Kennedy unsure about successor

BY SCOTT CRAVEN
Daily Courier

Retiring president Robert B. Kennedy said yesterday he would not be surprised if his replacement came from within the university. Kennedy, however, would not make any recommendations as to who he thought his successor should be.

"If the Chancellor asks me who I would recommend, I would tell him," Kennedy told reporters yesterday. "But I would not tell you who I think he should be." He did speculate about the mid-November selection of replacements for the chancellor's position.

"Usually they choose one of the vice presidents for the job," he said. Kennedy, referring to Max Rudisperger, vice president of academic affairs and Dale Andrews, executive vice president.

"After all, that's what vice presidents are for." Kennedy's last working days will be around Christmas, and before then he said he would like to accomplish one thing.

"Parking has always been a problem here and now it's acute," he said. "I would like to see a multi-level parking lot built on campus." The parking lot across Grand Avenue from the dorms would be an ideal place for a multi-level parking garage, said Kennedy.

"Other campuses in the CSUC system have multi-level parking," said Kennedy. "We're problem with Poly, that we have too much space. They tell us to move down some fields for parking space. Before I leave, I think that one thing I would like to do is to get in motion." He was looking back at his 11 years as president, Kennedy said his most satisfying achievement was building an organizational structure in which a team approach is used to solve university problems.

"When I came here, I wanted to provide for a great deal of collegiality without diluting the decision-making process," he said. "I believe I have accomplished that. I can't receive full credit for anything, except alumni and that. I believe I can take credit for." Leaving Poly, Kennedy said he is proud of what has been accomplished.

"This is one of the most popular campuses in the CSUC system," he said. "While most colleges are pounding the doors for students, Poly has to turn them away. In the last three years, I think we've had to turn away 10,000 people." He is leaving one of the most-wanted jobs in the system, Kennedy said.

"Many of my colleagues have asked me to switch jobs," he said. "There will be a lot of applicants for this job. It's the best one on campus." One of the things he will miss, said Kennedy, is his house. "It is a great house," he said. "It is a symbol of the learning-by-doing concept. It was refurbished by Poly students. It was a tremendous development for Poly." After he retires, Kennedy said he plans to become a professorial type of candidate.

"My nine grandchildren will keep me busy," he said. The Kennedys will move into a house, now under construction, in Avalon Beach after Kennedy retires. Kennedy said he will experiment in retirement until he finds something he likes to do.

"That day may be writing, I don't know. But I just want to be involved in something where people are saying, 'Hey, recognize me and I'm asking questions.'"

Younger agrees to debate with Brown

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Attorney General Evelie Younger announced Thursday she has agreed to appear with "Performer Edmond G. Brown Jr. in two televised debates sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

Younger, the Republican contender in the November gubernatorial race, made the statement after a meeting with the League of Women Voters. Brown had agreed a month ago to participate in the one-hour debate scheduled for Oct. 15 in San Francisco and Nov. 2 in Los Angeles.

Younger spokesman Ken Rieti said the attorney general had been hesitant to accept the debate offer, "But I think it would be the only way we get Gov. Brown to debate." In the first program, the candidates are to discuss the aftermath of Proposition 13, with the second focusing on the candidates' views on California's natural resources and development.

Brown and Younger are to be questioned for 30 minutes apiece by reporters and other participants, and are expected to debate directly for another 30 minutes. Younger has agreed to debate for the League on several occasions before, but the November debate will be the only one she has agreed to debate with candidates fielding questions from jour-
The Kennedy era

Mustang Daily has taken issue with Kennedy on numerous occasions. We have meant no personal rivalry toward the man himself when we disagreed with him on policies and actions.

But on the other hand, we can find numerous records for supporting that Kennedy not retire and continue his politics. We admit that the image of Kennedy in the minds of students may not be favorable. For a variety of reasons, some may not remember him because he refuses to be shackled on the past. It goes to show that the big shift of the Gay Students Union five years back.

We are, however, swayed that students do not recognize the contributions he has made to the University. Students do not know that it le Kennedy's good reputation when Cal Poly stands in line with other colleges and universities when building and other hands are dispensed.

Poly administrators have desperately tried to convince Mustang Daily that rape is not a problem. Frankly, we aren't buying their stories.

We strongly urge women in San Luis Obispo, whether on campus or off not to walk alone at night or at least walk the campus or a friend or a friend's escort to their journeys. Witness by the recent uprising of rape reports, one should put themselves in a potentially dangerous situation merely because of ignorance.

Tonight, at 7 p.m. in the county courthouse area, we will be a panel program devoted to issues surrounding the crime of rape. Legal representatives and law enforcement officials as well as medical personnel. Your participation is encouraged.

Student vote

We were happy to see more than 1,400 students register to vote in the recent Cal Poly campaign conducted during registration.

The tedious and sometimes frustrating job of registering students to vote for far from over, however.

In March, students who have registered to vote will have the opportunity to elect two new student representatives and a campus-wide slate of candidates.

As of now, we remain, last year's candidates decided whether the students were trying desperately to inform the city officials about the housing crunch and in particular, the R-1 ordinance.

After the deal had settled, students realized their crisis fell on deaf ears.

As of now, we are still not convinced. As of now, we are still not convinced.

We know that "Power to the people", sounds cliche, but we have learned that votes are sometimes the only words politicians can understand.

The case of battered wives

Most law enforcement agencies in the United States today claim to have at least minimum protection and prevention rates on most felony crimes. Unfortunately, there is a crime going on in the American home that is called the intimate unprotected and barely makes it on the police statistics each year. The crime is wife beating.

Wife beating, or to so it to our images of love and marriage, has suddenly emerged as a major social issue. According to this survey, at least 70% of American society's recognized and most violent social problems Chicago police, for example, estimate that 3000 of the city's 11,000 aggravated assaults (where the victim is brought to a hospital) are women abused by husbands or boyfriends.

One study suggests that each year, as many as 4.5 million American women have been battered at least once by men.

The actual figures may be many times higher, because child abuse, the deliberate injury of a wife by her husband has traditionally been considered not only a family matter, but the domestic's pernicious.

Marital abuse has been home from the hospital for only two days after giving birth to her second child, where she, unemployed, and a drug addict, stumbed into the bathroom and began to beat her kid and kick him in the stomach.

Several weeks later, she was at it again — this time pneumoniaed her head and face with his fists. Bruised and shaken, Marina fled to the Washington, D. C. Attorney General's office, where an impassioned U.S. attorney demanded to press criminal charges because there was no evidence of a dangerous weapon.

A sympathetic social worker spent hours phoning local agencies trying to find temporary shelter for Marina and her son. There was no "open." We had to send her right back to the same place where she had been hurt and battered.

In the case of Marina, as in many others, the history of their failed to prevent the abused woman.

For the woman involved in personal, litigation, lawyers are often not willing to accept the case because they feel they are not equipped to handle the emotional stress of these cases.

LEARNING ABOUT LAW THE HARD WAY

BY BOB HOWARD
Daily Staff Writer

For Jon Gorgan and Fred Moore the Diablo Canyon protest was more than something to follow in the news. To them it has meant a firsthand experience with the county jail and sheriff's lockup.

Gorgan, a 27-year-old student demonstration major, has served part of the sentence he received after attempting to copy Peace Pag and Elec­

On Aug. 6, along with 400 other people, Gorgan was arrested. He defended herself in a jury trial and was found guilty.

The purpose of the operation by Abalone Alliance and People Generating Energy, the organization, was to bring attention to a project risky to the community and world, and, if possible, to convince PG&E to withdraw their request to operate the plant.

"I didn't do anything more than if I had moved a line to put out a fire," says Nissias. "and there is a fire being built at Diablo Canyon, they're only to light the first match.

"All the teachers want Nissias says she couldn't seem to put the experience behind her and come back to her own living. It took four or five days in jail to look at the judicial end resume summer quarter classes at Cal Poly.

"I kept having the thought something is wrong, something is criminal," says Nissias. After 24 days in jail. "I was very intimidated by the legal process. Now I'm not."

After her arrrest she found it difficult to share her experiences with others. Gorgan and we were not always ready to prepare her trial. This helped to develop her, she says, and learn that ordinary people could get their public service to do their jobs, as well as the judge.

PROTESTER - Fred Moore takes to the news, the words of the_Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant. (Daily photo by Greg Harper)

"I don't believe any of the defendants want to be a financial burden to the community," she says. "The defendants' protest is for a real trial and if found guilty we could serve the community in some charitable way rather than sitting in jail at their expense."

Nissias has served 17 days left to serve during Christmas vacation, but the says she wouldn't hesitate to go through the same experience again to express her beliefs.

Now that her trial is out of the way, she plans to talk to other members of the Abalone Alliance and Peoples Generating Energy with their help. She also wants to help the groups, lawyers, com­municate with each other.

Most of the demonstrators arrested on Aug. 6 and 7 cooperated to some degree with police efforts to arrest, back and jail them. Only one person refused to give his name and address - Fred Moore, a 27-year-old former U.C. Berkeley master's student. Moore says because of this act of non-cooperation, he was physically and psy­chologically tortured by San Luis Obispo County Sheriff's Department officers.

Moore has been active in past years in the civil rights movement, the anti-draft movement, and the peace movement during the Vietnam War.

"Each time I am arrested," he says, "I try to decide what is the best response. Sometimes I defend myself in court, sometimes I have an attorney and sometimes a public defender.

Learning to cope with anxieties of college

BY SATHY MCMENIE
Daily News Writer

College can be a strange and harrow place for new students, who have to adapt to being alone and handling things on their own, according to a health survey. The survey, released in October, was part of the "College Health Assessment" survey, which is conducted annually to assess the health needs of college students. The survey found that many students feel overwhelmed by the demands of college, and that they lack the support systems that they had in high school. The survey also found that many students feel isolated and disconnected from their peers. The survey results suggest that there is a need for more support and resources for college students, especially those who are first-generation or low-income. It is important for universities to establish robust support systems, such as counseling and mental health services, to help students cope with the challenges of college.
SLA leaders sentenced to prison

OAKLAND (AP) — William and Emily Harris were sentenced Tuesday to 10 years in prison for the kidnapping of Patricia Hearst, ending the long saga of the self-styled Symbionese Liberation Army.

But lawyers for the couple, stringing new state laws, said they actually will spend only about five more years behind bars.

"The Harrises consider this the end of an era," attorney Susan Jordan said moments after the sentencing, which marked the last litigation pending against survivors of the terrorist S.L.A.

Harris, 33, and Mrs. Harris, 31, smiled broadly and mainly accepted the prison sentences.

Mrs. Harris, clad in a floral print dress, sat with her arm around her husband’s shoulders as Alameda County Superior Court Judge Stanley P. Gold briefly read off the sentences required under California’s old indeterminate sentencing law.

"The defendant is sentenced to the state prison of the state of California for the term prescribed by law," the judge read aloud four times for each defendant.

Then, attorney Leonard Wienglass asked if Harris would make a brief statement and the judge nodded.

"I just wanted to tell all the folks out there that have been behind us to keep them happy and I love you very much," Harris said.

He turned his back on the judge and faced a courtroom packed with reporters and supporters.

Harris, wearing a blue denim jacket and jeans, told the crowd, "We’re feeling very strong today," and ended with a Spanish phrase that could mean "I’m in love with you until I die." Harris said.

The Harrises were sentenced on four counts of kidnapping, false imprisonment and armed robbery in connection with Mias Hearsfs abduction Feb. 4, 1974.

The Harrises have said they are proud of kidnapping Miss Hearst and believe the notorious abduction showed the world the power of revolutionary ideas.

Laguna homes still shaky

LAGUNA BEACH (AP) — Geologists and disaster workers in this exclusive seaside community kept careful watch yesterday over a still-shaky neighborhood devastated by mysterious landslides that showed, shifted and ripped apart at least two dozen hillside homes.

About seven acres of the residential area of Bluffard Canyon with its homes valued between $130,000 and $700,000 were ravaged by the slow-moving landslides that began shortly before 6 a.m. Monday.

Rescue workers reported only a handful of injuries, most of those men and women, no serious died in eightfacebooked into the hill in the foggy darkness. One woman suffered a broken shoulder.

Olson said a half-dozen other homes were hanging precariously over crumbling cliffs and "they could go at any time." About 300 people were evacuated from endangered homes.

Carter’s kin asks pardon

SACRAMENTO (AP) — President Carter’s imprisoned nephew says that if his uncle decides to grant clemency to Patricia Hearst he hopes the president will pardon him, too.

The nephew, William Carter Spann, is an inmate at the California Medical Facility at Vacaville, about halfway between Sacramento and San Francisco.

He made his statement in a letter Monday to Sacramento television station KXTV. Miss Hearst, serving a 7-year sentence for her part in the robbery of a San Francisco bank 10 weeks after being kidnapped, had asked the president for clemency.

Spann says he has served almost three years of a 10-years-to-life sentence for robbing a San Francisco bar of $320.

"I'm still not a bank, but if you're here, I sure I didn't fly any shots. I hope my uncle Jimmy will be so kind as to pardon me along with Miss Hearst," Spann said.

He said he has served more time than Miss Hearst, and added, "Fair is fair — or is it?"

Levi’s trademark copied

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — For the second time, Levi Strauss & Co. is suing Blue Bell Inc. for using ribbon tabs in Wrangler pocket seams.

The suit filed in U.S. District Court Monday asks for an order to stop Blue Bell from using tabs on shirt pockets. Because they are "likely to cause confusion, mistake or to deceive consumers," the company is seeking an injunction.

Levi claims the tab in pockets is its second most valuable trademark, second only to the word "Levi's."

Carew wins 7th bat title

By BRUCE LOWNIT

AP Sports Writer

When the San Francisco 49ers acquired O.J. Simpson and traded away Dwight Williams, they lost two of the NFL's biggest names. But when Baltimore Ravens acquired Lydell Mitchell to San Diego and picked up Joe Washington, the Chiefs gained two — and surprising, too.

Trading in any sport is a tricky business. Sometimes it works, sometimes not. Last year's supercrop can be this year's merry martlet. Last year's unknown can be this year's star. A glance at a few National Football League deals will point that out.

Most deals are hard to assess, since teams usually trade players for draft choices rather than other players. But five games into the 1978 season, those are worth scrutinizing.

In the most notable trade preceding the season, Joe Thomas, the 49ers' general manager, opted for a shot at a bigger gate with the game's season opener. Williams, with his $73,000-a-year contract, returned to the city of his childhood in exchange for a rest of draft choices.

That made Del Williams and his $125,000-a-year salary expendables, so San Francisco traded him to Miami. The 49ers, winners after their first five games a year ago, managed to win their first one this year Sunday, beating winless Cincinnati. The attendance has improved a bit. Last year's total after two games was 78,813. This year's is 90,008. That's up about $10,000, if you factor in the salary difference between Williams and Simpson, it cost San Francisco an extra $1 million just to get each of those additional fans into Candlestick Park.

Williams, 8th in the National Conference and 10th in the league in rushing in 1977 with 931 yards, they lost third in the league with 1,203 yards a year earlier, heads the 49ers' backfield. Last year, his fifth pro season, he carried the ball 136 times for 1,203 yards and eight touchdowns.

Poly's Mike Raymo player of the week

Cal Poly tailback Mike Raymo has been named CCAA player of the week. He was credited with six unassisted tackles, helped out on six more and had 3 tackles behind the line of scrimmage and 2 fumble recoveries.

Raymo is a 3-year varsity man from Santa Monica High school. He was moved from middle linebacker to the outside and played an outstanding game against Fresno State last Saturday.

Carew has said that he will play next year and turn pro and if the Twins don't have their third baseman, he was unhappy with his $175,000 per year contract.

While Carew remained the dominant hitter in the American League, the slugging Dave Parker of Pittsburgh became the first Pisces player of the week since the late Roberto Clemente in 1968. But Parker was the second straight National League batting champion.

The slugging Parker, who also missed a few playing time because of a broken cheekbone suffered in a mid-season collision with New York Met's pitcher, won a brilliant mid-season surge and wound up with a .364 average for ahead of Steve Garvey of the Los Angeles Dodgers, the runner-up at .316.

NFL trades can be tricky

But have to unimpressed with Williams' replacement, 6'2" running back Joe Washington. The 49ers acquired O.J. Simpson from Buffalo, gave up the No. 1 pick in the draft and wound up with 17 additional fans into Candlestick Park.

In the league in rushing in 1977 with 931 yards, Williams, fifth in the league in rushing In 1976, when he led the league with 1,203 yards and eight touchdowns on 136 carries this season, these are worth scrutinizing, since teams usually trade players for draft choices, rather than other players. The Poly jinx lives on Turning right onto Highway 41 from the 101, in Paso Robles, I glanced at my watch which read 3:30 in the afternoon. It was 100 miles to Fresno and I knew I was going to get hot.

My wife and I were on our way to see the Bulldogs host the Mustangs. We were running late. Becky, my wife, had been delayed, and we couldn't get away until after 3:30. The game was to start at 1 and I wanted to arrive by 1:00.

Dusty, white mists, probably important to keep up windshields, were everywhere. Crusing up 49 on the right there was a giant American flag hanging limp, like our hair was by this time, and shortly after a giant time and temperature sign. It was 5:16 and 105 degrees. I began to feel a little uneasy for the football players who I knew would be hiking hard and long.

Becky, who was not only, if she wanted to make the trip the first place, was positive now that we knew she was back in Los Osos and a nice one to boot. But tough luck as signs stated Fresno was moving, I always lose my way in the large city. Even though it is said not to happen. The reeaa all run north-south and east-west but nevertheless here we were going the wrong way on Tulare Street.

Pulling off the street at a gas station, where a long-haired young man told me to go back the way I came into town, turn right and go to 21st Street where you can't miss the stadium.

Great! I said to myself. Now you can get there, turn the signal on again everything is lost.

Lights of Rainbow Stadium were up ahead and slowly but surely we were getting there.

Entering the stands, I looked for some familiar faces, anyone, from Cal Poly as well.

Our ears were filled with sounds I had heard before. The Pride of the Pacific, the Cal Poly Marching Band were coming down below. Everyone they weren't marching. They were there for a good time and to conclude the Fresno band. It was no contest. The Banding Bulldog band, dressed in blue and white traditional uniforms, had never been seen in the 105-plus-degree temperatures. But the Poly band, dressed in shriteness and jeans, played, yelled, made jokes and rammed bell.

A Fresno County Sheriff walked by and the band broke into the Jack Webb theme song — Dragnet. The sheriff smiled and congratulated the band through the song. The game was as good as everyone hoped for. When Poly and Fresno get together you never know what will happen.

Last year, in Mustang Stadium, Poly shouldn't have shown up. Fresno had a great team and the final score was 12-3.

I remember last year very well.

Two bulldogs went to high school with me over the years. They stand State and I told me Fresno had a good team this year for sure. But I was sure; being a loyal Poly fan, I expected the Mustangs would kill the Bulldogs. I kept looking off my big mouth and the whole world would not contain.

Before the game I went with the Poly and looked like a high school team. I was laughed at the end I was back to Fresno.

But this year was in another story.

The Bulldogs were too fast for the Mustangs. Methodically they drove down the field, almost with ease. I told Becky we were in for a long night if the looking up.

But, Poly fumbled and linebacker Bill Reeves ran the other way. The Poly band and cheers went up and our offense took the field.

Slowly but surely we drove down the field. Looking like USC and their student body. Even Poly and Locie Johnson, began to get some revenge against Fresno. The offensive line was opening the holes for Johnson and Fullback Paul Hodgson who began to pick up first downs. Then Jackson broke one to the one yard line. Two plays later Hodgson scored, and Poly never smiled.

Becky began to take interest in the game. She disliked, no, hated sports, but when Poly is ahead she can handle it. The Poly band was jamming all night. Becky used to play in high school, the flute, to the steady rhythm.

The game was over and we had won 38-12. It felt good and forgot about last year's mistake. Becky said she actually had a good time. This I couldn't believe, but I wasn't about to change her mind now.

Chinese food sounded good since we didn't have time to eat before the game. Becky saw a small place and went in.

Becky's jet table was obviously an entire family, complete with chopsticks and Chinese language. We thought we would come in on the dinner after the place had closed but a young girl assured us we were still open.

They asked who the game was. After I told them, a technician boy told the Bulldogs couldn't even if the other team didn't show up. Everyone at the table laughed.

I was glad when I saw my friend from Fresno, "Ah, Fresno looked like a high school team."

I can't wait until next year.
ROTC is becoming more fun

Special to the Daily

After 27 years Cal Poly’s Army ROTC program has become one of California’s top five organizations in membership.

When Cal Poly was in a belated grant college it was required for males to join the ROTC during their sophomores and freshmen years.

In 1972 the ROTC became voluntary by law. Enrollment dropped from 1,000 to 150 because it was no longer required.

The reasons for joining are different now. Young men and women are finding the ROTC to be a challenging effective way to complete school and come out ahead, said a military science instructor.

John H. Trahey, assistant professor of military science, explained how students who join the ROTC in their first two years of school have no obligation to the Army. After their junior year they must sign a contract and become a member of the Army Reserve.

Reserves are paid $100 a month for up to 20 months. This money can be used for anything the reserve wants to use it for, usually it will be schooling, said Trahey.

Reserves earn degrees in an academic field of their choice while the ROTC is considered an elective field. Upon graduation the reserve can go into active duty, the military reserve or possibly get a scholarship which requires the reserve to enter active duty.

The majority of ROTC graduates go on to active duty by choice. By taking an active duty out the recruit will get a commission, go to a basic training camp for 1-12 weeks and will be considered in an inactive duty status for 3 to 4 years.

After this time the recruit may or may not continues with the army.

The young men and women who do join the Army ROTC come in with a positive attitude.

"All have, in my opinion, their own objectives though it is not uncommon to find students who had parents in the army," said Trahey. "The students we get are giving a little more mature than the others kids, they’re talking in an extra burden, fighting poor groups.

The ROTC gives students a head start into leadership. explained Trahey. The military services can open up opportunities normally much greater than those available to non-military people, he added.

"I’m wondering how to make friends among Cal Poly’s 15,978 students? Do you feel that your attempts at leadership are changing people away?"

If so than H.U.G. could be something you might want to embrace.

H.U.G. stands for Human Understanding and Growth, a student-run organization designed to help students, faculty and staff at Cal Poly improve their communication and leadership skills.

Bob White, a math major, and Rob Reller, an agriculture student at Cal Poly, are two of the students conducting a weekend-long retreat from Oct. 6 through Oct. 8 at Camp Pinecrest in Cambria.

Reller described the three-day session as being a way for people to discover how to work together in groups and to give people an opportunity to see how others react to them.

It’s not an encounter group," he said. "It gives people the opportunity to be more open with others and enables them to get strength from others.

In the end the workshops have gotten people to listen and quiet people to talk," said Heller.

H.U.G. offers a retreat from Oct. 6 through Oct. 8 at Camp Pinecrest in Cambria.

Spoden said most people come away with the feeling that they are better able to deal with others. "Some people have even said the experience has changed their lives," said Spoden.

The reason for this type of retreat is to encourage the student run activists and faculty members are encouraged to "take some risks, open up to people and get some feedback from them," Spoden explained.

Enrollment for the weekend retreat is limited to 60. Sign up at the Ticket Office or call Rob White at 773-5410 or Sue Spoden in the Activities Office at 546-5476.
Pesticide regulation shakeup due

SACRAMENTO (AP) - California's pesticide regulation program needs a major upgrade before it is on par with new state environmental requirements, a state report said.

The report, prepared by a 1976 state attorney general's opinion that pesticide spraying must meet California Environmental Quality Act standards, was the first of its kind ever undertaken by the state.

The critical conclusions of the report were that pesticide spraying does not meet the environmental standards established by the state. The report also recommended that the state's pesticide regulation program be upgraded to meet the new standards.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Mailbox and newspaper deliveries are in for a major shakeup as the Postal Service prepares to switch to a new delivery system.

The plan, known as the "alternative delivery" system, will use private delivery companies to deliver mail and newspapers to your door. The change is expected to take place in July and will cost the Postal Service billions of dollars.

The current system, in which mail is delivered by the Postal Service, is expensive and inefficient. The new system is expected to save the Postal Service billions of dollars over the long term.

The move to alternative delivery is expected to have a significant impact on the publishing industry. Many magazines and newspapers are considering switching to the new system to save money and improve delivery times.

However, the change is not without its challenges. The Postal Service will have to work closely with private companies to ensure that mail and newspapers are delivered on time and in good condition.

The alternative delivery system is expected to be formally announced in early July.
