Deep sea fishing catching

by JANE KRISOTEMER

For those who can drag yourselves out of bed at 5 a.m., here's a sport made for you—deep sea fishing. You can take a fishing boat out from Morro Bay or Avila Beach piers and probably catch the limit.

Port San Luis Sport Fishing in Avila Beach has been leaving everyday at 7 a.m. The Marauder, Cheyenne and Diablo leave down the coast to Port San (just north of Vandenberg Air Force Base) where the fish mainly for rock fish. The 60-Member asked Tuesday carrying about 40 people on board including the skipper and four deck hands. After cutting through the chilly water for over an hour the ramps dropped and a voice over the P. A. system boomed: "O.K. gang, let your lines down about 20 lbs. The fish are thick as cement right ten meters." The voice, belonging to Al Chapman, the owner of the Cheyenne, had several instances as to where to find fish. Birds on the surface of the water imply fish below but that isn't necessarily the case. Cheyenne's way of locating them is "fish finder." These machines, using radar, spots the fish and records it on the paper. The "fish finder" is responsible for keeping the boat moving during the trip in search of fish. It also shares the glory for the full bag at the end of the day.

Men, women and children, experienced and non-experienced use the same fishing pole. Under gray skies, the deck hands moved quickly on deck tossing baits to attract fish. Untangling lines and helping with hard to remove hooks. With the boat carrying just over half its capacity the deck hands had more time to help the Anglers or just stop and talk with them.

For the past few weeks the fish have been plentiful but smaller than usual. The conditions of deep sea fishing change often—wind, rain, types and sizes of fish and weather are all variable, says Chapman.

"These fish are smaller than the ones I usually get but I still like it once you get into the fun of it," said a vacationer from Bakersfield.

Cost for a day's fishing with Port San Luis Sport Fishing ranges from $15 to $20 depending on whether you use your own or rental equipment and how many times you lose your lure.

A couple of things to remember if you are planning a trip deep sea fishing. Dress warmly—it's cold and the sun protection won't come out today. And just to be safe you might want to bring along a few dramamine pills. Chapman says 20 per cent of the people get sick on each boat. This reporter can attest to that.

Wine savored for those of age

To spend your summer afternoon in some beautiful country—without good company, try visiting one of eight wineries along the coast on Highway 101.

They are located in a hundred-mile stretch from Paso Robles to the Santa Ynez Valley. There are almost 10,000 acres in this area, made up of about 30 different vineyards. From north to south the wineries are Hoffman Mountain Ranch, Inkhouse, Casa Real, Paso Robles on Adelaida Road, York Mountain, Pennes and Rotta Wineries, west of Templeton on Hwy 46, Rancho Sisquer, south of Santa Maria on Hwy 154, Los Alamos Winery, west of Los Alamos on Hwy 155, Firestone Winery, north of Santa Maria near Goleta, Olive Loce on Hwy 154 and Santa Barbara Winery near Santa Barbara.

You don't have to be a connoisseur of good wines to enjoy such a peaceful experience, the only thing required is an interest in learning about this fast-growing wine.

What exactly is wine? The answer has many forms, for wine is something different to each individual depending on his character and his environment.

The poet may metaphorically describe wine as a bottle of sunshine; the gourmet may use wine as a gratification for body and soul; the mystic may claim that wine is a gift from Heaven bestowed upon this corrupt world; and the pragmatist may see wine as simply the fermented juices of grapes. There is truth in all such answers because wine is truly many things to many people.

To David Hoffman, part owner of Hoffman Mountain Ranch, wine is something very special: "We take special care in making our wines," said Hoffman. "And I personally feel they are one of the best."

Beginners at wine tasting may find it impossible to distinguish between a good wine and bad wines. But the most important thing to remember is that a good wine is one that appeals to you.

Here are a few tips to help the novice:

Because sugar tends to restrict your taste efficiency, you should always taste dry wines before sweet.

Healthy wines are clear and lively. (Colors do vary with the grapes used, the region of origin and the age of the wine.) But both white and rose wines should be quite clear. Usually the aroma gives a clue as to the type of the bouquet is pleasing to you, the taste must often is too.

Sample wines with a group of friends. In this way you are exposed to others' experiences and opinions.

The Central California wine country includes some such as Cardonary, Pinot Noir, Cabernet Sauvignon, Zinfandel, Chenin Blanc, and Grenache Rose.

Pet's need care while vacationing

There are times when you may want to take your faithful companion (dog or cat) on an outing. Whether to the beach or the mountains, you must consider the animal's well being when traveling that must be exercised.

One common problem, especially in animals unaccustomed to traveling, is motion sickness. The symptoms include excessive salivation and vomiting. One solution is to give him an antinauseant. These are available through your veterinarian. An alternative solution would be to use anti-motion sickness drugs such as Dramamine. It gives excellent control of motion sickness in dogs when administered 30 minutes before traveling, in an oral dose of 2 mg. per pound of body weight.

The best solution for preventing motion sickness is to get your pet accustomed to car travel by taking a short trip at a time preferably. Ideally, start when the animal is young. Let him go out in the car when parked as well as going on a short journey. You can do this at least 8 hrs., but give the animal plenty of time to return. Return after short trips for both you and your pet before a long trip and at intervals during the trip.

Heat stroke can occur when an animal is left in a car on a very hot day. The heat builds up over 60° F. inside a parked, poorly ventilated car can exceeded 107° F. on a relatively mild 70° F. day.

Heat stroke can also occur when animals are suddenly transported to a hot climate to which they have not been acclimated.

Young animals, fat animals, short haired dogs and older animals are more susceptible to heat stroke. The condition is aggravated by lack of water. Clipping a long haired dog will not prevent heat stroke.

Symptoms of heat stroke include; increased pulse rate, reddened gums, dullness, and an anxious or staring expression. The animal's temperature for only a very short time before suffering brain damage or even death.

The first step in treatment of heat stroke is to cool the animal by hosing it with cold water, immersing in cold water or applying ice packs over all its body with special attention to the head and chest.

Then get the animal to a veterinarian to be examined and to continue and soap and cool down. If this is impossible, the temperature should be checked frequently over the next 24 hours. High temperatures often recur after the initial signs of improvement.

If your pet is in a hot car with you on a warm day, carry water with you and give it small amounts frequently. If the animal must be left inside the car, leave the windows open in the shade and leave plenty of water.

Summer busy for ASI

The decrease in men's athletic funds from $35 thousand to $29 thousand will not deter from the strong athletic program at Cal Poly, according to newly elected ASI President Paul Curtis.

The women's and men's athletic boards have signed a two-year contract with ASI which entitles scholarship funds to come out of each department in the form of gate receipts. Curtis said, "Cal Poly has a very strong athletic program for the amount of money it receives," Curtis said. "I feel, and the athletic boards feel, that they can make it."

This summer, ASI also is trying to instigate a legal aid program on campus. ASI also hopes to begin preparations for a teacher evaluation program which could be initiated in 1978. Students will evaluate their teachers and the results will be announced publicly.

The Coon Creek hike may be particularly appealing to photographers because of the scenery. Maps of the various trails are available at the park ranger station for hikers wishing to venture out on their own. Four moderately difficult trails, such as Coon Creek, Idyl Creek and Hazard Creek, wind through the wooded areas of the park. Ridge Trail, a moderately difficult hike, runs along the Coastal dunes.

More difficult hikes are the Oates Peak and Valencia Park trails, which top the mountains and run along the ridge. Valencia Peak hikers can enjoy a view of almost 100 miles.

A calendar of daily hikes and other activities at the park is available at the museum.

Chicago Tracksters attend camp

Twenty-two Chicago and high school students attending Poly for 12 days as they attend the Cal Poly War Beach Track Camp. The camp, brainchild of Poly's track and field coach Steve Miller, will run through Saturday. It is to provide instruction for and an awareness of Cal Poly, according to Miller.

"The camp," said Miller, a coach in Chicago, is geared to provide instruction by both actual training and a nightly film session." In addition to the lab training, the students participated in a track meet at Hancock College and see another one scheduled Thursday at Santa Barbara City College.
