Buscando el Paradero

by SUNKI BRATAVI

Paradise, like perfection, is something one strives for, but in reality one never really achieves. Richard Abbott thought he had found his in Mexico a few years back, only to discover later it was crawling with plateaues.

"Dreams are good, if you keep them as such, but when I tried to force mine into reality it didn't work out," Abbott said.

Abbott, who just completed his studies at Cal Poly in Journalism, is the creator of the photographic exhibit now on display in the main foyer of the university library.

The exhibit, Abbott's senior project, is entitled "Buscando el Paradero" and consists of photographs that he has taken during his travels.

"I've travelled extensively through Mexico, but I just passed through these other places," Abbott said.

The other places being Cuba, Venezuela, Jamaica, Curacao, Portugal, Spain, and the Canary Islands.

"The most exciting thing I found in Mexico was reality," he said.

Though double concentrations are enough to keep anyone busy, Abbott held three concentrations within the journalism major: photojournalism, public relations and advertising. All three were incorporated into his senior project.

"It seemed like a good idea at the time and I had wanted to do it for a long time, but never had the motivation," Abbott said.

Undecided for a short time as to where to display his exhibit, Abbott chose the library.

"In a week's time more people go through the library than in the Art Center, which was the original place I wanted to exhibit, but they were too indecisive and said if at all it would be in August," the title "Buscando el Paradero" means "Looking for Paradise" and the exhibit is, what Abbott terms, a "bilingual exhibit" with all titles in English and Spanish.

Abbott felt that his exhibit would do good in covering up the temporary walls that are hiding the construction of an elevator.

The 56 photographs on exhibit are not for sale, though Abbott indicated that possibly later on he might sell a few.

While most people were looking for post-graduation employment Abbott was too busy working on his project.

But instead of planning on a job hunt he wants to go sailing...job hunting comes tomorrow.

The women’s place is in the Senate, when some women have found a place. One-sixth of the Presidential appointments in the Cabinet, staff Cabinet, federal agency and White House staff level have been women.

It may be all a matter of where you look: Carter looked hard and long in the beginning, then announced to the press that it was difficult to find a qualified woman. In his search he found them, but not until he learned where to look.

You see, qualified women don’t work where qualified men do. For example the women lawyers in Carter’s administration come from government, academic or public-interest law where most male lawyers come from corporate or private law firms. It is the younger women who has chosen the career route in life. They are newer in the field and therefore don’t have as much experience as the men they compete with. The women have a different experience because all opportunities aren’t as open to women.

The women in Carter’s administration generally are 10 years younger than, their male counterparts. The women in Carter’s cabinet generally are 10 years younger than, their male counterparts. It is the younger women who has chosen the career route in life. They are newer in the field and therefore don’t have as much experience as the men they compete with.

Women in high places

The T-shirt read: “A woman’s place is in the Senate, and in the White House.”

One woman said: “There’s a lie missing. It should say: ‘...and in the White House.”

Perhaps she hadn’t heard, perhaps the Carter Administration in the White House is where the women are, or at least around.

The women’s movement had no luck placing a woman in the Senate, though there are some women (unofficially) at Representatives. Yet Carter’s administration has made progress in terms of a woman’s political place. A close look at Carter’s administration on the middle management level shows where some women have found a place. One-sixth of the Presidential appointments at the Cabinet, staff Cabinet, federal agency and White House staff level have been women.

The women in Carter’s administration come from government, academic or public-interest law where most male lawyers come from corporate or private law firms.

The women may have the same lucrative legal career options that their male peers have had.

There is also speculation that the first women nominee to the Supreme Court may be a young women lawyer from the Carter Administration.

Does this mean a new voice in the American government? Probably not. We’re all individuals and think different thoughts, it’s just that some of us are women and some of us are men.
Library complaint heard by Brown

A five member student delegation including former ASI President Ole Meland called the office of Gov. Edmund Brown last week, presenting him with a book containing two letters by three letters and containing more than 7,000 student signatures in support of a new library.

The presentation of the 44-page book titled “Look, Governor” came at the final stop in an effort urging Governor Brown to approve the $11.5 million library expenditure item added to the Governor’s budget by the State Assembly and Senate.

Accompanying Meland in the delegation were Ted Harting, John Miller, program board member; Ray Davis, former ASI Vice-President; and Monica Alguar.

Accepting for the Governor was his Appointments Secretary, David Rosenburg, a Cal Poly Journalism alumnus.

If approved, the new library would be located on campus at a site now occupied by deteriorating WWII training barracks, while Drayer Library, the subject of related Governor’s name at the final step in an effort urging Secretary, David Rosenburg, a Cal Poly Journalism alumnus, to sign petitions in support of a new library.

A decision from the Governor was expected to come later this week.

Madame Joanne—In search of your future

by BEVERLY LANGLOIS
Special to Mustang
A huge hand advertising “Palmist” in neon letters beckons Madame Joanna’s shop in Pismo Beach. What gives the loose passerby who sports under the open palm?

Madame Joanna does not conjure up the spooky witch stories children whisper in the dark. But her ancestors—early gypsy fortune tellers—lends a mysterious air, until one discovers she was born and raised in Long Beach.

Joanne comes from a long line of seers—her mother was a psychic and her grandmother before her. Of her childhood she says, “My grandmother was the one who told my powers around her. I had trouble concentrating in school as a child because I would get visions that would distract me.”

Madame said she began giving readings when she was eight or nine years old.

Madame moved to Pismo Beach in 1952 and has been the area since.

I have customers who have been consulting me for 20 or 30 years, whenever they pass through the area, or if they need advice on a difficult decision or change they are anticipating.”

Madame sold a reading she gave recently. A woman came in to get a reading, accompanied by her gentleman friend. Although the reading was for the woman, the man insisted on learning, something that Madame does not approve of, since all of her sessions are strictly confidential. The woman felt herself to be very much in love with the man, and wanted to know what the future held in store for their relationship. Madame Joanne sold her that her companion was uneasy (“right in front of him, but what could I do?” she said) and would be institutionalised soon. Sure enough, Madame said, she returned three weeks later, reporting that her friend had indeed had a nervous breakdown, and was now in an institution.

“For some people think it’s a joke, they come here to make fun and prove something,” she said softly, “but they always change their minds when I tell them things about their past that no one but themselves could know.”

“It is a serious business,” she assures. “Psychics are now being used in scientific research and police investigations. People are beginning to see what can be done with psychic powers.”

Madame Joanne’s services include palm readings, tarot cards, psychic readings, love spells, and crystal ball readings.

She charges $10 for a complete palm reading, or psychic reading or $25 for a combination of the three. Tarot card readings go for $10 to $20 and the crystal ball costs $5 to $10.

Wheels spinning for campus groups

by MICHAEL EWEN
Mustang Staff Writer

Am Cal Poly affiliated group, club or organization needing transportation need go no further than the Transportation Services Department on campus.

Located adjacent to Poly Canyon Road, Transportation Services maintains over 250 different vehicles ranging in size from heavy-duty tractor and farm machinery to the smaller buses and automobiles which can be used for transporting personnel on field trips or on overnight excursions. But even with this large assortment, it usually takes a month or two before a group can reserve a specific vehicle.

The department has seven permanent staff members: five mechanics, one driver and a secretary. MacDonald said there are seven student assistants who work part-time within the department assisting the mechanics, helping with office work and driving the larger vehicles.

"There is really never a dull moment around here," MacDonald said between telephone interruptions. "The mechanics work eight-hours a day, six days a week, keeping your club or organization from a field trip is a lack of transportation, give us a call."

A member of the Electrical and Electrical Engineering Department, Carson received the award: "For his use of innovative teaching methods and publications in his classes." Carson has authored three textbooks.

Boarser, an architecture teacher, is one of 68 men designated by the Building and Research Advisory Board of the National Academy of Sciences as "Men of the Quarter Century."

The award, putting Harger in the same class as notables like Frank Lloyd Wright, honors the Cal Poly teacher's many contributions— including a position as chief planner for the first Levittown, a planned community outside New York City.

Ruggles has been named as a contributing editor to "Printing Impressions" magazine, largest of its kind in the printing, packaging and publishing industries.

A member of Cal Poly's Graphic Communications Department, Ruggles will write a monthly column called "Estimating Clinic" for the national trade magazine. His first column will be published in August.

The Play at the local playhouse downtown has another local feature about it for this months play—the director is Cal Poly student Mark McDougall, a graphic communications major whose hometown is San Luis Obispo.

McDougall is directing The Owl and The Pussycat by Bill Manhoff. The success of the play made the San Luis Obispo Little Theatre Inc. decide to extend the run one more weekend. It will be playing tonight, Friday and Saturday.

McDougall explained the play: “The play opens when Doris storms into Felix’s apartment. He’s been watching through binoculars and sees her leaving tracks in her apartment. She winds up staying the night and Felix, a compulsive intellectual, falls in love with his friendly neighborhood prostitute. The play follows how they work out their lives and loves with one another.”

This weekends production will feature Vicki Roland as Doris and J. Francis Walsh as Felix. McDougall started with the little theatre group when he was fifteen-years-old.

His theatre interest never has lead him to Cal Poly. “It takes a while to become one of the group in any theater," McDougall said.

Middle-age re-entry program

by GAIL STIEGER

Special to Mustang

Cal Poly’s “Re-entry Achievement Program” for older students is deliberately low-key, according to the college re-entry program is being offered in the fall and spring quarters. The program is going year-round.

“Primary initial concern” among re-entry students is lack of academic competition from the majority of younger one’s. Older students are younger students as “sophomores, but with new knowledge,” one student, who was involved with REAP, says. REAP tried to train re-entry students to let them obtain classroom benefits from their non-academic experiences.

Attempts to keep REAP discussion and counseling groups going year-round have failed, Howard says.

“Cal Poly is a friendly place. Students went home over Christmas and felt comfortable here within a short time. They just haven’t been a demand.”

Individual older students having adjustment problems were encouraged to see Dr. Howard in her office, Administration Building Room 208, she says.

This quarter, try something impossible.

Students at Cal Poly this quarter are being urged to try something impossible. Many young men and women say they are going to college for the challenge.

But it’s tough to test yourself and find out what you can do just by taking quizzes and finals.

Add Army ROTC to your program and you’ll automatically challenge both your physical and mental skills.

Unlike strictly academic subjects, Army ROTC will teach you to think on your feet. To make important decisions quickly. And it will help you to develop your confidence and stamina.

One quarter at a time.

In short, you can prepare yourself to handle the impossible, on campus or off.

Fleas, leave me alone

THOMAS R. LA HUE

The warm weather creates an inviting atmosphere for fleas, those tiny, wingless, dark brown insects that are natural parasites on humans. One year, the females usually do it and both types will feed. Adult fleas may live up to 100 days, found on cats, dogs and other types will feed on humans.

Besides being a discomfort to the animal, the presence of fleas can cause anemia in younger animals serious enough to be life threatening.

The eggs hatch into larvae and the animal should be kept clean and flea control is necessary. Sprays, dips, collars, tags and powders are available. People interested in gardening, the male image and estate planning may have more in common than they think. Cal Poly Extension is offering courses for all of them this weekend on Poly's campus.

"Gardening With Children" is a workshop for early education teachers. Daniel Lasauskas, a member of Poly's Ornamental Horticulture Department, will lead the workshop. He said it will examine basic gardening techniques for teaching young children.

The workshop will include discussion of class projects, supplies and equipment needed for beginning gardeners as well as basic horticulture skills.

Participants in the course receive one and one half units of school credit. The class will meet Friday and Saturday from 8 a.m. to 4 o'clock in Lab B of the Ornamental Horticulture Unit, with a lunch break from noon to 1 p.m. Fees are $55 for the credit-fee class.

Ideal masculine emotions and behavior are discussion topics for "Examining the Male Image," to be taught by Robert Firth and Bo Cooper. The class meets Friday at 7 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in Business Administration and Education Building room 204.

The course will provide men and women an opportunity to explore stereotyped male roles—how they are learned, maintained and how to better understand their nature. Cooper and Firth hope participants will become aware of the alternatives open to them and understand the consequences of their choice.

Fee for the course is $22.

A practical approach to understanding an estate is instructor Richard Raouillat's definition of "Estate Planning Under Tax Reform Act," scheduled for Friday at 7 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Raouillat, an attorney, said he will review the Tax Reform Act of 1976, discuss tax principles, title of property, wills and probate.

Also planned are presentations by Frank Sheahan, a certified life underwriter; Herb Hudspeth of Bank of America and Harold Mess, an inheritance tax referee.
