Kennedy interview: One to one

By TONY TRAN
Daily Staff Writer

John Kennedy, President of the California Polytechnic State University, was interviewed by the Mustang Daily in a recent meeting with students and faculty. Here are some highlights of the interview:

- Kennedy discussed the importance of education and the role of universities in society.
- He addressed criticisms of the alcohol policy and the need for students to make responsible choices.
- Kennedy talked about the challenges of being a university president and the importance of listening to students and faculty.

The full interview can be read on page 4 of the Mustang Daily.
Student's Senior Project ripped off

Editor:

Well, just seeing your car window sticker, I can see that my column might be considered offensive and perhaps even criminal. Personally, I don't see the humor, and perhaps that's the problem. Perhaps NOBODY wants my senior project reported. (I think very well last Saturday night. My sister and I both saw a boy who was a绝对 dead. Perhaps not dead, but NOBODY seems to mind the senior project report."

As I write this, there is a trash can or dumpster sitting behind the student's desk. Several books, two brown slipcover folders, a few blank yellow folders, a few diagrams in clear plastic, many loose pages, and an orange hard-bound book. (Definitely, there is a large monetary reward with absolutely no questions asked. Call 588-3427 or deposit it in a mailbox with a note inside.)

Perhaps your readers will help me look for him. Perhaps I will still graduate from Poly and have the same good feelings and memories that the University has for me.

Tubes vs financial tactics

Editor:

I was recently told at Cal Poly that all financial controls at the university are considered non-negotiable. I am sorry to hear this, but I will continue to support my views. I do not feel that they should have "given" any more money to Tubbs. The amount was not as a financial lever at a time when the university was not solvent.

The concept ironic that the concept would support material costs is that the university was looking for a "Tubbs" to sell. I do believe the material message they tried to convey through their media.

Evidently, those who attended and then complained must have missed the message of the song entitled "What do you know about the financial controls at the university?"

If they had been able to understand that those in charge would have realized the irony of what they were trying to do. I am sure, at some point, the university was aware of the financial controls involved. The use of financial controls to define the university's policy in this area is, I believe, good. Perhaps the university is more solvent because of this decision.

(If the university were solvent, I would not have written this.)

Price when he suggests that the blame for television shows must largely rest with the advertisers. He states that advertisers' inability to resist the temptation to advertise on television is the root of the problem. He then states that television must change, and that change must start now.

In addition to laying the blame at the feet of the television audience, I must also lay the blame at the feet of the advertising agencies for airing such shows.

Price also discusses the various reasons for the change in the way that television is viewed. Among these reasons is the fact that television commercials are now more honest and more informative.

Perhaps Richard Price shouldn't place the blame on the advertisers. Perhaps instead, he should place it on the viewers themselves. After all, it is the viewers who choose to watch the shows that they enjoy. Perhaps instead, he should place it on the viewers themselves. Orienteering course offered

Editor:

We were surprised to learn that there is an Orienteering course offered at Mustang Daily. It seems that there is a lot of interest in this sport, and we think it is a great way to get some exercise and have some fun. We are happy to see that Mustang Daily is offering this course.

Students enrolled in MGS 22 will participate as a part of the course. Any other interested student is invited to participate. For those who wish to participate in the course, there will be a brief meeting at 12:30 the afternoon of December 14.

September combined exams of map and compass reading, running, and map and compass reading, running, and map and compass reading, running. A personal and instruction seminar for interested students will follow, and then the course will begin.

SAN LUIS OBISPO police are searching for a late-model pickup truck, above, in connection with a hit-and-run accident in which a pedestrian was knocked down and injured, (reprinted from Telegram-Tribune)

Police continue hunt

The status of the Mary Jane Gesell hit-and-run case remains the same, police said Tuesday.

Gesell, a 3-year-old girl, was struck by a pickup truck on California Boulevard on Feb. 28, on a major street and police have been unable to identify witnesses to the accident since the accident.

The police have cleared more than 1,000 false reports of hit-and-run cases in the past year, according to captain of the accident division.

The man trucked away by a pickup truck was described as being between 180 and 200 pounds, and he was last seen at the intersection of Main Street and San Luis Obispo.

Part of an ex文书 that almost exceeded the Texte.

Neither nor any other story, especially with an ex文书 that was not reported to be involved in the accident.

Breaker's hit-and-run accident, police said, was not involved in the accident.

The man was last seen at the intersection of Main Street and San Luis Obispo.

The accident occurred in the middle of the intersection and the man was last seen walking away from the scene.

The police are urging anyone with information about the accident to contact their nearest police station.

Mustangs drop three games to Cards

By JOHN KELLER
Special to the Daily

Outdistanced in its series by a total of four runs, the Cal Poly baseball team dropped three close pressure games last week to the Stanford Cardinals.

The Mustangs could not contain the Cardinals as much time was lost in the final inning. On March 5, in the seventh inning of the first game, Poly hit the sand and lost to the Cardinal.

On March 6, in the seventh inning of the first game, Poly hit the sand and lost to the Cardinal. Stanford had four consecutive hits to score the runs and even up the score at 4-4. Adding these three hits in the seventh inning, pinch hitting Cardinal John Wilson scored after being hit with a base hit to give Stanford the lead and victory. In the second inning of the following Carney, Stanford was again frustrated by a score of 4-4.

In the second inning of the following Carney, Stanford was again frustrated by a score of 4-4. Cal Poly scored their sole run in the first inning. Junior second baseman Mike Carney hit off with a single to right. Carney was safe at second on Blankenbaker's error. But Stanford's defense was successful by third base and scoring an error by Stanford center Pat Wilson.

New team in CCAA

The Chapman College Panther's baseball team, who defeated Cal Poly in the previous round, Aggie tournament last November, have been accepted into the California Collegiate Athletic Association.

The membership came from Lew Cowen, CCAA conference director last September.

"We are delighted to have Chapman in the CCAA. They have an excellent baseball team and we believe they will make an excellent addition to the conference," said Chapman Athletic directors from the six schools comprising the CCAA.

Three schools were unanimously included in the CCAA who competing at a higher level. The Panthers are members in the Western Regional play of the NCAA. They are the fourth team to join the CCAA, besides Chapman, Cal Poly, Cal State, Northridge, Riverside, Cal State, Long Beach, and Cal Poly Pomona.

Brook on base stealing

There's a world of things you can do to help others. And, you don't have to go far to do them. There's plenty of poverty so go around, right here in the United States. VISTA: IT'S A GOOD PLACE TO START.
A sporting view

Fading hopes for a championship

Just as assuredly as spring arrives each March, the college basketball season draws to a close. The national playoffs have already been narrowed down to eight, while the winners of the remaining conference tournaments will soon do likewise. At that point, the eightbutton NCAA tournament is assured.

If, however, history is any indication, it’s always tough to pick the eventual winner in the NCAA tournament. The tournament has historically been a source of small college upsets, as well as huge upsets like Kentucky’s loss to Arkansas in 1974.

There are a few things that stand out as helpful in evaluating a team’s chances of making a deep run in the NCAA tournament. One is its defense, which can be a decisive factor in the tournament’s heats. If a team has a strong defense, it can usually weather a tough game against a strong opponent. The other thing is the team’s shooting, which can be a deciding factor in the tournament’s heats.

The game is still young, so it is a bit too early to make predictions. The most certain thing that can be said is that nobody is going to have an easy time of getting into the tournament. If a team has a strong defense, it can usually weather a tough game against a strong opponent. The other thing is the team’s shooting, which can be a deciding factor in the tournament’s heats.

Lou Brock speaks on base stealing

Lou Brock, 54, speaks on a topic close to the hearts of baseball fans everywhere. He is a baseball legend, a member of the Baseball Hall of Fame, and a former player for the St. Louis Cardinals. He was a five-time All-Star, a three-time Gold Glove winner, and a two-time MVP. He also holds the record for most career stolen bases.

Brock spoke on base stealing in particular, a topic he is well-versed in. He was known for his speed and ability to take the extra base.

“The Cardinals’ speaker announced that he covers on private little wars with rival, etc.,” he said. “I have never seen a book, etc., and Cobb’s sporting figures on the same page, where he wanted to call a cat.”
