Senate to reconsider CAR priority; denies ticket surcharge

Mark Tobey exhibit at the UU

Baker details separation of PE department, athletics

Art is undefinable since beauty is in the eye of the beholder, but the print exhibit of the late artist Mark Tobey leads the primary question, "what is art?"

The University Union Galerie is housing prints by the American abstract expressionist who set the trend for 20th Century abstract art. Many of Tobey's non-representational paintings are rare and have never been shown before, so the Galerie has extended its hours.

New hours for the exhibit are Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday noon to 5 p.m. The show is being sponsored by Hans Burkhard in cooperation with Fine Arts, Business and the university's art department. The Tobey exhibit will run through Feb. 6.

Tobey's paintings are filled with his fascination with Oriental mysticism and a non-representational style that includes images including Jackson Pollock's "drip" technique. Tobey's contribution to art took root in his early years. He first began to formally study at the Chicago Art Institute in 1907. He studied Oriental art, literature and mysticism which led him to become a member of the American Association of Oriental Art in 1925. He traveled extensively around the world, his paintings and statements are reflected in his work. Tobey spent his last 45 years working with oils, light, space and motion. He died in 1977.

Campaign diversion

The illusion of becoming our next president has exploited Governor Brown’s mind. California’s ambitious leader has confused duties and responsibilities in his quest to move into the White House.

In California, the office of attorney general is designed to be politically independent. Unlike his federal counterpart, who is chosen by the president and must obey his wishes, the attorney general in our state has a constitutional responsibility to represent the public interest.

The two job titles obviously parallel, but like the names governor and president, and state and federal attorney general, representation couldn’t contrast more.

Brown’s 1980 budget cried “timber” after the governor felled Attorney General George “Duke” Deukmejian with a major chop in allocating financing for that office. Apparently the governor would like the attorney general to be a sounding board for his own philosophy while Deukmejian prefers to use his judgement on how to best serve public interest.

Consequently, Brown diminished the attorney general’s 1980 budget.

Brown counter-attacked Deukmejian with the budget cut because he claimed Deukmejian has failed to represent several state agencies in various litigations.

These charges by Brown crumble. Over 9,000 new civil and criminal cases were begun by the attorney general in 1979 on behalf of state agencies and officials. Out of those thousands, there were only two instances in which the state was refused a defense when it was an actual participant: a suit by the State Board of Equalization and a legal challenge to the state’s collective bargaining law.

Deukmejian felt the state board was forcing him to advocate a position constraining Proposition 13 and the public will. In the other case, Deukmejian said he would be representing an issue which is unconstitutional.

Brown should remember where he is and what office he holds. Ironically, Brown hasn’t been in the state long enough to run his own office, let alone any other one.

I have never understood people’s infatuation with skiing. To me, lying on a sandy beach and soaking up the warm sun is infinitely more pleasurable than piling on layers of socks, sweaters and mittens and standing in half-hour-long lift lines only to abuse my body with bumps and falls on the way down the slope.

But then I’ve never been into masochism either.

Despite my aversion to the sport, the world’s love of skiing intrigues me. Being the inquisitive person that I am, I decided to blow my savings account and take a week-long vacation in Oregon over Christmas break with 34 avid ski bums to discover the joys of skiing.

No one ever said I was smart.

When I was actually standing at the foot of Mt. Bachelor the white mountain loomed before me, more ominous than the pictures in the travel brochures.

For some reason, I felt apprehensive.

A long wait in the lift line, and I was finally perched on a chair, cruising up the mountain. I turned to the girl sharing the ride with me to ask for some advice on how to get down the hill. I could tell she was a veteran by the thick stack of old lift tickets on the zipper of her jacket.

“Just take the run to the far right,” she said and disappeared. There are a couple of tough spots, but basically it’s pretty easy. You do know how to sideslip don’t you?” I gulped.

“Just take that far run and you’ll make it. It’s called Last Chance,” she said.

I was doomed.

I followed a few skiers on a wide path to the right. So far, so easy. Then I turned around and I just about fainted. The path before me was not a ski run, but a suicidal cliff. I felt like I was on top of the world with no place to go but straight down. My stomach flip-flopped. "Hey," I yelled to a guy near me. "Is there an easy way to get off this slope?"

"Oh, you can do it," he grinned. "Just sideslip it."

I locked down the mountain again and then turned to the skier.

"There is absolutely no way I can ski down this thing. I’m going to take my skis off and walk down."

Author Cathy Spearmak is a senior English major and a Mustang Daily editorial assistant.

The guy just looked at me and grunted. "Don’t do that," he said as if I were contemplating sacredness. "You can ski it. Just make fun of it."

"Sorry," I said and bent over to unmap my bindings. The guy looked at me in total disgust and took off down the hill.

Lesson number one: Skiers NEVER take off their skis—they’d rather die first.

I slipped down the cliff, falling and getting up again until I reached a place more conducive to my beginning skills. I fastened on my skis and skied to the bottom where I saw another person from my group.

"Hey Cathy, how’d you like that run?" he asked.

"It was awful. I had to walk down half of it," I confessed.

"You walked? That’s terrible," he said.

"Don’t you know how to sideslip?" I decided I had enough acting for one day and headed back to the lodge to join the crowd in the bar. It was 2 p.m. now, so I didn’t feel so guilty about drinking. And all I was after that. The next day I took a lesson to find out what the back a sideslip was, and here is in the week I even skied Last Chance all the way down. Unusual triumph.

But even after that entire week, I never figured out what makes a skier tick. They must be masochists because I give me a sunny beach with a few little feet and I’m happy. I just too bad it took $200 to figure that out.
WASHINGTON (AP) - The Carter administration is considering trying to set up rival Olympic sites in the Soviet Union and hopefully in a country where the Soviets may use chemical warfare and disrupt the normal life of the Afghan government's support for the Afghan army.

And in testimony on Capitol Hill last month, a Los Angeles Times reporter said various other Russian army support vehicles in Kabul were outfitted with chemical protective gear.

"We cannot but qualify the activities of the above-mentioned journalists as flagrant interference in the affairs of the sovereign state of Afghanistan. That is why the Revolutionary Council has taken a decision to expel American journalists from Afghanistan," Tass quoted the decree as saying.

Almost all of the 50 or so American journalists now in Kabul, the Afghan capital, arrived in the past three weeks.

Afghan army officers went to the Intercontinental Hotel on Wednesday night and demanded that the American correspondents return their passports. The Americans refused, and summoned U.S. Embassy officials who then met with the officers at the hotel and said afterward there had been "a misunderstanding" that would be cleared up Thursday.

The economy: More up and down

WASHINGTON (AP) - It hadn't been for rising taxes. Americans would have finished 1979 in a virtual draw with inflation, Commerce Department figures showed Thursday.

The Commerce Department said total personal income increased 12 percent during the year to a total of $2,022.5 billion. The increase nearly matched the rate of inflation.

While overall income increased last year, taxes rose at a faster rate, up 16.8 percent. The result was that after-tax income increased only 8.7 percent, which trailed the rate of inflation.

The figures, contained in the Commerce Department's year-end report on personal income, inflation and government subsidies, show rising prices in two ways, once through higher prices and again through higher taxes.

The increase occurs because Americans demand more income to keep pace with rising prices. But as incomes rise,

Toto to perform in Main Gym

In terms of sales, Toto is one of the hottest rock bands to roar out of Los Angeles since the Knack. Are these studio players as good as their reputations? Cal Poly students and local residents will have a chance to find out Sunday night as ART Concerts presents Rick Derringer and Columbia recording group Toto. But don't run out and try and buy tickets: because the show sold-out two days ago.

The show is set for 8 p.m. in the Main Gym to remind those who already have tickets. With a triple platinum award for their debut album Toto, the group should put on an impressive show. Toto boasts many seasoned musicians including veteran drummer Jeff Porcaro, whose recording credits include Joe Sogno and Steely Dan. David Paich, co-writer on Joe Sogno's Silk Degrees, keyboardist Steve Porcaro, Jeff's brother, Steve Lukather on guitar and Bobby Kimball is Toto's lead singer. Rounding out the rhythm section is bass player David Hungate, who has played for Barbara Streisand, Leo Sayer and the Pointer Sisters. Opening act Rick Derringer is also a noteworthy entertainer having scored a major success with his album All American Boy and the single Rock 'n' Roll Hootchie Koo.

Toto may be the name of Japan's largest manufacturer of bathroom fixtures, but this group hopefully won't wash-out in all the rain.

BE ON THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS AT 22.

Think of a ship as a corporation, and it's not far fetched at all. A destroyer may have fifteen officers, other ships even fewer. Even the most junior officer gets to share in running the show. You become part of the management team when you get your commission as an ensign after just 16 weeks of leadership training at Officer Candidate School. Choose to be a Navy officer and you are responsible for people and equipment almost immediately. Many officers go on for further advanced schooling. The Navy has literally dozens of fields for its officers—everything from nuclear propulsion to systems analysis, oceanography to inventory management. In graduate school, this training would cost you thousands, but in the Navy, we pay you. Ask your Navy representative about officer opportunities, or mail this coupon for more information. Rams: defense vital

It's too bad that football games can't be rained out—then maybe the Rams wouldn't have to play the Pittsburgh Steelers on Sunday.

So far, the point spread shows the Steelers as favorites by 10 to 12 points. Take an even bet on the Rams, and the odds are 1-1. The idea is prevailing that the Steelers shouldn't even have to show up on Sunday to win their fourth Super Bowl.

Maybe the team could just send a couple of representatives to pick up the winner's check and the trophy.

The Pittsburgh Steelers are a good team, no doubt. But the Rams aren't that bad. Maybe they do have a second-string quarterback and second-string wide receivers who led the team to victory, over America's team, the Cowboys, and the NFL's top defensive team, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Granny Smith is not a Terry Bradshaw, but Ferragamo does get better in every game in which he appears. Preston Dennard and Ron Smith can't compare to Lynn Swann and John Stallworth, but the two Rams receivers have made some outstanding catches in the playoffs so far.

Franco Harris and Lynn Swann have plenty of return yardage. The Rams defense is not a Pittsburgh defense; it's top bad, that football career advancement, and benefits and an extremely modern work environment and accelerated In advanced State-of-the-Art technology, AMI offers exceptional salaries In addition to providing unusual opportunities to become actively involved in advanced research. Sack time

Fred Dryer and Jack Youngblood of the Rams get set to sack Giants quarterback Phil Simms in regular season action. Some commentators say the Los Angeles team’s chances of winning rest primarily on the type of defensive talent as was shown against the Giants. In their last game before they become the Anaheim Rams, the team’s defense will be ready to bring heat to Tom Bradshaw and the rest of the Steelers Sunday at Pasadena in Superbowl IV.

Superbowl a possible surprise

BY DAVID BONTA

Daily News

Those of you who believe in deja vu may want to watch your television sets this Sunday afternoon, when Super Bowl 14 kicks off with the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Los Angeles Rams.

While you’re watching the game, you might like to shut your eyes and think back 11 years. The sight of the News York Jet’s Joe Namath passing and Matt Snell running may come into view.

The exasperation of Baltimore Colt receiver Jimmy Orr standing alone in the endzone, waving his arms, as quarterback Earl Morrall throws incomplete to another receiver...may also be seen in memory.

Eleven years have passed since that unforgettable Super Bowl victory by the Jeta over the Colts, 16-7. Ramesses, as quarterback Earl Morrall throws incomplete to another receiver...may also be seen in memory. The Rams have an inexperienced quarterback and a runner who furthers too much.

Yet those same Rams surprised everyone this year and won the NFC championship game. They did not even choke in playing against the Dallas Cowboys as they have in the past.

Winning doesn’t have to be pretty, and the Rams are living testimony to that. But they won, and now find themselves in the Super Bowl.

“Do what” you may ask. The Rams are 11-point underdogs to the defending world-champion Pittsburgh Steelers, and that point spread is probably understandable. The Steelers have everything going for them. For example, there is “Steel Curtain,” and there is Bradshaw, Swann, Harris and company.

Yet if you look back to a little over a decade ago, you’ll find that Baltimore was in a similar situation. The Colts were three-touchdown favorites, and they too had every right to be “Like Pittsburgh, Baltimore had an outstanding defense led by Bubba Smith and a potent offense with Morrall, Tom Matte and Willis Richardson, but somehow, inexplicably, they lost.

Actually, it later turned out to be not so mysterious. The Colts lost because of Namath’s and Snell’s performances and their own mental mistakes. Here lies another similarity between the Steelers and the Colts. Every game Pittsburgh has lost this year has been because of their own mistakes. Their toughest opponent has been themselves.

Since the Rams don’t have a Joe Namath, they will have to rely on Pittsburgh mistakes for victory. If the Rams turn out to be the Super Bowl champions, it will be a matter of the Steelers losing the game rather than the Rams winning it.

So if you are a Rams fan, pray that the Steelers have an abundance of turnarounds and poor memories. Because as philosopher George Santayana said, “Those who do not remember the past are condemned to relive it.”

(AP)—With a 60-percent chance of rain over Southern California tonight, the chance is slim that Rose Bowl officials will have a dry parking lot for Sunday’s Super Bowl contest.

National Weather Service forecaster Don Galas predicted one-quarter to a half-inch of rain, in Los Angeles through Friday morning.
