Possible Tubes concert canceled

By TONY TRANFA

Plans for a probable Feb. 18 concert date at Cal Poly with The Tubes were canceled Tuesday by the ASI Concert Committee.

Vince Agresti, service chairman, said the concert was "canceled due to a possible demand for the concert" made by the ASI Concert Committee.

A committee was informed Friday that no concert could be held in the concert, so no time was available to sell tickets until after the concert had performed. If the concert was not canceled, the concert would be held in the same place and time as the concert had performed.

The committee was informed that no concert could be held in the concert, so the concert was canceled. The committee then was informed that the concert was canceled due to a possible demand for the concert.

Pros and cons of year-round school

Imagine permanent parking, somewhere hundreds of feet away from Cal Poly. Now imagine that every fall semester you have to account for the rated architectural and statistical data to plan the use of the semester, including the number of students for each building. Now imagine being forced to admit 12,000 students in the same way as the total of 6,200 students. These figures illustrate the need for determining the university's needs by the enrollment of all students, and dividing by 10,000, as opposed to the plan of a political student body in a political campaign.

The equal term enrollment proposal was initiated in 1971 by Dr. William Alexander, a former University President. The concept requires that total students be divided into each group (social science, humanities, etc.) and the equal term enrollment of each group be determined in enrollment for the next school year.

The equal term enrollment proposal does not specifically affect any campus, but it does have implications. If the plan is adopted, the campus would be in full-time use for 11 months.

This plan, as proposed by Robert Kennedy, strongly supports the idea of a 12-month span for students. All students would be enrolled for the year, and the campus would be open year-round.

The goal of this proposal is to make the university more flexible and efficient. This plan, as proposed, would actually affect all students equally. This proposal is not only reasonable, but also practical.

The predicted effect of this proposal on all courses, curriculum, books, faculty, and admissions would be beneficial, but not entirely without problems. This proposal is certainly a step in the right direction.

The proposal for equal term enrollment demands immediate study before a final decision is made.

Life of ignorance ends in the kitchen

I have been living in ignorance. I have been doing what I've been told to do, not what I've wanted to do. A lot of people have been doing the same thing.

A life of ignorance can be described as a lack of knowledge, experience, or understanding. It is often associated with poverty, lack of education, and a general sense of helplessness.

This has been by choice. I used to think that all that was required was to get good grades, but now I know that this is not enough. There is a need to develop a better understanding of the world around us.

There is a wonderful little gadget that is called a "Life of ignorance ends in the kitchen." It is something that we have all been living on.

Housing law violates property rights

Recently the San Luis Obispo City Council voted to approve a 50% increase in rental property prices in the downtown area. A substantial number of landlords, too, have increased rent prices by 10% to 20% when a city council member stated that the rent increase was "not excessive."

There are many statements made in connection with the ordinances that can only be considered as misinformation.

The ordinance against housing the homeless people living in the same house. There are instances of landlords already dealing with these problems. There are those who are unaware of the problem.

The main purpose of the ordinance is to prevent these problems. It is not possible to prevent them because they are caused by circumstances that are beyond their control. It is important that the problem is not going to be solved by merely passing the ordinance. There are those who are unaware of the problem.

Increase in student fees proposed

By RANDY HODGE

The Mustang Daily, January 26, 1978

"Increase in student fees proposed"

According to Ted Burns, President of the Associated Students of Cal State and also a representative of the legislative body, the fee increase will be accompanied by higher food and housing costs for students.

"The fee increase is to be implemented in the fall of this year," Burns said. "The fees will be raised by $1 per student per semester."

Men to women ratio decreases

Paul Mills: future NBA standout?

By Janet MILLER

Paul Mills, a 6'10" center at Cal Poly, is leading the team in scoring and rebounding. He was born in South Africa to parents who emigrated to South Africa from the U.S. He is a promising player who could become a future star in the NBA. Mills' work ethic is second to none, and he has a great future in front of him.

The team's outlook for the season is promising. Mills has been working hard to improve his game and is expected to lead the team to success.

'Broadway Joe' says good-bye to football

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Namath, the New York Jets quarterback who for years has been the face of the American Football League, said Friday he'll retire from football at the end of the season.

"I feel I've accomplished what I set out to do," Namath said. "I've been a leader on and off the field. I've been a part of a great team, and I feel that now is the right time to move on."
A sporting view

BY JIM ALVAREZ
Daily Sports Writer

The term "gym" is most commonly used by people when referring to a place where they can go to exercise. However, not all "gyms" are created equal.

Generally the most consistent names are those of special facilities. Over a period of time these names have been solidified in people's minds. For instance Pauley Pavilion on campus is used to mean UCLA basketball is in town.

That brings us to Cal Poly, and more specifically the "Crandall Gym," named after a former Cal Poly basketball player and trainer. But that's another story.

Anyway, a sporting view of any other name...

The new Cal Poly basketball facility, originally known as Cramond Field, has been officially renamed the "Physical Education Building." The name change was made because the gym is not a gym in the traditional sense of the word.

If you're not familiar with the "Physical Education Building," it is a large building on the west side of campus. The building is used for a variety of purposes, such as physical education classes, intramural sports, and special events.

The new name was chosen because it is more accurate in describing the purpose of the building. The original name, Cramond Field, was given to the gym by the late Cal Poly basketball coach, Bob Cramond.

In addition to the name change, the gym has undergone several renovations over the years, including a new roof and updated lighting. The gym is an important part of the Cal Poly campus, hosting a variety of events throughout the year.

The new name, "Physical Education Building," reflects the building's diverse use and helps to distinguish it from other gymnasiums on campus. Overall, the gym remains an important facility for the Cal Poly community.
Water rationing ends

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) -

Water restrictions imposed nearly a year ago because of drought have been lifted in San Francisco.

The city's Public Utilities Commission President, George Marcus, said the commission was SW a decision made to end the restrictions because water usage had not only been cut back, but also because there were no emergency water problems.

The commission also concluded that water usage currently is below the 30 percent level of usage established at the beginning of the drought.
