Chips got an average of one-quarter of their revenue from property taxes, and county council members said it would not be a good idea. If Prop. 13 passes, the state surplus could reduce real revenues through the increased tax base, but it would not provide an ongoing source of funds.

Eventually, sales would either be reduced, or the Legislature would have to adjust local revenue losses through other taxes. For this reason, a major dispute concerns the Jarvis-Gann initiative is whether it produces a lot cut or just a tax shift.

Prop. 13 would:

—Limit local property taxes to one percent of market value.

—Half back assessed values (80 percent of full value basis) to March 1, 1978 levels.

—Limit increases in assessed values to two percent annually, unless property is sold.

—Require a three-fifths vote of the state Legislature to increase any other tax.

—Prohibit local governments from levying other taxes, except for a one-dollar tax of the specified circumstances.

Supporters of Prop. 13 include candidates for governor Ed Davis and Bruce Vangorder, farmers, businessmen and apartment owner groups.

Hallett speaks out on Prop. 8 and 13

"Prop. 13 may hurt students," said Murphy, the associate professor of the Miller Center. "That figure is not accurate. Prop. 13 reduces state funding to county school districts. That is typical of the situation. We are not in a position to say what they will not do to themselves, and this is not an accurate representation. According to Hallett, the voters approved Bill 1, which was passed during the last session of the legislature. The measure is aimed at making cuts to the state budget. The measure also includes a provision that would limit the growth of property taxes. Hallett said the measure would save the state millions of dollars and increase the state's revenue. However, Murphy said the measure would hurt students. He said that if Prop. 13 were coupled with another measure, it would be even more harmful. Educator says 13 will cause chaos

By J.N. KERANTZ
Managing Editor

The rumor swirling about here Prop. 13 will alter education in San Luis Obispo County, if it is passed as true, according to county education officials.

San Luis Obispo County Superintendent of Schools Earl Cornwall said the Jarvis-Gann initiative would cause the county to lose over one-third of its education budget if it is approved by voters June 1.

Currently, the county schools' budgets total about $35 million a year. The proposed cut in property taxes would slash the budget by 45 million, Cornwall estimated. The figure is based on the county schools would receive the same proportions of its operating costs as the school district it projects to receive.

In the event of layoffs, Cornwall said passage of the measure would result in severe cutbacks and classes which would ultimately hurt students.

The chaos, he said, would come from the multitude of programs the schools currently have. Higher property tax revenue will be needed for the following:

- Construction of student houses, the superintendent said.
- Hiring of new teachers to teach the district's within the county.
- Hiring of more teachers for the two junior high schools that are dealing with the distribution of property tax revenue.
- Getting its supplemental funding until the November elections.
- Cutting the budget to go against the voters' anti-tuition stance.

Cornwall said the only chance of the state helping out, he said, is if some funds are not made available, the hard-pressed school district will have to cut. If the measure does not pass, the district could open.

Williams Newman, said the district could close the schools if the measure does not pass and there was a chance of the state helping out, he said.

In the event of the measure passing, Cornwall said, the schools would have to lay off teachers. The school board must make the decision on who to lay off, but the decision is up to the voters. It would be the school district's responsibility to cut back.

Jarvis-Gann may benefit renters

While the Jarvis-Gann initiative is being planned, a housing bill has passed the state legislature. The bill would be a boon to renters, Cornwall said.

"There's no telling how much the Jarvis-Gann initiative will affect education," said Cornwall. "It's hard to say how much it will affect the district.

Administrators in six San Luis Obispo County cities are uncertain how Prop. 13 would affect their communities.

Tenth, city administrator for Arroyo Grande said about $50,000 of the $1.000,000 city budget is generated from property taxes.

He estimated $300,000 would be cut if Prop. 13 passes. The budget for the $2.000,000 of the city's $3.000,000 budget would be cut the same amount. Butch said personnel reductions at the same time might offset the reduction in revenue.

The administrator said that people would be left with a $1.000,000 bond issue in which the $2.000,000 would be the same amount. Butch said personnel reductions at the same time might offset the reduction in revenue.

According to Arnold Howey, city administrator for Grover Beach, the city would be cut the same amount. Butch said personnel reductions at the same time might offset the reduction in revenue.

Howey said there is a potential reduction in the city's property tax revenues if the initiative passes. He said the city's $2.000,000 budget is about $1.000,000 in property taxes.

The city is near the end of its budget year and said the $1.000,000 of the city's budget is about $1.000,000 in property taxes.

Bank of America and Chase Manhattan Bank of America would cut their lending to local businesses.

Unlike homeowners, businesses rarely see their property tax bills. However, homeowners could see an increase in other state tax revenue.

"If we don't use the money, we'll have to borrow it back from the state," said the department's chief, who has been with the city for five years.

This is the first time in five years that the city has used $100,000 of the city's budget.

Prop. 13, which would cut property taxes, has caused a decrease in home and property sales.

P.G. and E. spokesman Frederick Dreger said his company supports Prop. 13 because "without a change in the state's property tax law, the company would be bankrupt in a year.

"We have already cut our service to those customers who have not paid their bills," said Dreger.

The hotel's owner, Yerba Buena, said people were not staying there because they were not sure how much longer they would be able to stay.

"The hotel is run by a manager who I do not know," said Yerba Buena owner J.J. Juarez. "I do not know if the hotel will be able to stay open due to the Proposition's effect.

"But I can tell you that we are trying to keep the hotel open," said Yerba Buena owner J.J. Juarez. "I do not know if the hotel will be able to stay open due to the Proposition's effect."

It was a big turnaround from the year's CCAA championship meet in which the Mustangs won their first title, finishing in 10th place ahead of Los Angeles. And yet, the Mustangs could have prevented Miller's upset with the championship trophy if the Mustangs had overwhelmed their opponents in Illinois but that didn't happen in the actual competition. Poly's hopes dimmed considerably before the team even left town for the meet, when sprinters Kurt Williams and James Langille and 5,000 meter man Dave Marini came down with virus of U.C. Off season growth

By JOHN MCKELLER

Coach Jim Lappin and his football staff concluded an impressive two weeks of spring practice last week in preparing his young team for the competitive season that is starting in September.

Lappin said yesterday that the team is still growing and maturing and would probably be in a better position to start the season if it had the benefit of a week off between now and the first game.

Many veterans ex- pressed the idea of the long season after only two weeks of practice, but the coaches think that their team is in a good position to start the competitive season.

"Progress is encouraged," said Harper making a point during the first week of practice.

End of road for Poly

For the first time in 29 years, the Cal Poly hock- ey team will not go to the NCAA regionals this year. The University of California at Los Angeles is competing in the West region this year.

The Mustangs lost only one of the last four games of the season to finish third in the NCAA region.

Acne: a problem for some

By LAURA CHRISTMAN

When the oils cannot reach the surface because of these blockages, they may leak throughout the skin, and cause an inflammation that is known as sebum. This is what we call acne.

It is believed that bacteria play a role in the disease. When this happens, they said the bacteria set up on the oil and cause a pimple or blackhead. The bacteria can then release enzymes that can cause the hair to become blocked.

Whether or not a pimple occurs close to the surface or is more of a deep one is determined by the follicle wall collapse, Zita said. She said some can be very painful and reduce the level of oxygen to the skin.

Hard scratching or picking can produce the same results as pitting the skin. Zita said.

"To deal with acne is not just a matter of taking care of your skin. It is also about living a healthy lifestyle," Zita said.

According to the American Academy of Dermatology, acne is a condition that affects people of all ages, but it is more common among teenagers and young adults.

"Acne is a common problem that affects millions of people worldwide. It is important to know the cause of acne and how to treat it," Zita said.
