Next week is a week of music for San Luis Obispo. The Mozart Festival, providing music of many composers but mostly Mozart, begins with the arrival of about eighty musicians Sunday. Concerts begin on Tuesday and last through a Sunday morning. Many of the performances will occur on campus. Cal Poly is invited at a special student discount. The schedule of the festival replaces the regular "94 on four" column of events on page four. To make your concert going easier Sumner Manson has devoted this issue to dealing with facts surrounding the Mozart Festival. Concerts, concerts and a host of interesting people will be available next week for those who wish to partake.

Reflections on the sounds of a festival in the making

If you are worried about what to do and where to go anyway. The Summer Mustang, which opens next week, is the perfect choice for the inexperienced but acquisitive young music fan. You'll be surrounded by people who not only know the do's and dont's of concert going. But also know the ins and outs of the scene. So you won't have to worry about looking smart and fitting in. You'll have a "grand" time.

More on manners (continued from page 1)

Since the Mount Pleasant originated in 1971, it has attracted music lovers from all over the state. Attracting them is the adventurous writer's work has been extremely knowledgeable about music.

News Briefs

The new admission system goes into effect this fall, when applicants who are freshmen and have grade point averages will be more highly ranked than those who Poly admits as transfers. The new system, which takes into account the number of courses taken and the number of units taken, is designed to give more weight to the quality of the student's academic performance.

The Board of Trustees for California State University and Polytechnic approved schematic drawings for the renovation of the 1971 Stadium. The project will be completed this fall, when new student housing will be available.

Poly faculty member Howard C. Brown, former head of the Horticulture department and now Dean of Horticulture and Natural Resources, has been honored as an outstanding horticulture instructor. Brown received the L. C. Chadwick Award from the American Association of Nurserymen during his recent sabbatical. The Poly graduate, who has been on the faculty since 1946, is credited with building the Horticulture department from about 20 student majors to over 700.

MID STATE ELECTRONICS
We have been serving the needs of Cal Poly for almost 34 years. The store has grown during that time and we have said for years that we handle more parts to repair, build or rebuild anything electronic than any store between San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Mid-State carries a complete line of tools for the electronic man. Test tables? We have them. Sam's Books?
We have them. We also have two free tube-checkers.

The electronic specialist can fill all his needs at Mid-State Electronics.
