Earthquake prompts look

At 3:54 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 13, an earthquake centered near Santa Barbara. It registered 5.1 on the Richter scale and was felt by many San Luis Obispo residents.

The quake was centered near Point Conception south of Ventura, off the coast of California, and was picked up by the San Francisco Seismograph Station.

There were no injuries or damages reported. However, the earthquake caused a small amount of damage to some buildings in Santa Barbara and the surrounding area. The shaking was felt as far away as San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The earthquake was caused by the movement of the San Andreas Fault, which runs along the length of California. It is one of the most active faults in the world and is responsible for many earthquakes in the region.

The earthquake was also felt by residents in San Luis Obispo, who reported feeling a slight tremor. The earthquake did not cause any injuries or damages in the area.

The California Earthquake Authority (CEA) is advising residents to remain calm and to check for any damage to their homes or buildings. The CEA also recommends that residents stay away from windows and other potentially hazardous areas.

Residents are also encouraged to review their emergency plans and to have a supply of water, food, and other necessities on hand in case of an emergency.

If you or someone you know was affected by the earthquake, please contact the American Red Cross for assistance. The Red Cross provides shelter, food, and other necessary items to those affected by disasters.

The U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) and other geological organizations are continuing to monitor the area for any aftershocks or further activity.

The USGS has issued a report on the earthquake, which can be accessed on their website. The report includes information on the magnitude, depth, and location of the earthquake, as well as any immediate or long-term effects.

The earthquake serves as a reminder of the importance of being prepared for natural disasters. Residents are encouraged to take steps to protect themselves and their loved ones in case of an emergency.

Governor Brown has declared a state of emergency for San Luis Obispo County, and has activated the California National Guard to assist with the recovery efforts.

Residents are reminded to stay safe and to continue to check for any damage to their homes or buildings. The state and local authorities are working to ensure that residents have the necessary resources to recover from the earthquake.

For more information, please visit the California Earthquake Authority's website or contact your local emergency management agency.

WHO KNOWS WHAT EVIL LURKS IN THE HEARTS OF MEN...
Firetruck driver begins

When Cal Poly’s fire engine wheeled down the roads it wasn’t to see Cal Poly’s fire (Judy) and her dog, sitting at the wheel.

Lauren Remsen, a twenty-year-old, Poly Bio-Chem major and her dog Lucy, poorly known for their brisk drives, were recently spotted January 5th on a fire engine for the Cal Poly Fire Department.

They applied sort of a joke, not really thinking I had an interest of getting hired,” said Remsen.

According to Capt. Carleen Johnson of the Cal Poly Fire Department, six people were considered for the job. Remsen was chosen solely on the fact she was the most qualified.

Remsen’s primary duty is to drive and maintain the fire trucks. However, in the event of fire, trained and skilled firefighters are the ones to respond.

Firefighting is just a temporary job for Remsen to help her through her last year of college.

Residence compromise approved

The San Luis Obispo City Council approved a compromise amendment Tuesday that will permit three unrelated persons to per dwell unit in R-2, R-3, R-4 and R-4H districts.

The amendment retains the restriction for R-1 districts.

The amendment permits a dwelling unit in one of the other residential districts that has two or more bedrooms may be occupied by not more than four unrelated persons, according to the amendment.

Five unrelated persons will be allowed to occupy the apartment if the manager obtains a permit from the Board of Adjustment.

Mayor Bob Stout and Councilwoman Susan Jeffers supported the new ordinance will be enforced on only a complaint basis.

The amended ordinance may be challenged by the Fair Employment Practices Commission, since it implies that property managers must ask prospective tenants whether they are “unrelated.”

Rape prevention is the name of the game, and the new ordinance is a step in the right direction.

The City Council passed consideration of two Board of Adjustment permits to house five unrelated persons. A $100 fee was proposed to cover half the cost of processing each permit.

Counselman Jorgensen argued for the council to tardy the permits. “It’s absolutely ridiculous that the two of the permits will be passed on to the tenants,” Jorgensen said.

The ordinance amendment passed unanimously with Schwartz, Jorgensen, Settle and Counselman Ronald Dumbiam voting yes. Counselman Steve Peterson dis-approved himself because of conflict of interest.

PUBLIC SAFETY Dir. discusses rape

The bill, SB 1479 by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, a candidate for attorney general in November’s election, went to the Assembly as a 23-2 vote. The Assembly is acknowledged as a more liberal branch of the legislature, and passage of the bill is expected to be a breeze.

According to Brug, California public defenders are united against passage of the bill.

Some precautions should be observed, according to Brug, and list only three bullet points on the file: phonebooks or doors bars curtains or blinds on windows get to know your neighbors; have your keys ready before you get home; vary your walking route, more rapes are planned and lock your doors.

When walking, it is suggested carrying a whistle, drawing for freedom of movement walking at a steady pace through well lighted areas and, if this isn’t possible, walk with a friend, heading for theaters, restaurants or stores if followed; and breaking a window at a lighted home instead of calling for help.

The biggest deterrent to rape, said Brug, is that a woman should appear as tough as she is aware of everything going on around her.

According to the Rape Crisis Center, it might be better to not carry weapons because they can be used against the victim. However, some women advocate carrying a plastic squeaky lemon filled with ammonia and aiming at an attacker’s eyes.

If you are a rape victim, the San Luis Obispo Rape Crisis Center says they are available 24 hours a day to handle any questions regarding an attack.

A spokesman for the center, who preferred to remain anonymous, said the most important thing to do after an attack is not to wash or change clothes, this would result in destroying evidence.

He added that therapy is supportive and doesn’t necessarily advocate postressing or not investigating.

She said a medical examination for pregnancy, venereal disease and injuries should be in an immediate concern to the victim.

The center will help the victim cope with the police investigation, the hospital reports and, if the victim desires, the court proceedings.

The center can be contacted by phoning 545-RAPE or writing to P. O. Box 27, San Luis Obispo.

Brug said the important thing to remember is that if you find anything suspicious on your car, residence door, received through the mail or phone, call the University Police at 546-2215, or, for routine stuff, 540-2211 or 1222.

He urged cops to report all offensive behavior readily and let the police know of an event may keep a crime from occurring.

Gospel trio plays

The 2nd Chapter of Acts, one of the nation’s most popular contemporary gospel recording groups, will perform in a free concert at Cal Poly on Thursday, Aug. 24, at 1 p.m.

The concert, to be held in Chumash Auditorium, will be sponsored by the Cal Poly Nazarene Student Mission Corps.

A rock—roll trio consisting of Matthew Ward and his sisters, Annie Herring and Nely Ortega, 2nd Chapter of Acts has recorded several albums, "With Footnotes," "In the Videos of the Book," and "Rock, Dress Blues," known for his song, "The Eyes of Destruction." and a band called David.

Annie Herring has also recorded two solo albums, "Through a Child’s Eye" and "Kid of the Kingdom." In 1977, the 2nd Chapter of Acts toured Australia and New Zealand in addition to performing 30 concerts in the United States.

Currently with Sparrow Records, the trio recently released a new album, "Mission Builder," which has steadily climbing up the gospel music charts.

Although the concert at Cal Poly will be free to all who wish to attend, donations will be accepted to defray costs.

Protest follow-up

Five hundred protesters have been arrested and arraigned for trespassing or attempting to trespass at the Diablo Canyon Nuclear Reactor. The local cost to the county is still uncalculated.

"It’s going to be quite costly," said Lt. Pastuh of the sheriff’s department. He expects to have exact figures next week.

In court Tuesday, the protesters were arraigned on charges of trespassing. All were released with probation.

Municipal Court Judge Warren Casilla started straightening and releasing the protesters on a pretrial basis on August 15. District Attorney Robert Taylor urged that such protesters be fingerprinted, but Conklin decided against it. Further trial proceedings will be held Aug. 24.

Diabetes meeting

The American Diabetes Association has been offering diabetes education classes throughout the San Luis Obispo area, including a diabetes support group for men to become more involved in diabetic programs.

They extend a warm and open invitation to their education sessions where men can learn about basic methods and how to help themselves.

Rape discussions

In response to community and student concerns, two public panel discussions on rape will be presented at Cal Poly by the University’s Student Affairs Division.

The panels are scheduled for Aug. 21 and 23. They will be held in the University Union on Thursday, Aug. 23, and Thursday, Aug. 25, according to Nancy Jorgensen, member of the Cal Poly Counseling Center staff who is coordinating the program.

Mrs. Jorgensen said the panel participants will include Cal Poly’s director of public safety, Richard Brug Dr., Richard Law of Alexandria State Hospital; Gloria Bilingen, San Luis Obispo County Mental Health Services; Luella Hershey, San Luis Obispo Family Counseling Center; and representatives of the San Luis Obispo Police Department and local women’s organizations.

Admission to both presentations will be free.

Further information about the programs can be obtained by telephoning Mrs. Jorgensen at 546-2111.

Printing museum

Cal Poly students have produced a book titled "The Shakespeare Press Museum: A Collection of Nineteenth Century Printing Types and Equipment." The 60-page publication includes a large representative showing of the museum’s typefaces as well as a partial review of the museum’s reproduction of antique printing equipment.

The collection was begun by the late Charles Palmer.

Students suckered by bogus petition

By Janet E. Frye

Everyone needs someone to talk to about something. No matter what the problem is, classmates, roommates or your level of stresses in everyday life.

The Counseling Center, open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., offers a variety of services with problems such as group counseling, college graduation counseling, relationship, career development and learning disabilities.

"We really become experiencient with the problems of this age group and those that are leaving home from the first time," said Dr. George Mulder, director of counseling and testing. "The beautiful thing about working with this population is that there are no rules."

An example of the problem, encountered by the freshman or student living away from home for the first time, Mulder said, is that he and the counselors frequently meet with students who are having transition problems or homesickness.

"For some students, choosing a career poses a real problem. After standing college for two or three years, they begin to question their original goals in life and begin to wonder if they have been prepared for it. Many people feel they have been preparing for it." said Mulder.

The Counseling Center staff for Career Development may be able to help through "The Center also gives assistance in reading, comprehension and spelling, vocabulary as well as reviewing personal habits in time management.

For the student who is having trouble with classes, the Learning Assistance Center, room 208A in library, offers assistance in the following areas: General Academic, which entails textbook study, listening and note-taking, test preparation, test taking and test anxiety.

Online and off-line, "is not a surprise," said Dr. Joe Diaz of the Cal Poly Counseling Center. "We are a helping service."

The 13 counselors at the center offer a variety of services to students. They include counseling to individuals and groups as well as care counseling, interest and potential test, and a career library.

Customers give lectures in classes, group workshops, and mail draw awareness workshops in the residence halls. This year, because of Proposition 13 methods, the Counseling Center will assist the Learning Assistance Center.

At least 13 weekly counseling groups will be offered in the fall term. Four new groups will be "Men in a Changing World," "Trust Yourself and Others," "Managing Anxiety and Feelings," and "Winning with Transactional Analysis."

"Most popular groups have been the assertive training groups," Diaz said. "We have had two groups. The Assertive Behavior and "Women's Assertive Behavior." These groups will meet in the fall quarter as "Fem Reduc."

Other groups planned for fall quarter are "Grief Reduc."

"Career Planning."

"Career and Life Planning."

Students interested in joining a group should read the descriptions at the Counseling Center and talk with the facilitator. "If you are a group that should have its own group, do it."

"The Petalogue and seemed to understand it completely," said Mary Reardon.

Many signed their names to a ridiculous petition they couldn't possibly comprehend. The whole thing was made up, added Reardon.
Prop. 5: Airing an issue

Which should the law defend, the right to smoke or the right to breathe? Smoking kills. This is the issue behind Proposition 5, the Clean Air Act, an initiative measure sponsored by the Californians for Clean Indoor Air. If Proposition 5 is approved by the voters in November, smoking would be banned in all indoor public places, including market, places of employment, hospitals and schools. Exceptions would permit smoking in separate smoking sections, bars, hotel rooms, pool halls, race courses, and several other areas. Violators could be fined $30.

Whether the proposition passes or not, an individual will not be able to choose what kind of air he breathes in a public place. Without Proposition 5, the decision is made for him by the person smoking next to him. With Proposition 5, the decision is made for him by the law.

Only one in three adults still smokes, the Los Angeles Times reported March 9. But smoke affects anyone who breathes it, whether he is smoking or not.

The particular manner in which smoke classified as tar causes cancer and irritates respiratory systems. Nicotine raises the blood pressure and heart rate, so the heart requires more oxygen. Carbon monoxide, which encompasses one to five percent of smoke, decreases the amount of oxygen in the blood, so in combination with nicotine it increases the risk of heart attacks.

"Sidestream" smoke, inhaled by the person near a smoker, contains even higher concentrations of tar, nicotine, and carbon monoxide than the "mainstream" smoke inhaled by the smoker, according to a report distributed by the Pulmonary Long Aces.

One hazard from other people's smoke was illustrated in a study published in the June 15 issue of the New England Journal of Medicine. Angina suffers who quit a few times before other people were smoking experienced increased heart rates, higher blood pressure, and in some cases permanent ventricular heart beats, which are associated with sudden death. Millions of Americans are nonsmokers.

Restricting the right to smoke in public places would reduce one group's freedom, but would endanger no one's health. Continuing to permit smoking in most public places would reduce another group's freedom, and endanger the health of people who do not choose the risks of smoking.

Since the question cannot be decided on the basis of individual rights, it should be decided in favor of preventing people from having their health hazarded without their consent. Proposition 5 should be passed.

Internship to job

Cal Poly internship program gives some students on their way into the “real world”.
Luna Bevlar, 22, a Poly Child Development major, has found a rewarding career as a counselor at the Juvenile Development Center in San Luis Obispo.
She has been working there for the past two years. Her job involves helping children with problems such as family conflict or alcoholism.

Children under 18 arrested on a 103 charge are faced with serious crime.

The Juvenile Center does not have the necessary facilities for these kids to stay in. The children that are awaiting court hearings are transported downtown to the juvenile facilities in Santa Barbara.

“We must be ready to transport some kids at all hours of the day or night,” said Bevlar.

No facilities are available to house the juveniles in San Luis Obispo, although there is an acknowledged need for one.

Bevlar, whose concentration is family studies at Cal Poly, is pleased with the internship program requirements.

“I wish for the family studies concentration,” said Bevlar, “that we were required to spend more volunteer time in the county counseling, rather than working with the preschool children on campus.

This is the kind of experience we will need in our career. The training and supervision I have gotten from this internship is something no book could ever teach me,” said Bevlar.

Susan Middough, a senior in Engineering Technology, got saved from a fire that destroyed a house at 211 Pine St. early on July 31.

A girl called “Firemen” and “Summertime’s Great,” which caused $139,000 in damage to the house and its contents, but no one was injured, thanks to the fire department arrival.

The fire department arrived a few minutes later. The fire caused $33,000 in damages to the house and its contents, but no one was injured, thanks to the fire department.

“I am not a hero,” insisted Roger Gootsche, a Cal Poly senior in Electrical Engineering Technology.

Gootsche saved two people from a fire that destroyed a house at 211 Pine St. early on July 31.

A girl called “Firemen,” “Summertime’s Great,” and “Let’s Get Out and Enjoy the Night”.

Roger Gootsche is a senior in Electrical Engineering Technology. He is a member of the electrical engineering fraternity, Eta Kappa Nu.

He was in his dorm room when he heard the fire alarm.

“I ran across the street and threw the fire alarm at San Luis Obispo High School, then dashed back and yelled to bring out anyone inside the house. A man who came to the front door was not sure there was a fire, so I got into the house, as close to the three of them searched part of the house.

“The fire was in the front room,” Gootsche said.

“It had two glass doors. We could just see the wagon on fire and flames in there,” Gootsche said.

“I was in the room, he could not have survived, so I ran, shouting to the door.

“We were at the back door when we realized the girl was still in there,” Gootsche said.

He entered in the doorway and called to her until he saw her feet beneath the smoke. “I reached into the smoke and grabbed her sleeve, and jerked her out the back door.”

The fire department arrived.
Tax credit plans

By John Keller
Summer Staff Writer

A bill which would give college students a tax credit on tuition costs awaits a final decision from Congress. However, President Carter has threatened to veto.

The Senate and the House both approved the bill with different changes. The Senate bill, S. 1877, by a vote of 95 to 2, would provide a tax credit of 30 percent of college tuition and fees, up to a maximum of $200 per student. This credit would be raised to $300 per student on October 1, 1980.

The bill approved by the House earlier would allow a credit of 15 percent of college tuition up to a maximum of $100 in 1978, $150 in 1979, and $200 in 1980. In addition, the House bill credits elementary and secondary school charges by 25%, with a maximum of $50 this year and $100 in 1979.

Either bill, if passed, raises questions about what to do with children who lose family benefits if the tax credit isn't passed. Jorgensen said that if the House bill were passed, the tax credit would be phased out over a period of three years.
