Poly weathers storm; minor damage is reported

The pigs up at the Swine Unit love the rains according to Greg Hanger, a student who works there.

The people working there aren't as enthusiastic. Hanger said that part of a road near the unit washed out when Stenner Creek overflowed its banks during last weekend's downpour.

The only problems at the Swine Unit were seepage and a tree blown down due to the heavy winds of the storm. Tartaglia said no major damage occurred on campus as a result of the storm.

"It's just a major clean-up operation," said Tartaglia.

"It's just a major clean-up operation," said Tartaglia.

Other places in outlying regions that were affected were the Sheep Unit, the crops area, Poly Canyon Road and Feed Mill Road. The Sheep Unit was barricaded Saturday because of the high water level of the creek. Poly Canyon road had several minor mud slides, while the crops area was saturated with water that the resulting run-off caused some flooding on Highlands Drive, said Tartaglia.

Four inches of water was found in the basements of offices and rooms of the football stadium. There was minor seepage and a tree blown down. The water has since been removed and the structure incurred no permanent damage, Tartaglia said.

The only situation that could have been a major problem was the flooding, basement at Vista Grande restaurant, he said. A plugged up storm drain caused the water to flow six inches of water, which was removed and put back into the block drain. The water has since been removed from Vista Grande and squqeuages.

"If this had not been caught, it could have been serious," said Hanger.

Speaker: Playing vital

Being able to play, whether it be football, strumming a guitar or riding a roller coaster, is vital to maintaining one's emotional equilibrium, said a Cal Poly psychologist at a lecture in the University Union on Thursday.

Dr. Ned Schultz, a member of the Development department, spoke on the theme "Staying Young, Safe and Happy: The Significance of Play and Activities." He is the fourth part of the Arts and Humanities Lecture Series entitled "Play.

Again—alcohol

The issue of alcohol on campus has been debated until people are blue in the face. It has been discussed forward, backward, inside out, up one side and down the other—and still there seems to be no decision or even a consideration toward a change of policy dealing with alcohol at Cal Poly. Basically, it seems everyone is either bored with the topic or has given up hope that it will ever be changed.

Recently there has been a resurrection of the alcohol issue. The ASI President, Rose Kranz, has drafted a bill which would allow a fraternity to serve beer at its Poly Royal barbeque. Kranz and her staff have gone before various groups on campus to gain support of the bill before presenting it to university President Warren Baker for final consideration.

Currently, petitions are being circulated in hopes of gaining as much general student support as possible for the alcohol at Poly Royal proposal.

But the bill may run up against a stumbling block in the student senate. The issue has come up twice before the senate in the past two weeks and both times has been tabled for further discussion. There are indications that the senate is, at best, divided on the alcohol issue.

We support bill 80-11 which would allow alcohol to be served during Poly royal and Kranz spearheading the proposal. Instead of generalizing about the vague idea of "alcohol on campus", the bill sets down specific guidelines to work from. It provides as way to ease into alcohol at Cal Poly without strapping President Baker into an "all or nothing" situation.

We hope those on student senate will see the merits of this plan and vote favorably when it comes before them next Wednesday night. By voting against the bill the senators will in essence be supporting the paternalistic attitude toward alcohol which presently exists at Cal Poly. Whether or not they want alcohol on campus is beside the point—the real issue is allowing students freedom of choice in the matter. As we have stated previously, we must be treated as adults—whether it means carrying a gun or buying a beer.

Of course, the final decision lies in the hands of President Baker, but we hope all students at Cal Poly will show the support needed to pass a bill of this magnitude.

Students show support for new Iranian leader

Editor's note: This article on Iranian students' reaction toward the new president was written before President Jimmy Carter's announcement of support for an international commission on the Shah.

BY KARYN HOUSTON
Daily Poly Writer

After 25 centuries of nobility rule, the first president of Iran was sworn in by the ailing Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini recently. The man who brought the nation to the verge of an outright war is now being hailed as a savior. Ahmad Vahledian is a 22-year-old social science major. He attired Cal Poly for two quarters.

Vahledian points out that "Mr. Bani-Sadr has not done anything yet, it's too early to talk about him." However, according to Vahledian, the new president was an active revolutionary in the past.

"Mr. Bani-Sadr wants and has to support the Iranians' demands," he said, "and the Iranians want the Shah back.

Is there a difference between the new president and Khomeini? "I believe there is no difference," said Vahledian. "They are the same, he follows Ayatollah Khomeini."

And the hostages? Does a new president in Iran improve their chances for freedom? "No," said Vahledian. "This is all Iranians' will-to free the hostages, but unfortunately we have to keep them to tell the people what our demands are. . .

"Since the crisis in Iran, everybody is listening to us...we wish we could establish an open court to try the Shah and expose U.S. foreign policy after World War II.

Vahledian is a firm believer in Islam. He has been in the United States for over three years. His parents send money for school.

Qamar Hakim-Azad is the president of the Iranian club on campus. He supports the new president and has supported Khomeini in the past.

The 26-year-old mechanized agriculture major is in a master's program. He said Bani-Sadr wants to let the hostages go, but the Iranian students will keep them captive until a trial is held for the Shah.

"They still want a trial," said Hakim-Azad, president of the campus club for nine months. The organization has not discussed its feelings about the new president. It has no regular meetings. Both Iranians said they feel it is too early to comment extensively about the new president. They are both going back to Iran upon completion of their education at Cal Poly.

Why attend school in the United States when there is so much happening in Iran?

"Under the Shah's system," said Vahledian, "it was almost impossible to get a higher education. Seventy percent of the people are illiterate there. All the dictators are afraid for the day that their people become literate."

"I believe in social change," he said, "in this century the people are so oppressed. I know how bad it is to be oppressed. I will try my best to free the other people and the only way we can free them is to talk to them and try to inform them."

systems viewpoint," which is what he calls the "process of adaptation to present circumstances."

Play, he said, can serve as a method for reaching emotional equilibrium, rather than just being a diversion. Dr. Schultz said the philosopher Plato considered play to be a form of learning.

"This is a very pleasant concept. In leaping, you break free from something, enter into a very different state. With every leap, you land in a different position. Look at play as leaping," he said.

Dr. Schultz also cited the work of the Swiss behavioral psychologist John Piaget, who studied the cognitive abilities of infants and children. Peiget jaded the development period between birth and the age of two years as the sensory-motor operations stage, where little conceptual thought activity occurs, only primary physical activity.

"The cognitive behavior of infants become play behavior of adults," stated Dr. Shcultz. "Look at the Olympics. Watch the skating. One doesn't think, but rather listens to the body." He concluded his lecture on a hopeful note.

"If we think of play as something in itself a process of equilibrium, then we can reach it."

Correction

In the consumer story on Feb. 20, Burger prices, sizes, types vary, popularity is steady, the Big Mac is inaccurately said to have 1/2 of a pound of meat and the regular burger 1/8. The correct weight of the beef in the Big Mac is 1/2 instead of 1/10. Since the Big Mac has two hamburgers, it has 1/8 of a pound of meat altogether.

The regular burger, with double meat, has 1/4 of a pound of meat, the double burger is made with 1/6.
Kelly quits GOP group in scandal

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Richard Kelly of Florida, implicated in the FBI bribery investigation, resigned today from the House Republican conference, saying he wanted to "save the Republican Party from an action that would not be appropriate." Kelly's move halted debate by the conference—the organization of all GOP House members—on a motion by Republican leaders to expel Kelly from the conference because of his admitted acceptance of $25,000 from FBI agents posing as Arab representatives.

GOP leaders said Kelly, in a seven-minute address, handled himself with "aplomb" and was "in good spirits."

Kelly, the only Republican among eight members of congress who were implicated in the FBI undercover operation, said he would not accept any more campaign contributions from the House Republican Congressional Committee.

House leaders, had recommended he be deprived of any future campaign funds from that source. House GOP Leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona said the Republican debate on Kelly did not deal with the question of his guilt or innocence but only on whether his accepting the $25,000 was a violation of House ethical standards. Kelly has said he accepted the money as part of his own investigation into possible wrongdoing.

Kelly's resignation from the conference, which sets policy for House Republicans, does not affect his committee assignments, his right to vote in the House or his right to campaign for re-election as a Republican.

Commenting on Kelly's resignation, Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, a Massachusetts Democrat, said the Republicans "apparently never heard of due process. No democrat has been charged with any wrongdoing; I don't know if any Republican has been."

Hancock places new twist in old play

BY CATHY SPEARNAK

Imagine a charming, likable characterization of Shakespeare's villain Richard the Third is somewhat akin to envisioning life on Mars—a nice thought, but impossible.

Yet, in the Pacific Conservatory of Performing Arts Production of Richard the Third actor Byron Jennings, tricks his audience into believing the evil Richard is merely a charming intellectual in a murderer's disguise.

Acting by ambition, the dastardly Richard plots the murder of all the young nephews. The bloody quest for power proves to be Richard's undoing in the end of the play.

From the moment he limps onto the stage, Jennings has the audience chuckling at Richard's caustic wit. It is an interesting reaction to a character who, in his side, tells the audience exactly who he will kill and how. Richard delights in his hideous deeds, and Jennings has the audience delighting right along with him. The usual pathetic portrayal of Richard turns to merriment, as Jennings charms his audience instead of frightening them.

In addition to Jennings' fine work, the play is backed by solid performances from the rest of the cast. Kathleen Brady is spellbinding as the eerie Queen Margaret. Her characterization's were powerful, letting the audience see beyond his evil. Jennings gives a simpy performance and portrayals against Richard's horrible deeds are powerful, latching the audience see beyond his engaging wit.

Also turning in strong characterization's were Daniel Kramer as the Duke of Buckingham and Richard Poe at the Earl of Richmond. The cast's only disappointment came in the role of Lady Anne. Pat Sibley give a simply performance at best, adding no depth to the character. Effective staging and lighting added positively to the overall outcome of the play. The final scene of battle pitting Richard's forces against the Duke of Richmond is riveting. Staged by actor Jennings, a blend of choreography and gymnastics in the battle scene brings an exciting conclusion to a fine evening of theatre.

Richard the Third will play through Saturday night at the Allan Hancock Theater. For ticket information, phone 922-8313.

When you think of a computer science major, what images spring to mind? Calculations, chess moves, a mind adept with numbers?

All true, but one Cal Poly graduate student in computer science feels equally comfortable with words, and is writing and directing his own play.

The student, Tom Strelich, wrote and is directing a one-set play titled Past Imperfect Tense. The performance of the play will be Thursday, Feb. 28, at 8 p.m. in Room 212 of the H.P. Davidson Music Building.

The play is a comedy about a young man who goes to the beach with his girlfriend. While there, the man vividly remembers his ex-wife.

"It’s consider it a success if we can make people laugh," said Strelich. "It will make people ask questions, too."

The cast members—Larry Seaton, Alison Nigh and Julie Harders—are all veterans of Cal Poly productions, as is Strelich. Seating is limited for the single performance. Admission is $1.

MUSTANG WRESTLERS FACE TOUGH ACTION SATURDAY

A trio of "dream" matches are in store for Cal Poly wrestling fans Saturday afternoon when the Mustangs take on No. 4 Iowa State in the final dual match of the 1979-80 season. Each time is 2 p.m. in Cal Poly's Main Gym. The Mustangs have played later that day against U.C. Riverside at 8 p.m.

It will be strength vs. strength as the Mustangs in Oklahoma, they are 18-4, also losing to Arizona State and Iowa twice and Oklahoma.

The Mustangs boast No. 1 Iowa State will take on Saturday's 27-15 in December on route to a 17-match winning season.

Big matches are also scheduled against No. 177, another top-ranked Michigan. The Cyclone's Dan Allen, ranked No. 10, and Iowa State's Ryan Hughes, ranked No. 10, are both 1-1 against each other.

On Saturday, Cal Poly's Gary Findley will face Iowa State's Perry Hummel, ranked No. 2. Findley is 3-1, his lone loss was a 4-7 decision to Hummel in the finals of the Arizona Invitational in December.

Hummel got revenge for that loss, however, beating Findley in the finals of the meet against Iowa State's Nate Carr (3-2), ranked fifth.

Saturday's dual meet will feature the individual wrestlers who will be bidding for the highest seeding position possible in the national championships next month at Oregon State University.

Victories by Hummel will vault him into a fully operational system configuration in the line-up.

The company's official : "The United States team, said it will not be supplying 700 to 800 of the top seeds in the Black market, is currently reviewing its contracts to send 25,000 of the top seeds in the Soviet Union.

Mortgage loan rate hits 14¼%

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) —Gibralter Savings & Loan announced it was raising its mortgage loan rate to an unprecedented 14¼% for the fifth time in breaking a record of 14 percent by leading the list of major California lending institutions last fall.

Gibralter's increase was 1¼ percentage point above the 13.75% rate announced Tuesday and Wednesday by a number of other California lending institutions.

In addition to the top four Cyclones, three other Iowa State matmen are rated among the best in the nation. Cyclone 145-pounder Dan Brown (14-3) is No. 3 in that nation, while 155-pounder Tim Pickard (24-10) is No. 5, and 190-pounder Mike Mann (21-3) is No. 2.

Mustang heavyweight David Jack (25-5) is No. 11 in his weight division, and will meet Dave Osenbaugh (14-15) Saturday afternoon. They have not met yet this season.

Iowa State has captured the national title in six of the last 20 years, and has finished as runner-up 10 times. The Cyclone's legendary coach, Harold Nichols, warns that his team is "very young. There will be ups and downs and possibly only two juniors in the lineup.

Victories by Hummel will vault him into a fully operational system configuration in the line-up.
