Jeanie Lopes is a nanny for two Cal Poly students. She has been a nanny near San Luis Obispo for years.

On a typical day, Molly
has about 25 elementary students to watch out for.

"There used to be more," she said. "We’re real lovers," she added.

On a typical day, Molly
spends four to five hours a day. Molly is there by the morning, at handshakes,
and after school.

A friendly, outgoing woman, Molly knows all of the kids’ names, and after three years, she knows almost every
of the children.

It’s fun to watch the kids grow. "They’re so different," she said. "I have five grandchildren, and these just seem like a few more. Oh, my lord have they come some," she added.

Molly was born at Granada
and Haynes Drive in gentle years. She worked for parole, and then came up to Washington. A small apartment by itself with sausage sandwiches and a cup of coffee. "It’s been real nice also," she said.

"We’ve been a

Bennett to run
for ASI president

ASI Internal Affairs
Assistant Steve Bennett declared yesterday that he would run for ASI president
next month.

An ASI source told Mustang Daily Bennett had been planning a campaign literature to a man.

He now joins in the race
for president with ASI
Vice-President Larry Robinson who stated his intentions last week.

Bennett handles
the annual and permanent clerkship and is a

The elections are scheduled for May 14th.
New directions found in nothingness

Most college students are notorious for being deeply rooted in nothingness. Their futurs are not their own anymore. Their parents are in the lead from their parents. It must be some kind of traumatic shock. (Psychology of Religion) and some kind of personal problem. I don’t know what the meaning of life is in your own, but you are making the meaning of their lives, in particular.

Most people (students are people, too) are so caught up in their own personal lives and ask what the meaning is. But, at some point in their life, all people ask themselves what’s the meaning of life.

The basic need of having to be somewhere to live all the time, the rules of college and society, the way people live from school and in their live, is not something that can be answered by so many people. But, at some point in their life, all people ask themselves what the meaning of life is.

Michael Novak, philosopher and author of “The Experience of Nothingness,” questions the meaning of life and the conditions of happiness. He states that the conditions of happiness can be satisfied by violence and corruption.

But, is that all there is to it? Can happiness be found in a happy marriage, at your job, is that all there is to it? Is a college student at Cal Poly prepared for this part of life?

Author Chuck Durham is a senior journalism major.

Spring students are for the birds

Now that spring has sprung, Cal Poly is filled with all the various shades of birds that inhabit our fair and sunny weather. But, this spring, there is one particular species that has taken over Cal Poly’s campus. This bird is the bright-green face and its distinctive cry that is heard across the campus.

The bird’s face is a bright red in color. This bird’s favorite activity appears to be picking off their student’s food.

SATURDAY NIGHTDIAL (Directed at a particular student)-On weekends this bird is known to make his two left feet go to the right way. The bird’s favorite activity appears to be picking off their student’s food.

“Why are you here, you big bird? Are you doing anything good with your life, or are you just wasting away?”

Author Kathy McKeever is a sophomore journalism major.

Home — safety or jail?

Spurred by a terrific generation, the sprawling San Luis Obispo property grooving mushroom across the face of the red-eyed crammer (Grus rubicundus) is a sight to behold. This bird has a dark brown body with a red eye and a yellow bill. It is known to be aggressive and will attack anything that comes near it.

Created through the insistence of a basic human need, this bird has been housing developers anxious to commercialize the land. They desire for urban sprawl prevention. The bird has been associated with the idea of humanization. It has been described as a society that is not made of people, no society is made of anything but society. The bird is considered a “food source” for humans. It is considered a “pest” by many people. The bird’s diet consists of vacant land and garbage.

The land and garbage are relatively small and not very organized. They are often found in the same place. The birds are known to be aggressive and will attack anything that comes near it.

Today, however, that security may be a thing of the past. The advent of gated communities has changed the face of the red-eyed crammer. The birds are no longer allowed to roam freely through the neighborhood. Instead, they are confined to gated communities where they are given food and water.

In addition, the birds are monitored closely by cameras and other security devices. This has led to a decrease in crime and an increase in safety in the area.

Needle art keeps students in stitches

by JU DL MICHAELS
Daily Staff Writer

In a world that can be monotonous, Needlework class can be a refreshing change. "Needlework is a way to express creativity through sewing," said Creative Textiles instructor, Mary Miller. "It is a laboratory for learning about color, design, and technique."

The class provides opportunities for students to design their own projects. "It's a way to personalize their work and learn new skills," Miller said. "They get to be creative and make something unique for themselves." The class also teaches students the importance of following instructions and mastering basic techniques.

One of the projects currently underway is a cutting contest. "The students have been working hard on their designs and are eager to see who will win," Miller said. "It's a great way to encourage their creativity."

Another project the class is currently working on is a community quilt. "The quilt will be sold to raise money for a local charity," Miller said. "It's a great way to give back to the community while creating something beautiful.

In addition to these projects, the class also offers opportunities for students to create their own designs. "It's a great way to explore their creative side and learn new skills," Miller said. "I'm always impressed by what the students come up with."

Foundation meeting

A public meeting of Cal Poly Musical Association will be held on Tuesday, April 13 at 1:10 P.M. in Administration Building, room 409. The purpose of the meeting is to present an outline of the proposed student association program. The meeting is open to all students and interested individuals.

ROBERT BONDS, coordinator of Disabled Student Services; drives Poly's new tram around campus. The tram is only for transporting temporarily and permanently disabled students.

Certificates available for language proficiency

A certificate of proficiency in French, German, or Spanish is available to students through a two-year or three-year program offered by the Cal Poly Foreign Languages Department.

Although the program will not officially be added to the curriculum until the 1976-1977 academic year, certification may be granted by examination for those who have completed the required courses.

Dr. Veran Stahl, head of the foreign language department, said certificates will be given to students who complete a two-year or three-year course of study in French, German, or Spanish.

Tram soon available for the disabled

The tram, which is only for temporarily and permanently disabled students, will be available starting next week.

The tram will be available for students who require special assistance. It is expected to operate daily during the academic year.

Tram service will be provided by the Transportation Department.

The tram will operate from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Service will be available to all students and faculty members who require it.

For more information, contact the Transportation Department at 692-5656.

In the second year of the certification program, all students who want to participate will be required to take a proficiency test. The test will be administered by the language department.

The results of the test will be used to determine eligibility for the certificate. Students who pass the test will be eligible to take the next level of courses.

In the third year of the certification program, students will be able to take a comprehensive test in their major language. The test will be administered by the language department.

Students who pass the test will be eligible to take the final exam in their major language. The final exam will be administered by the language department.
