars, the beauty of the universe.

It was a mistake, a poor choice of words. Of course, there are only suggestions for the use of the English language. But it is a mistake, and it is a mistake.

How beautiful all this would be—if we could all see the beauty of the world, the beauty of the stars, the beauty of the universe. How beautiful all this would be—if we could all see the beauty of the world, the beauty of the stars, the beauty of the universe.

Ex-Nixon aide on Watergate

by ELENA-MARIE KOSTER
Daily Associated Editor

Start with the end of the Nixon administration and look closely. What you see is generally agreed to be an unsalvageable and continuing time of American government.

A first hand observer of the time, Gerald L. Warren, shared his knowledge and opinion on the aftermath of Watergate in a panel discussion of journalism and history students Tuesday night.

Warren held the title of Deputy Press Secretary to the Presid...

California. The funding started here Jan. 3 and will continue through June 15, when the center will have to apply for funding for the new fiscal year.

The charge per child for Cal Poly students is based on a rather complex formula that considers number of family members and the family's gross monthly income.

"If the gross income for two people is under $600 a month, they would not have to pay," Danenberg said. Students might have to pay anywhere from one-cent to the maximum of 91 cents per hour. The added.

At the end of each month the center will report the number of children and hours they were cared for and the state will reimburse the center at $1.21 per child-hour. Danenberg said, and the total income should be about $12,500.

A drawback to the funding is that faculty and staff who work at the center do so for a third of the pay, Danenberg said. That is almost double the 24-cents they paid on the old 6% schedule but still lower than anywhere in the community," she explained when the state asked for the interim fee schedule also had to be accepted.

"Poly was one of about three schools in California that were able to have this arrangement for its children's center," Danenberg said.

Donations have kept the center going for the past four years, Danenberg said. The Associated Students Inc. has contributed money and done the bookkeeping, the School of Agriculture has provided food for the children, and students designed and built the outside play area.

"I don't know whether the parents will allow some parents to bring their children to the center more often," she said. The center is located for a total of 32 children from two to five years old. Children under two-and-a-half will only be accepted if they are already enrolled in a day care center.

Child Development majors which in the center as part of their required lab. Parents who have children at the center are required to contribute two hours of work per week in the center. As an alternative the parents may pay a $15 "all fee" for the quarter.

The goal, Danenberg said, is to teach a student's assistant and study aide in usually one adult in every five children.

Mason tickets selling

Over 300 more tickets for the scheduled Jan. 30 Dave Mason show were sold yesterday to push total ticket sales to about 3,000 as of 5 p.m. yesterday.

Steve Adams, program manager for Associated Students Inc., said ticket sales had been behind schedule but are "planning for a sellout, but we won't know more until Friday.

"It is much higher than we anticipated for three days of ticket sales," said Adams, and we have sold almost half of the tickets already."

The Mason show will be the first ASI concert to sell out before the show, according to Adams.

The capacity of the gym, Adams said, varies from 5,000 to 6,000 depending upon available folding chairs and the stage setup for the show.

The $5.50 Sunday night concert is $6 for students and staff in advance and $7 at the door.

Former Poly business dean lands position in Sacramento

Jan Reinecke, former Associated Dean of Cal Poly School of Business, was granted a one-year leave of absence from academic duty yesterday, following an appointment to a high-level post in Gov. Jerry Brown's administration Tuesday.

Reinecke, one of four women in all America's academic deans who are on leave today, was appointed chief of labor unions and research in the Department of Industrial Relations. She will replace Mayor O'Grady of San Francisco, who retired from the $2,178-o-year post.

Currently, the 50-year-old Dr. Reinecke is the deputy director and acting chief of the Industrial Relations Department.

In Reinecke joined the Cal Poly Business School as an economics instructor in 1971. She was promoted to Associate Dean of the school in 1974 and served until her first appointment to the Department of Industrial Relations last summer.

The three other women appointed either were promoted within their departments or had held related state posts. They are:

Priscilla G. Greene, 38, of Santa Monica, appointed director of conservation. Greene is an assistant research geologist at the University of California at Los Angeles Institute of Geophysics and Planetary Physics. Her new post pays $1,062 annual-

Rita Samuelson, 27, of Sacramento, appointed director of the Office of Alcoholism, a $9,904-a-year post.

Cecil Yuma, 61, of Sacramento, a former California Rural Legal Assistance attorney, appointed chief counsel and deputy director of the Employment Development. She had held the $7,178-a-year post on an acting basis.

DAILY SPORTS EDITOR

Amid all of the recent injuries that the Cal Poly wrestling team has incurred on the road trip, yesterday, they managed to win a dual meet against the Oregon State Beavers in a hard-fought battle.

The Cal Poly spikers will be up against tough competition today when they travel to Long Beach to compete in the UCBA Invitational this weekend.

New bike regulations now in effect
The California Highway Patrol has announced new bicycle regulations that took effect January 1. The bicycling student might be wise to note:

- Bicyclists must ride on a regular, permanent seat and occupy the same lane in which the vehicle is traveling.
- Bicyclists must stop at stop signs and red lights, and yield to pedestrians.
- Bicyclists must use hand signals when turning, stopping, or changing lanes.
- Bicyclists must not block the lane of traffic.
- Bicyclists must not ride more than two abreast.
- Bicyclists must not carry passengers on their bikes.

Ex-Nixon press secretary talks about Watergate impact on national morale, the press and politics

Warren said he does not believe a deal between Nixon and Ford for a pardon now is likely to materialize. When Warren mentioned that he was sure that Nixon would be an honest and upright man, he was asked how the White House changed him.

"I came out with a strong!" Warren added. "I was sure that Nixon would be an honest and upright man, but here I am."

In the audience question session, Warren was asked:

"Are you Deep Throat?"

"No," said Warren. "Deep Throat sounds a little too much like me."

A sports weekend by KEVIN SALLE

DAILY SPORTS EDITOR

Now is a time of sports limbo. Football is over (the last bowl has been played), and basketball and swimming are all in their infancy. Wins against basketball (both sexes) are really the only sports in full swing. So the time seems appropriate to see where seasons are or will be.

Speaking of wrestling and basketball, those two sports will be the main show Saturday night, as the Mustang hoops will host the Mustangs from San Luis Obispo this weekend. In fact, enthusiasm of the last sport was really kicked off after a rough road trip to do battle with the 16th ranked University of Oregon at 8 p.m. On Friday night at the same starting time Ernie Wheeler's basketball team opens up California Collegiate Athletic Association play against Cal State Los Angeles, if they are still over 300 and 1,000 in league.

Now, don't over-sleep because at 2 p.m. Saturday afternoon the wrestlers are back against another Northwest team. This time it's Portland University.

No sooner will the men be pushed off when our women's team has the dual meet against the Mustangs from UC Berkeley. Those women's cards finally come in handy. If you have one the game is free. On Sunday night, still in the P.E.R., the grapplers do battle with the Tigers of LSU to close out the weekend. No wonder Jack Haven has trouble keeping the books.

While the marathon is going on in the gym, a number of other Cal Poly teams are competing on the road. The volleyball team, probably getting more praise for the loss to Pepperdine, has the opportunity to visit the beautiful Santa Barbara for the UCBA Collegiate Invitational. The best of luck to Ken Preston's squad for they will need it.

Some tracksters head to the City for the Examiner Games on Friday. Some say Steve Miller to look for a sho-o-o-shoo-in for the CCAA championship.

Mary Stallard, who has been to Washington, D.C., to meet with Coach Felshba and do the New England Patriots, takes her women's hoops to play in the prestigious Bellland Arena against Fresno State in the Rose Bowl. That is Saturday at 8:15 p.m.

Newbie brokers now in effect
The California Highway Patrol has announced new bicycle regulations that took effect January 1. The bicycling student might be wise to note:

- Bicyclists must ride on a regular, permanent seat and occupy the same lane in which the vehicle is traveling. (It is still permissible to signal a right turn with the left hand and arm extended vertically.)
- Bicyclists must not be parked or left on a sidewalk in a manner that blocks pedestrian traffic.
- Bicyclists must not operate an automobile while riding a bicycle.
- Bicyclists must not operate more than two abreast.
- Bicyclists must wear a helmet if under 16 years of age.
- Bicyclists must not ride more than two abreast.
- Bicyclists must not carry passengers on their bikes.

Becky Puckett: All-around player

by SCOTT CRAVEN
Daily Stanford Writer

It's a good thing that the Cal Poly women's basketball team finished the season 10-13. If they hadn't, they might not have their leading scorer on the team. Becky Puckett, senior physical education major from Vacaville, is averaging 16 points and over 11 rebounds a game for the Mustangs. But if Poly hadn't received notice to play them from 7 P.M. to 9 P.M. last year, you might have found Puckett in her room instead of on the court.

We wouldn't let each other quit.
We would force each other to practice—Puckett

“I want to practice only one day as a freshman,” says Puckett. “But seven or nine at night was too late so I didn’t go practice. I went for a month as a sophomore but I just didn’t like the determination.”

Things changed for Puckett in her junior year. Practice was ended at 8 P.M. and her roommates were determined to make the team.

“We wouldn't let each other quit,” Puckett says of her roommates. “We would force each other to practice. If one didn’t quit, we would all keep going.”

Puckett did not quit and as a result she has led her team to a 14-3 record.

“I really like the team, we are more enthusiastic because we can win more than past seasons,” says Puckett. “Now I'm mad at myself for quitting those first two years because I've only grown in two years of playing time and it’s not that much.”

This is Puckett’s last year at Poly, and most likely the last she will play basketball.

“After this year I have two years in active duty for ROTC,” says Puckett. “I joined ROTC to get a feel of what it would be like, and I figured it would be good experience.”

ROTC isn’t the only thing Puckett got interested in because of a friend. Basketball also falls into that category.

“A friend in high school got me interested in basketball and the Mustangs,” says Puckett. “It’s the only thing I’ve only gotten in two years of playing time and it’s not that much.”

Cagers to open CCAA slate

There’s no where to go but up for the Mustangs because as they open their California Collegiate Athletic Association season Friday against Los Angeles State.

Last year Cal Poly could do no better than last place and Head Coach Ernie Wheeler blamed it on bad breaks.

“We lost two in overtime last year,” says Wheeler. “We just couldn’t get any breaks.”

This year the competition doesn’t look any easier for the Mustangs. When the team opens the season Friday against Los Angeles State, the CCAA consists of stiff competition in basketball.

“All the teams look tough this year,” says Wheeler. “The reason we open with LA State is because we played very good.

Wheeler will depend on playmaking guard Lewis Cohen and Bob Nicholson along with high scoring forwards Gerald Jones and Andre Keys to get the Mustangs in gear.

“We play well together, that’s one of our main strengths,” says Wheeler. “If we start playing like individuals we won’t play as well. We’re team oriented. There’s balanced scoring and everybody knows his job.”

“We’re inconsistent,” says Wheeler. “We have to play with the same intensity throughout the game. We’re playing better than last year.”

Well, they can’t do any worse. LA State invades the Mustang’s Gym tomorrow night at 8 P.M., with UC Riverside due in Saturday night to take on the Mustangs.

The Saturday night game will feature something new. Instead of forking out 75-cents for the game, you can save it for something better (like a mixed drink at a frat party). Just show your student ID and you’re in free.

A friend in high school got me interested in basketball and the Mustangs, says Puckett. “It’s the only thing I’ve only gotten in two years of playing time and it’s not that much.”
