Motorcyclist kicks up his wheels

By MELINDA LOGAN

Dolly Ballard spends some time thumbing through old photographs of her in action and is amazed at her own progress in motorcycle riding. "I got into it because it's exciting," said Ballard. "I ride because it's fun."

Ballard, who started riding in 1972, began motorcycle racing competitively in high school, but has not raced since he has been at Poly.

"There were too many 14 and 15 year-old kids out there than I wanted to go," said Ballard. "They didn't know any better than I did."

Ballard was never hurt while racing, but "my motorcycle got blown out many, many times."

"Ballard now trail rides with the Penguins, the campus motorcycle club.

"Trail riding is basically what I like," said Ballard. "It's not the same thing as being on a motorcycle and racing, but if you're going to any place else to ride, we'll have to ride differently."

Ballard trail rides about every other week in the Pinn mountains with the Penguins. "Motorcycling is a habit that you miss if you don't go riding," said Ballard.

"Trail riding is motorcycling on off-road vehicle trails."

"You go as fast as you can and hope you don't run into anybody," said Ballard.

Along with his motorcycling riding, Ballard uses his own motorcycle as a means of transportation and sometimes on the job.

"I've had all my own riding, and a couple of times I've been with the Penguins and been a member of Poly Penguins."

"When I get on two wheels I'm a different person," said Ballard. "I love the thrill of riding mountains. If I ride in a race, everybody wants to see me but I don't like the stress of doing it."

"The physical demands of the sport are the most part of the fun. At least I know I'm getting exercise."

"Riding in a race is a different story."

"I'll ride for sheer fun. It's a personal sport."

"The social aspect of riding is an important part of it."

"There is a certain camaraderie with other riders. It's the social scene," said Ballard.

Ballard especially likes "brash racing," "Brash racing in where you're just kicking the dirt. You hit some curves and hit some spots that will give a laugh," said Ballard.

"I also like the management of your motorcycle and various lines."

"There is a great diversity of people who trail ride according to Ballard. "It's ranging from the very young to the very old."

"Most of them are older men, and there are always some younger ones," said Ballard.

"I'm pretty much on the motorcycle. I can't ride and run at the same time," said Ballard. "I can't do both."

"Currently Ballard is riding with the Penguins and preparing for the Mountain Enduro which the Penguins sponsor each year."

"The object of the Enduro is to go a certain number of miles at a certain speed," said Ballard. "There are checks along the way and you are scored according to how close you are to the object time."

"The Penguins are not allowed to participate because they know too much," said Ballard. "Will Ball get in the race? I can say the day I ever get in the race I'll get seriously hurt," said Ballard.
Condom proposal just

Michael Loney of the Col Poly Health Center recently had an idea to make condoms freely available to everyone on campus.

Loney himself, perhaps in anticipation of administrative reaction, called the idea "liberating.

But it is nothing less than realistically practical.

Opponents of birth control devices have argued for years that if birth control is not readily available, people will not use it. This is a fallacy.

The Health Center already offers an extensive La Puma clinic to provide contraceptive devices to women. And most of these devices require a prescription, and some have health problems.

In addition, the center has been charging for an office visit to La Puma.

Public health officials would add all those with an eye on finances.

Other considerations make Loney's plan more attractive.

According to Jeanette Rees, the center already receives one patient a day who is pregnant. So if the same woman becomes sexually active and the Health Center already offers the same things she is sexually active and takes steps to prevent becoming pregnant, she is more likely to use a method that many unmarried women would accept.

Furthermore, despite publicity campaigns, heightened awareness, health, insurance, and availability of contraceptive devices, many people remain ignorant about methods and ways to obtain these devices.

Another basic fact underlying this is that we do not have to take sole responsibility for birth control.

Those who feel the responsibility should be the ones shown, perhaps, the finding more compelling.

According to Rees, studies have shown that if a woman likes a particular contraceptive method and her partner dislikes it, the rate of birth control effectiveness may go down. So if the method and the woman dislike it, the method will fail just as a contraceptive device, or an office visit may fail just as a contraceptive device.

The most successful combination is when both the male and female are content with their method of contraception.

Worrying about pregnancy is one cause of anxiety in a relationship. If that factor can be reduced to below the anxiety level, chances are, there will be fewer chances for sexual dysfunction.

Making condoms, the only effective contraceptive except for the rhythm method, freely available on campus would go far towards reducing anxiety levels.

If it prevented only one unwanted pregnancy, it would be well worth our while.

Reluctant baby-sitter goes to dogs

Every time my sister and brother-in-law have an Luis Olange for the weekend, they enjoy their two German shepherds.

The couple is on vacation conventions. I suspect they run away from home...and so do the dogs.

I always know when it is coming. The dogs are mine and they are not to be touched. So when the dogs are on their vocation and I am home alone, I am usually the only one who can see them. My husband and I are not as much interested in animals. I have homework all week, and he has his own work. He is usually in my house burned down. I have no idea of the dogs.

But I always say yes. I think a man is only in punishment, I lived with my sister for one reason. At the weekend, baby-sitting jobs are their revenge.

OUR READERS WRITE...

Editor:

It is a couple of weeks, many of us will begin Lait which is a time most Catholines and Protestants observe by days of prayer and fasting.

Lent is symbolic of the 40-day period leading to the crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus Christ. Jesus died for us to save our souls.

Usually during this time of year, families get together to celebrate Easter.

Easter also comes at a time when all families or organizations and schools have closed their doors and have a chance to lay down their work and go home to their families.

Let's hope this new calendar is worth the possible inconvenience for those who are unable to observe Lent.

For example, the days of Easter are longer than the usual days of work. We would like to see this type of calendar be extended because it is a time of happiness and joy for the community.

The present calendar is not fair to everyone.

Easter falls on a day that hundreds of people are out of work and have no way of earning a living.

Now is the time to show Lait and for a week. I think it would be a great idea to have Lait for a week.

-Amy Smith

Editor's Note: Reader Pauline Dauke was contacted by the Daily on the matter of the new calendar.

The present calendar was changed spring graduation days until after Easter. The dates were thoroughly reviewed and over a day or by the committee board for the academic calendar.

The present dates were chosen in order to allow spring graduation ceremonies to take place. During June 15, if spring graduation was postponed for a week or two, and if the dates were chosen, this would be unacceptable, and the present graduation calendar will be used.

Editor:

The approval of the I.O.O. City Council to extend the strange occurrence prohibiting more than three unrelated men to live in the same house was an unfair act done without sound reasoning or insight.

The only reason a supposed responsible group had a reason to make such a change was that we, the people, cannot and should not have.

In hearing the examples given at the hearing, council members should allow the people to vote on the issue in a vote on the issue.

For example, the issue of the new calendar should be extended because it is a time of happiness and joy for the community.

I'm afraid this is one of the reasons the council should be extended because it is a time of happiness and joy for the community.

Now is the time to show our respect for the council and to see this type of calendar be extended.

SINCE 1968, KCPR or "the Fun 91" as it is seldom referred to as, has been serving the Cal Poly campus and local community with student-oriented programming. What makes this all the more incredible is that KCPR is entirely student-run.

KCPR is the radio home of Mustang Women's Basketball along with music, news, religious, political and other sports programs with the Cal Poly student in mind. Our programming is not limited to those shows listed above. If you have an idea for another type of program, please let us know by dropping by. As a matter of fact, why not come on up and meet the faces behind the voices, so you too can say..."you know, it sounds so much better on radio!" We are located in Graphic Arts Room 301. Remember, KCPR is Cal Poly Radio, "We're all you need."

Wrestlers take to the road

The Mustang wrestling team is ranked 5th in the national rankings according to the December 14, 1978, National Wrestling News, was ranked in the top 10 in December but dropped to 14th in the latest rankings.

This is due to their nation's trip east last month in which they dropped one of five matches.

Cleveland State wasn't ranked in the top 20 in the December rankings but shot up to 7th by upsetting Poly and the University of Wisconsin.

According to ratings by National Mat News the Mustangs are ranked 11th with Cal State Bakersfield ranked 12th.

Swimmers take their marks

It's not everyday a coach has to run two varsity teams. Simultaneously, low-four-year-old twins run two three-year-old teams at all. Cal Poly has only six coaches, but these two sports never went in sync at opposite ends of the year.

Then there is Coach Bob Duncan. He has sole authority over two teams at once, but in his eyes, he can't choose his women's swimming teams.

This may not be so bad but

O'Donnell, a former gymnast, will head the team.

The Mustangs have an average of about 59-6.

The Mustangs will now hit the road for a few days with a 1-3 record against Peoria and eight more opponents.

Sunday: Hitchcock's crew will travel north to tackle U.C. Berberian in a 3 p.m. match at Harvard Gym.

Poly will then host its next Jan. 30 when Cal State Bakersfield comes to town. Match: 7:15 p.m. in the main gym.

Women cagers vs. Whittier

You gotta feel sorry for the Whittier Pios.

They have the misfortune of facing coach Mary Ballard's basketball squads in a 3 p.m. match at Crandall Gym.

The Mustangs are coming off a loss, but a loss they learned a great deal from.

They have a good team, and we believe they will come out ready to play.

"Despite the loss, the team's attitude and morale is at all new high," said Ballard.

"Well, I've lost my mind, but it looks like it's the ideal time for the Mustangs to come out ready to play."

CANCER IS OFTEN CURABLE...

The fear of cancer is often real...

American Cancer Society
SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The California Supreme Court refused Thursday to block a $3 million personal injury suit against the NBC television network, charging that NBC incited a annual assault on a young San Francisco girl.

The 4-1 decision denied without comment a request by NBC to have the suit dismissed, saying that the station had no right to be involved because it had not incited the assault.

The suit was brought by Valerie Naimi if San Francisco on behalf of her 12-year-old daughter, who said she was attacked in 1976 by a group of four girls who said they were licked by NBC TV as part of a broadcast that earlier portrayed explicitly a sexual attack on a young hospital patient.

Begin: peace depends on Egypt

JERUSALEM (AP)—Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Wednesday it "was fair to Egypt" to endorse the stalled Middle East peace talks and said he was sure the United States would pressure him to bow to Egyptian demands.

Speaking to a group of French Jews, Begin also reminded the Egyptian nation that President Anwar Sadat had made a major concession to Israel by recognizing its right to exist.

"We have existed, my dear Egyptian friends, without your recognition for 5,000 years," he said. "Our right to exist was given by the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob."

Begin scoffed at the possibility that Egypt could bring U.S. pressure to bear on Israel for concessions. "Pressure is what we have enough of here with the Egyptians," he said. "We want an international, a commercially viable, a viable concept."

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, meanwhile, was trying to get the Egyptian-Israeli peace negotiations going again. With Sadat in the United States this morning, the two nations scheduled an evening meeting in the American capital's hotel suite.
