Knudsen curdles Poly dairies' production

Cal Poly's Dairies were in the midst of a minor crisis over the question of who was going to buy the campus' excess raw milk went unanswered.

Wednesday, Carl May, director of Poly's dairy processing plant, was notified that trucks would no longer be provided to haul the campus' raw milk to the Knudsen processing plant in Santa Maria.

Knudsen, which had been buying 2,500 to 5,000 gallons of unprocessed milk a week, decided to stop the pick up because the campus' dairies are too far out of the way, Toone, department head of Poly's dairy and poultry science, said yesterday. "There are the only dairy north of Santa Maria selling milk to Knudsen, so Poly is just isolated, so we have to find a new market for our milk," Toone explained.

It is still in the process of trying to find a new buyer for the campus' excess milk, but Toone said yesterday he was unable to contact the trucking firm used by the other dairies.

The dairy processing plant on campus processes about half of the 900 gallons of raw milk produced daily by Poly's Foundation and Project Dairies.

The situation is getting critical," Toone admitted. "But there's not too many worrying. It will all work out—it always does. We've got a lot of friends in the dairy industry who won't let us down," Toone said. Among the options the department head is considering is processing all the milk on campus. He said there is no possibility of selling the milk to the other dairy institutions in the county.

However, May, the campus processing plant director, said yesterday the plant does not have the storage facilities or production capacity to take in all the milk produced at Poly.

Toone believes the Poly plant with minor alterations, can handle the 900 gallons of milk a day.

May said he has worked in the past to take in more of the campus' raw milk, but the university's policy has been that none of Poly's processed milk could be sold off campus. This policy was made to avoid competition with the local processing plants.

"The dairies in the area are good friends. We don't want to compete with them," Toone explained.

About a month ago, Poly was asked to join a dairy co-op with other milk producers in the Santa Maria area. If the campus dairies had joined the group, Poly milk would have been picked up by the co-op trucks and delivered to Knudsen along with the other dairies' milk.

In order to join, however, Poly would have had to commit all of its milk to the co-op, leaving the campus processing plant dry. This was impossible, Toone said.
Don't judge a book...

Brook's "As a dull and endless stride; Come, hear the woodland lies. How sweet his music on my life. There's more of wisdom in it."

I have just finished a British Lit midterm.

The downfall was mostly my fault, but partially that of my professor. He gave the class fair warning the test would be a prove that I should take a good chunk of our time. My extremely valuable time.

Author Kevin Falls is a senior journalism major and a Mustang Daily associate editor.

Without offending my instructor, I do have other classes that also require my attention. My American Government professor warns that his class not be taken lightly, as does my Advanced Copy Editor instructor. Not to mention this publication.

The Mustang Daily gets the biggest chunk of my time (for that is my bread and butter), while the rest of the courses receive an equal slice of my devotion.

What all this boils down to, is the irony of a College Education. I collected some examples of my academic frustration, while staring blankly at my mid-term.

Item: Last year I made Dean's List for first quarter, but this year I failed. Without offending my instructor, I do have other classes that also require my attention. My American Government professor warns that his class not be taken lightly, as does my Advanced Copy Editor instructor. Not to mention this publication.

College is an institution of higher learning. If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen. Cal Poly, love it or leave it. I've heard all from teachers, students and my devotional parents.

I don't question that college isn't tough. What I'm wondering is, will my education be measured accurately. I think most students would agree, a certain course or grade can damage the final grade. Average. It could even determine whether a job is landed.

In other words—Cal Poly, I'm a lot smarter than you think.

OUR READERS WRITE...

The Student Affairs Council is one of the most antagonistic organizations on campus. During this academic year, they have attempted to ban bicycle riding by the University core (but only during "specified hours," they hastened to add), remove the "Poly P* on the mountain behind the dorms, have pushed through a refrigerator proposal which, due to administrative reaction, may very well increase our financial burden and have most recently pushed Sierra Madre residents from their parking lot, causing a greater shortage in our lot. Many times in the past, SAC has complained about student apathy (despite the sometimes overwhelming input regarding their proposals), and that they have "nothing to do."

To restore to SAC and to all of Associated Students, Incorporated, for that matter, some validity, responsiveness and concern for the students they are SUP-PPOSED to representing, why not make ASI membership optional? Those in student government would know on a quarter-by-quarter basis if they were truly representing the students (or just merely going their way), since most would be willing to pay the relatively low $5 fee at registration to insure that the organization would continue to meet presents and future needs.

I feel that this idea is the most important that SAC could deal with this quarter. It would give us assurance that in the future, our elected officials would take the time to find out what our needs really is instead of just sitting back and accusing us of apathy.

The forecast calls for fair, but cool weather today and through the weekend. The high is expected to be in the 60's with the lows in the 50's and 40's. Northwesterly winds 10 to 30 miles per hour, will continue to blow through this afternoon.

Costly athletes

Editor

In reference to your May editorial, I believe that $40 athletes earns more money spent on them per person than any student! Poly’s honor on the playing field is more important than the quality of education which would surely be helped by the money spent on intercollegiate sports. I believe that all 40 athletes should ask a similar question—why should my feet pay for something I don’t want to pay for it? Money should be allocated more appropriately to places like the Health Center, the Administration Building and the visitor’s parking lot at the Administration Building. This past weekend I have seen both sprinkler systems on campus that are watering not only plants, but a good deal of asphalt too. These sprinklers are located at the end of Pacheco Way and in the visitor’s parking lot at the Administration Building. This may seem like an insignificance, amount of water to gripe about concerning the vast amount that, collectively, is used daily. However, it is essential that we make a concerted, conscientious effort to use water wisely.

Disputed ASI budget approved

by DEREK BROEMSKY
Daily Staff Writer

The 1977-78 Associated Student, Inc. budget was ap­proved by the Student Affairs Council (SAC) Wednesday night in a meeting rampant with confusion and flared temperaments.

The decision ends several months of debate in various committees on how the student fees will be spent. The total amount of money allocated was $813,578.

The three and one-half hour meeting saw several verbal spars between SAC Chairman Ray Davis and John Chauk, SAC representative from architecture and environmental design over procedure rules and amendment proposals.

Chauk proposed several amendments to the budget that Davis considered to be either out of order or irrelevant.

Chauk left the meeting room several times in disgust.

"I thought he was very discourteous to the body," said Davis. "John has come to us and told us that the only reason he is on SAC is so that he can cause trouble and register early."

Chauk was unavailable for comment.

Throughout the meeting Chauk made several proposals to amend the budget. Davis and other SAC members apparently felt they were not feasible.

The meeting was constantly delayed by the council's confusion over several of the proposed amendments. Eight proposals were made to amend the budget of which only one passed.

At one point Chauk made a proposal to take $400 out of the ASI officers fund and allocate it to the school of architecture and environmental design. The council defeated the proposal.

A decision on SAC bill 77 was postponed for one week as the council wanted more time to study the controversial bill. If passed the bill would—over a period of three years—eliminate all ASI subsidy of athletic scholarships.

Future Farmers: Annual rate of spring

More than 1,000 Future Farmers of America members arrived at Cal Poly Wednesday to attend the club's annual convention. This year marks the 49th year Cal Poly has hosted the event.

Coming here from all parts of the state, the FFA students will attend business sessions, special award programs, a banquet, select state farmer degree recipients and will elect new state officers.

Uniforms in blue jeans and shirt or a skirt and a blouse, and the ever-present dark blue FFA jacket, the group centered around Chumath Auditorium, where most events take place.

Cal Poly will sponsor 20 contests Saturday where livestock, ornamental horticulture, small engines, floristry, poultry and ag mechanics will be judged.

Top finishers in seven contests will go to national conventions starting on the third to meet application requirements. Winners from there will go to a World Contest, held this year in Europe.

Sleeping accommodations for members is provided by Cal Poly in the Agriculture Farm Shop, usually used to store large farm machinery. Students share beds and temperaments temporarily set up in the building.

Women members stay in local hotels.

Randy Greemline, a FFA member from Selma rooming in the farm shop, said, "It is not like home, but I can live with it."

"With at least 500 people getting up at the same time, the only hassle about it is trying to get to the bathroom."

Greemline said.

The students carried the fight to attend the convention by filling out speeches as many questions as the amount of money. Having at least a 3.5 grade point average and being active in the club.

A member must have record projects for two years, and starting on the third to meet application requirements.

Applications are then submitted to the state and about two per cent are chosen to attend. A member is allowed to attend only one convention.

You shouldn't have to change banks every time you change lifestyles.

Graduation is one time you change lifestyles. But it's certainly not the only time.

It happens when you move. It happens when you get married. It happens when you have children, take a new job, and so on.

And if your bank is Bank of America, you don't have to worry about changing banks every time it happens.

For starters, with over twice as many locations as any other California bank, we're usually close by if you're moving. It's easy to transfer your account to whichever branch is more convenient for you.

We also offer a wide range of checking and savings places to fit your changing needs. Like our All in One Checking Plan which gives you a variety of services in one simple package. When your application for BankAmerica® and Instant Cash is approved, you get unlimited checking with no minimum balance, personalized checks, our handy Check Guarantee Card, BankAmerican overdraft protection, and commission free BankAmerica Travelers Checks from our California branches— all for just $8 a month.

Chances are whatever changes you make in your life, you'll keep up. We have Consumer Information Reports to help you keep up.

Why not stop by and talk things over. We serve more Californians than any other bank— in school, and after. And we'd like to serve you.
Poly professors' feelings on Nixon interview

by CRAIG REEM
Daily Associate Editor

History Prof. Richard Nixon, perhaps the most disgraced man in American history, broke his three-year silence when Watergate in a nationally televised interview with David Frost on Wednesday night.

Now the controversy surrounding his vague answers to Frost's policy questions has raised the cry among professors that he didn't tell the country anything new.

Nixon surprised Culver in admitting that he had a lot to do with his own downfall.

"I suspect that there were those who felt Nixon was a victim of the press and Congress and thought he came off well," Culver said. "Others of us would feel we were short-changed. He didn't answer the questions people were waiting for at the moments."

Alamo Smith, history lecturer, said broader, more pertinent questions could have been asked Nixon, explaining, "The coverage was only part of all. Watergate was only part of illegal activities."

"It was surprising," Smith related. "He was much more low-key and non-professional than I had remembered him. He was less slick."

Herman Voelu, history professor: "He (Nixon) was somewhat sympathetic. But really, he didn't say anything new. He said he wasn't actually involved. He was the same old Nixon."

Nixon seemed unable "to distinguish what is honest or dishonest to the American people," Barnes said Nixon has a past record of evoking public sympathy that might have carried over to the interview. "He got a wave of emotion from the American people," Barnes said.

"Nixon's a pathetic person," Barnes concluded, adding that "Frost revealed him as being a criminal."

The interview's surprise: "just the revelation that he (Nixon) is a broken man. His drift in answering questions gets a wave of emotion from the American people," Barnes said Nixon has a past record of evoking public sympathy that might have carried over to the interview. "He got a wave of emotion from the American people," Barnes said.

Poly women's softball team heads into regionals

by SCOTT CRAVEN
Daily Sports Editor

The Cal Poly women's softball team got the luck of the draw for this weekend's regional tournament in Huntington Beach. Unfortunately, it was all bad.

The Mustangs drew Nevada-Reno, a powerhouse on the diamond. It's 20-3 record completely overshadows the Mustangs' losing 10 mark.

But hope springs eternal in Poly coach Valerie Filice. "We can beat anybody in this tournament," said Filice. "Defense will decide the team that goes to Omaha."

Omaha is the site of the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women national tournament on May 28-29. The winner of this weekend's regionals will represent the west in the championships.

Reaching for the Save is Cal Poly's Lindon Crow. He was unsuccessful though and the opponents picked up the point. Crow has not had an unsuccessful season as he and teammates Rick Hauser and Steve Bartlett were named to the All-CCVC team.

Barlett was chosen Most Valuable Player in the league. The Mustangs will lay their conference title on the line when they go into the California Bas Championships. (Daily photo by Jim Stivers)

Championship time is also arriving for the women's track. The Mustangs are sending two participants to the Association of Intercollegiates Athletics for Women Track and Field Championships held on May 18-21.

Maggie Keys and Jani Rouda, who have run outstandingly all season, have qualified for the nationals in the distance events. The championships will cap off a fine season for the two distance runners.

The season has not been as fine for the rest of the team. Poly ended their season April 50 with a seventh-place finish in the Southern California

Women's track and Field Championships. The Mustangs were up against stiff competition in the events.

UCLA was no surprise as they took the top spot with 183 points. 90 more points than runner-up Long Beach State, who finished third. Third was occupied by California State Northridge and San Diego State.

Finishing behind the Mustangs were UC-Santa Barbara, Cal State Northridge, Occidental and Pomona-Pitzer. Keys and Rouda combined for most of Poly's points in the championship.
West Coast Relays next for tracksters

With strength in several different events giving Poly’s track team a fighting chance, Coach Steve Miller is hopeful his team can defend the acknowledge title in the battle for the College Division title here at the West Coast Relays in Fresno.

The Mustangs have entered all events and are strong in the mile and two-mile. Coach Miller is confident his team can capture the team title.

Two Mustangs have made the top 10 in their events this week-Mike Bartlett to 100-meter hurdles and Wally Long, Lloyd, Eike Williams and Pretzke to the 880-yard relay. With these individuals, the Mustangs are strong enough to win the title.

Garden City will be vying with six other teams in the 1,000-yard relay. The only thing the GCVC has to do is beat itself to capture the title.

The Mustangs will be looking to defend their title from the CCVC. Joining it is Northridge and UC Riverside.

Cal Poly recorded a season’s best time of 10:04.1 in placing second in the mile relay last week at the San Jose Invitational. Poly will use the same personnel this week—Mike Bartlett to Jeff Weather to Bart Williams to Wally Lloyd.

Poly’s 440-yard relay also figures to challenge for the event title. With Wally Long, Lloyd, Eike Williams and Pretzke running the relays last week, the Mustangs ran a 48.8 for 440 meters for the Mustangs best showing of the season.

Rexmont will be paired by sophomore Jim Warrick (15-6) in the 1,000-yard high hurdles. Freshmen Pete Godines and Carey Miller with times of 15.2 over the 110-meter hurdles will be a factor in the event.

The Mustangs will be vying with six other teams in the 5,000 meter, in the 100-yard high hurdles.

Long and Williams with best marks of 10.5 and 10.6, respectively, for 100 meters, will be the Mustang Captains in the 100-yard dash.

Cal Poly, which has a season’s best time of 10.04.1 for the event, will be represented in the distance medley relay by Bartels,440, Jeff Menneer (880), Loren Rings (1,100) and Kevin Eaton (mile).

These entries in the field events will be vying to score points for Cal Poly toward the team championship.
