Sign Up for Summer Veggies at Cal Poly Organic Farm

SAN LUIS OBISPO -- Sign up now for a season of summer fruits and vegetables grown on Cal Poly's 11-acre organic farm. The farm is accepting new members for the summer seasons of its Community Supported Agriculture Program, which provides members with a weekly box of the farm's harvest.

Heirloom tomatoes are in now, as well as basil, cucumbers, lettuce, hot peppers, bell peppers, beans, eggplant, cherries, peaches and more.

Subscribers can purchase a 12-week subscription for a large box, designed to feed a family of three to five and available for $318 ($26.50/week), or a small box, designed for a family of one to three people for $240 ($20/week).

Along with fresh produce, subscribers receive a weekly newsletter with recipes highlighting the week's bounty.

Cal Poly students pick and pack the fresh produce boxes on Mondays and Thursdays for pick-up at the Cal Poly Organic Farm. For $1 more per week, subscribers can pick up their weekly boxes at select locations in Paso Robles, Morro Bay, Atascadero, Avila Beach, Pismo Beach and downtown San Luis Obispo.

For more details, e-mail orgfarm@calpoly.edu, or contact Cindy Douglas, farm manager, at 805-756-6139. To sign up online and pay by credit card, visit www.calpolyorgfarm.com.
