D U  W eek was big hit, director says

BY MELISSA HILTON

Just by registering fees, all Cal Poly students become members of a corporation.

Every spring they elect its president, vice president and board of directors.

The corporation is Associated Students Inc. Its board of directors is the student senate.

Every student pays $20 a year in Associated Students fees yet many don't even know what the initials ASI stand for.

This is the first of a three-part series on Associated Students, Inc.

They're just totally unaware of how ASI permeates student life," said Nick Forestiere, ASI finance committee chairman.

"The things they appreciate sometimes, they don't know that they come from ASI.

ASI Business Affairs Director Roy Gersten points to a graph revealing the increasing student budget.

ASI pervades student life

BY MELISSA HILTON

Just by registering fees, all Cal Poly students become members of a corporation.

Every spring they elect its president, vice president and board of directors.

The corporation is Associated Students Inc. Its board of directors is the student senate.

Every student pays $20 a year in Associated Students fees yet many don't even know what the initials ASI stand for.

This is the first of a three-part series on Associated Students, Inc.

They're just totally unaware of how ASI permeates student life," said Nick Forestiere, ASI finance committee chairman.

"The things they appreciate sometimes, they don't know that they come from ASI.

ASI has two arms—executive and legislative. On the executive side, President Rose Krauss and her assistants coordinate student representatives on most of the academic and administrative committees of the university. They provide student input on university decisions.

On the legislative side, Vice President Jeff Land presides over the student senate. At least two senators are elected from each school on campus.

The senate passes resolutions expressing the ASI stand on major issues before the various committees of the university. But it also budgets and oversees dozens of student groups, ranging from the Week of Welcome Board to the rodeo team.

ASI's income this year is about $320,000 from student fees. $44,700 from savings and bookkeeping services and $377,500 from income-generating events such as films and concerts—a total budget of $742,000.

The only student officers paid by the ASI are the president, vice president, three assistants to the president and the ASI secretary. Krauss earns $2,100 a year, Land earns $1,800, and the other four students earn $400 each.

The Program Board makes and spends more money than any other ASI group, more than $200,000 a year. It sponsors Speaker's Forum, Special Events, and the Concerts, Crafts, Films, Fine Arts, Outings, and Recreation and Tournament Committees, which are all run entirely by students.

In other parts of the country, student associations don't have nearly as much authority over program events, said Roy Gersten, ASI business office director. Student government in California is older and stronger, he said.

See ASI, page 3

UU Week was big hit, director says

BY TERI BAUER

If the Ice Cream Shoppe in the University Union sold single- scoop ice cream cones for half-price, or 15 cents, how many scoops will students buy in one week?

The answer is a whopping 14,310 scoops!

"We sold 14,310 scoops!" said Joe Bowen, chairman of the University Union Board of Governors, after tabulating the results from Kalamazoo, or "UU Week.

The half-price scoops are just one example of the many "good deals" that students took advantage of Feb. 3 through Feb. 9, said Bowen.

For example, they also get free french fries with their hamburgers, large discounts on concert tickets, and free or discounted tickets to the basketball games in the UUGB.

It was a way for us to give students' money back to them," Bowen said.

"Students saved from 1/2 to 1/3 off the normal prices by way of the UUBG subsidizing the week's events.

For example, the Kelly Montezha concert tickets were priced at $2 and Count Basie was $3.50. Both would normally cost students almost double those prices, Bowen said.

"We packed Count Basie for both shows," he said proudly.

Including the concerts, sales and special programs during UU Week, the whole event cost the UUBG $9,000. He said that's about 80 cents per student.

The two concerts were successful. "Thanks to the fantastic effort of Jeff Gee and the ASI Program Board," Bowen said gratefully.

"They, as programmers, had the ability to get these events," he explained. "We financed it, but they did the majority of the work.

Even students who didn't attend the concerts or buy any discounted items discovered more of the UUGB's resources during the week, he said.

"Many people didn't even know there was a dark room in the Craft Center or that you can plan a trip at the Travel Center.

"It's a time to let loose and have some fun," he remarked. "The Union is the 'living room' of the campus.

Mustangs in finals

Basketball team beat Cal Poly Pomona to become CCAA conference champs. The home trek to Tacoma, Washington, to play the playoffs. The tournament is being sponsored by the University of Puget Sound. See page six.
Mustang Daily reporters have often been criticized for inaccurate reporting and irresponsible journalism. As a staff writer, I have lived a fair share of this criticism, as have most of the other reporters.

But, I have now seen the other side of the coin, as I have worked with Mustang Daily and have seen a blatant misuse of journalistic power.

On Friday, Feb. 22, a Daily staff writer wrote an opinion piece concerning the ASI proposal to advertise in Mustang Daily. Not only was there inaccuracies in the piece shocking, the fact that a reporter's privilege can be so recklessly misused is infuriating.

This is not an attempt by the ASI to buy ad space in Mustang Daily. The purpose of the advertising is to encourage student feedback on issues that ASI leaders have the power to act upon: alcohol on campus, priority registration, housing regulations and the role of students in our education.

These issues are definitely not out of the reach of student leaders. ASI President Rose Krahn and her assistants spent several hours each week meeting with administrators to discuss these very topics.

If students had the means to voice their opinions on these issues, their input would be truly considered. Imagine the added clout she would have during an interview with president Baker if she were armed with the written support of several hundred students! Baker, the final decision-maker on any issue, has already indicated that he is interested in student opinion.

The Committee has worked, at times, against student opinion and a great deal.

Student feedback adds credibility to clear-cut issues—it could help clarify the controversial ones.

For example, do the majority of students at Cal Poly feel about alcohol on campus? We all know how the Mustang Daily covers the meetings. But, the need for student participation in all political issues is becoming apparent. The 1980s may see another decade of student activism as we see the controversy of the education reform movement. Therefore, the need is there to promote this type of discourse.

To assume students don't care is unfair. Just the same as assuming all students don't care in Mustang Daily will be used as a political ploy. In reality, this would be a waste of money since reporters already have the opinion of the students.

Letters

Comparing night, day

Editors:
I am writing this letter in rebuttal to "In Support" letter Feb. 15.
I fail to understand the proponent's connection of Gordon's decision to omit instructors' name of future schedule lists to Presidents Carter's reinstatement of the draft. It would be as if to compare night to day.

By no means has everyone relaxed and submit himself and his education to disruptive forces. It is true that opinions of instructors, "easy" or "hard," are highly subjective. But in a highly competitive major like Mechanical Engineering or Architecture, it makes no difference whether the instructors are easy or hard, rather if they are good, effective teachers.

If students' opinions were heard and acted upon, then maybe the quality of the teachers in various departments would increase. Isn't that what real education is all about?

Other than evaluations (which take years to process) what other method is there of "weed out" poor teachers? Besides, by the time the results of evaluations are recognized, often little if anything is done. Also, in the epsilon talk of this ages, many instructors achieve tenure, making it near impossible to replace them.

Either the students' selection of teachers should be allowed to prevail or the state should step up revision of the teachers' contracts, making instructors more of the quality of the students' teaching. Lose secure of their positive tenure standing, instructors will feel more motivated to take an active role in updating the material and making material more pertinent. If the world-a-day world is truly competitive, then it can't exist on the same parameters in this competitive atmosphere.

After all, when survival of the fittest exists every day teachers should be held accountable as student teachers.

David Remaut

Spoon-fed view

Editors:
This letter is written to Doug Hart- stock in response to his letter of ap proval, "It's not good enough," regarding the names of instructors on the class schedule.

Your outlook typifies that of a spoiled brat. You aren't free to make judgments based on your own opinions...

You are speaking of a very small minority when you make statements such as yours. Where did you get your facts when you stated that, "9 out of 10 students" rate instructors as easy-good, hard-bad? You must not be very intelligent when you cannot even believe that there might be teachers at our university who are hiding behind secure tenure positions with unchanging curriculums, libraries and an unchanging attitude toward the students.

There are students who have the ability to make rational judgments about instructors. These students are receiving, and obviously you are not.

In regards to your belief that students stay in school longer than necessary—some of us do support ourselves, but isn't that the "real world" while attending school?

Why do you choose to receive your education at the "Disneyland Hotel"? Obviously you do not have much concern for your future. As far as the draft is concerned, have fun on your Moonraker ride from the Disneyland Hotel to the Persian Gulf!

Judy Terry

Gail C. Sr.

Maureen Lynch

Battling on the other side

Cal Poly students have been treated to something special this quarter — abundant concerts. It was by no accident either, but by hard work of the Concert Committee which brought top-bill groups to out-of-the-way Cal Poly.

The Committee has worked, against seemingly insurmountable problems such as age limits and space availability. Committee Chairman Chris Romak said in praise of the gym is the greatest problem encountered.

No matter; the group has scheduled more concerts this quarter than students are used to. So far Leo Kottke, Jefferson Starship and David Grisman have appeared; Kenny Loggin is yet to come.

Romak said he believes one of the main reasons the concert committee has been successful is the learning experience received from volunteering time.

"You get to learn the business of a real-world situation," Romak said.

The committee is run voluntarily by students, including: Scott Loosley, vice chairman; Pat Benton, treasurer; Debbie Henderson, secretary; Andrea Shapiro, publicity chairperson; Steve Orosz, stage manager; Tim Baer, house manager; Jam Bass, security chairman; and Barb Fleeman, catering coordinator.

But the committee hasn't jumped all hurdles yet. Romak said some concert production, general seating and space availability problems are ever present.

Romak said the committee hopes to have stadium concerts and reserved seating before the end of the school year. We availability problems are ever present.

"You get to learn the business of a real-world situation," Romak said.

The committee is run voluntarily by students, including: Scott Loosley, vice chairman; Pat Benton, treasurer; Debbie Henderson, secretary; Andrea Shapiro, publicity chairperson; Steve Orosz, stage manager; Tim Baer, house manager; Jam Bass, security chairman; and Barb Fleeman, catering coordinator.

But the committee hasn't jumped all hurdles yet. Romak said some concert production, general seating and space availability problems are ever present.

Romak said the committee hopes to have stadium concerts and reserved seating before the end of the school year. We availability problems are ever present.
Handicap hasn’t stopped student

BY MARY KIRWIN

Being paralyzed from the chest down has not changed Morello’s determination to live.
Out of school since September, Morello plans to reclaim his fraternity life spring or summer quarter.

Morello has helped its former president make his comeback as pleasant as possible. Besides periodic return to Cal Poly and fraternity life’s spring or summer trying to ease the pain by the fraternity is one of how Delta Tau is old T e e Telles, said Mordlo slid down a pod died on brothers are raising money to help the Cal Poly senior Visits to see him in San Francisco, his fraternity Handicap hasn’t stopped student

W hen she climbed to the top of the slide, Morello, 22, became paralyzed a weak before the fall quarter began when he dove and hit his head on the bottom of a swimming pool in San Mateo.
The girl who saved Morello from drowning, 10-year-old Trio Morello slid down a pool slide on his stomach. When she climbed to the top of the slide, she saw him lying face down in the water.
The graphic arts major said she and the other fraternity members thought Morello was kidding. She said she soon realized he was not and went down the slide to save him from drowning.

Morello, 22, became paralyzed a week before the fall quarter began when he dove and hit his head on the bottom of a swimming pool in San Mateo. The girl who saved Morello from drowning, 10-year-old Trio Morello slid down a pool slide on his stomach. When she climbed to the top of the slide, she saw him lying face down in the water.
The graphic arts major said she and the other fraternity members thought Morello was kidding. She said she soon realized he was not and went down the slide to save him from drowning.

Morello is at Ray Davies Rehabilitation Center in San Francisco.

Mordlo said there is a 6 percent chance he will regain total or partial feeling over his whole body because his spine was not severed. If his spinal column had been severed, nerves essential for feeling and movement would have been damaged permanently.

"Now I am to the point where I can push my wheelchair, brush my teeth and use adaptive equipment."

Despite the physical hardships Morello is encountering, his spirits seem high.

"Mentally he’s in such good shape," Telles said, adding that the first thing he said when she visited him in the hospital was, "Terri, call my brother, I got to make my football picks for the betting pool."

Even though he’s counting the days, Morello still has about eight weeks of therapy before his release.

"I’m marking the days. I’m finally over the hill and I can see the end."

"I want to get back into learning. I keep up on everyday things but not school things... Cal Poly is a bitch but I really miss it," he said.

Morello immediately rushed Morello to Mills Hospital in San Mateo where he spent three months in a circu-electric bed with his neck in traction.

A circu-electric bed is one in which a patient is strapped in and rotated, first laying on his back looking up at the ceiling, and then hanging from straps looking down at the floor.

Now, undergoing intensive six-hour-a-day therapy, Morello is at Raphael H. Davies Rehabilitation Center in San Francisco.

Morello said there is a 6 percent chance he will regain total or partial feeling over his whole body because his spine was not severed. If his spinal column had been severed, nerves essential for feeling and movement would have been damaged permanently.

"Now I am to the point where I can push my wheelchair, brush my teeth and use adaptive equipment."

Despite the physical hardships Morello is encountering, his spirits seem high.

"Mentally he’s in such good shape," Telles said, adding that the first thing he said when she visited him in the hospital was, "Terri, call my brother, I got to make my football picks for the betting pool."

Even though he’s counting the days, Morello still has about eight weeks of therapy before his release.

"I’m marking the days. I’m finally over the hill and I can see the end."

"I want to get back into learning. I keep up on everyday things but not school things... Cal Poly is a bitch but I really miss it," he said.

Mon. & Tues. Nite Special
Slop and Salad
ONLY $3.95

790 Higuera St.
San Luis Obispo
BY SUSAN MEE

Aside from the usual centerfold and an exclusive photo session with Bo Derek, the March issue of Playboy offers something different—a short story by Dr. Alfred Landwehr, a Cal Poly English professor.

Landwehr, a faculty member for 10 years and the head of the English department writing program, published his short story, A Cup of Coffee with the Cardinals. Although this story, his fifth published, is the most likely to be talked about, Landwehr has also published in Redbook and the lesser-known magazines Contempora and Newsletters.

Daily: Let's talk about your short story. A Cup of Coffee with the Cardinals. How did you get the idea for that story? Was it patterned after anything in your life?

Landwehr: I like baseball. I'm fascinated by its history so I know a fair amount about it. But I've never played minor league baseball. My father is neither alcoholic or a philanderer. I'm obviously married.

But I was very interested in the relationship between America men, their fathers and sports. I think that because of our society, very often American men and their fathers just don't communicate. The idea for the story was in my head for years. But I could never quite figure out how to get it right. When I finally sat down to do the story, I still did not know what I was going to do with it.

What's happened now since the story has been published is that a lot of people have come up to me and said "Is it just like my relationship with my father?" I guess the story really started in 1971, when my wife and I were in Italy.

We met a man named Giovanni. When we left, we said goodbye and he embraced me. It was kind of awkward for me. I realized that it was because of his American male approach to relationships.

Daily: What has been the reaction to your story from your peers? Has there been any criticism for publishing it in Playboy?

Landwehr: No. Everyone has been very pleasant. I'm sure there are some people who don't like it. But generally, most people have said goodbyes and I'm glad I met him.

Daily: Were you at all uneasy about having your story published in Playboy?

Landwehr: No. But I did have one student who came up to me and said, "I read your story," and I said, "Did you?" and he said, "Yes," and just walked away. I didn't know what that meant. I think he was just at a loss for words.

Daily: What happened when you first heard from Playboy? Did they contact you?

Landwehr: They contacted my agent and he sent me a letter of congratulations. I got it in the mail room and screamed!

Daily: Now that you've been published in a high-ranking magazine like Playboy, are you totally embittered or a little scared about publishing again in the same quality of magazine?

Landwehr: No. I'm not worried. I think it will be pretty much the same. The stories still have to be good. The only difference is that at least I can say I've had stories published.

Daily: When did you first begin to write?

Landwehr: Well, I first started writing in high school. But I really didn't start writing seriously until I came to Poly. And then, it probably wasn't until two or three years later that I became really serious.

So it's been seven or eight years. I've wanted to be a writer for a long time. And I finally decided that I wanted to do that. I'm going to have to write seriously. And by that I mean some sort of discipline schedule every day.

Daily: So then you do write every day?

Landwehr: I like to write every day. During the last seven years I have written every day for a large portion of that time. But, I stop, for a while sometimes, and then I'll go back into the pattern of writing.

Daily: Frankly, I'm having trouble getting anything done right now, and that's because of my work load. I'm writing director and the comp. load is heavy. Daily: Do you have a reader who goes over your stories?

Landwehr: No. I'm not writing full time. I would like to write every day. I'm not mass-producing y w r y  and send it off to a lot of publishers. Do you think it is fairly accurate?

Landwehr: Yes. From what I know, most of the publishers don't want to see a xerox copy of your story. They want the original. They don't want to have to keep another copy, and having somebody else accept it. You have to keep to yourself who would give you more money for it.

Daily: If they don't answer your letter or respond to your story, how do you follow up? How far do you go in following up?

Landwehr: They will always return your story or letter. I have stories that are out a long time, and I've written letters asking if they liked it or if they used it as an example of bad fiction for their fiction writing class. The little magazines are often stacked up.

Daily: Do you ever think you will have a hit?

Landwehr: One student who came up to me and said, "I read your story," and I said, "Did you?" and he said, "Yes," and just walked away. I didn't know what that meant. I think he was just at a loss for words.

So it's been seven or eight years. I've wanted to be a writer for a long time. And I finally decided that I wanted to do that. I'm going to have to write seriously. And by that I mean some sort of discipline schedule every day.

Daily: Do you have a reader who goes over your stories?

Landwehr: No. I'm not worried. I think it will be pretty much the same. The stories still have to be good. The only difference is that at least I can say I've had stories published.

Daily: When did you first begin to write?

Landwehr: Well, I first started writing in high school. But I really didn't start writing seriously until I came to Poly. And then, it probably wasn't until two or three years later that I became really serious.

So it's been seven or eight years. I've wanted to be a writer for a long time. And I finally decided that I wanted to do that. I'm going to have to write seriously. And by that I mean some sort of discipline schedule every day.

Daily: So then you do write every day?

Landwehr: I like to write every day. During the last seven years I have written every day for a large portion of that time. But, I stop, for a while sometimes, and then I'll go back into the pattern of writing.

Daily: Frankly, I'm having trouble getting anything done right now, and that's because of my work load. I'm writing director and the comp. load is heavy. Daily: Do you have a reader who goes over your stories?

Landwehr: No. I'm not writing full time. I would like to write every day. I'm not mass-producing y w r y  and send it off to a lot of publishers. Do you think it is fairly accurate?

Landwehr: Yes. From what I know, most of the publishers don't want to see a xerox copy of your story. They want the original. They don't want to have to keep another copy, and having somebody else accept it. You have to keep to yourself who would give you more money for it.

Daily: If they don't answer your letter or respond to your story, how do you follow up? How far do you go in following up?

Landwehr: They will always return your story or letter. I have stories that are out a long time, and I've written letters asking if they liked it or if they used it as an example of bad fiction for their fiction writing class. The little magazines are often stacked up.

Daily: Do you ever think you will have a hit?

Landwehr: One student who came up to me and said, "I read your story," and I said, "Did you?" and he said, "Yes," and just walked away. I didn't know what that meant. I think he was just at a loss for words.

So it's been seven or eight years. I've wanted to be a writer for a long time. And I finally decided that I wanted to do that. I'm going to have to write seriously. And by that I mean some sort of discipline schedule every day.

Daily: Do you have a reader who goes over your stories?

Landwehr: No. I'm not worried. I think it will be pretty much the same. The stories still have to be good. The only difference is that at least I can say I've had stories published.

Daily: When did you first begin to write?

Landwehr: Well, I first started writing in high school. But I really didn't start writing seriously until I came to Poly. And then, it probably wasn't until two or three years later that I became really serious.

So it's been seven or eight years. I've wanted to be a writer for a long time. And I finally decided that I wanted to do that. I'm going to have to write seriously. And by that I mean some sort of discipline schedule every day.

Daily: So then you do write every day?

Landwehr: I like to write every day. During the last seven years I have written every day for a large portion of that time. But, I stop, for a while sometimes, and then I'll go back into the pattern of writing.

Daily: Frankly, I'm having trouble getting anything done right now, and that's because of my work load. I'm writing director and the comp. load is heavy. Daily: Do you have a reader who goes over your stories?

Landwehr: No. I'm not writing full time. I would like to write every day. I'm not mass-producing y w r y  and send it off to a lot of publishers. Do you think it is fairly accurate?

Landwehr: Yes. From what I know, most of the publishers don't want to see a xerox copy of your story. They want the original. They don't want to have to keep another copy, and having somebody else accept it. You have to keep to yourself who would give you more money for it.

Daily: If they don't answer your letter or respond to your story, how do you follow up? How far do you go in following up?

Landwehr: They will always return your story or letter. I have stories that are out a long time, and I've written letters asking if they liked it or if they used it as an example of bad fiction for their fiction writing class. The little magazines are often stacked up.

Daily: Do you ever think you will have a hit?

Landwehr: One student who came up to me and said, "I read your story," and I said, "Did you?" and he said, "Yes," and just walked away. I didn't know what that meant. I think he was just at a loss for words.

So it's been seven or eight years. I've wanted to be a writer for a long time. And I finally decided that I wanted to do that. I'm going to have to write seriously. And by that I mean some sort of discipline schedule every day.

Daily: Do you have a reader who goes over your stories?

Landwehr: No. I'm not worried. I think it will be pretty much the same. The stories still have to be good. The only difference is that at least I can say I've had stories published.

Daily: When did you first begin to write?

Landwehr: Well, I first started writing in high school. But I really didn't start writing seriously until I came to Poly. And then, it probably wasn't until two or three years later that I became really serious.

So it's been seven or eight years. I've wanted to be a writer for a long time. And I finally decided that I wanted to do that. I'm going to have to write seriously. And by that I mean some sort of discipline schedule every day.
Peking, New York sign accord

PEKING (AP) — Peking and New York signed an "I Love New York"协议 with New York Mayor Ed Koch on Monday making their cities sister cities committed to expanded cultural and economic contacts.

During the signing ceremony in the Peking Room of the Great Hall of the People, the two mayors shook hands and hugged.

Mishril declared in murder case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A mistrial was declared today for one defendant in the murder trial of "Cheese King" Angelo Marino because of a juror's illness, but the judge ordered proceedings to move ahead against three others on trial.

Superior Court Judge Kathleen Parker granted a request to sever from the trial Marino's son, Salvatore, 30, who will be tried separately because of the illness of Salvatore Marino's attorney, James Marks.

Quake shakes California, Mexico

SPRING CREST, Calif. (AP) — An earthquake measuring 5.1 on the Richter scale joined a wide area of Southern California early today, triggering landslides, shuttering windows in two cities and sparking at least one fire.

There were no immediate reports of injury from the 2:47 a.m. quake or of damage to newly repaired flood control levees that had been broken in last week's series of punishing storms. The tremor was centered 100 miles east of Palm Desert, 10 miles southeast of Palm Springs, caught fire when the quake broke a natural gas line and a pilot light ignited the gas, authorities said.

Scientists at Caltech were still trying to determine the duration of the tremor, which was classified as moderate, but it initially appeared to last five to 10 seconds at the epicenter, said Kate Hutton, California Institute of Technology seismologist.

In the Middle East

Iranians told unity needed

Thousands of Iranians paraded through Tehran in snow past the occupied U.S. Embassy on Monday and President Mohammad R. Bakr voted to depose Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Machine gun-armed Moslem militants marched into and forth in the courtyard of the embassy, where 60 Americans hostages spent their 114th day in captivity.

Bani-Seddi's appearance, part of Iran's "Mobilization Week" ceremony, was at the embassy since he was elected president Jan. 20. In an interview published earlier Monday, he praised the militants who have held the embassy and hostages since Nov. 4 as "young patriots" who have done no measure of the regime. He made no message of the regime. He made no mention of other interview or speech.

In New York, a spokesman said U.S. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim feels the international community is making progress.

"The secretary-general is confident all these efforts will lead to final solution of the crisis," the spokesman said. "The UN has no such connection. Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Khomeini said over the weekend that any decision on the hostages must wait until the election and convening of a new Parliament, not expected until April at the earliest.

In New York a spokesman said U.S. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim feels the international community is making progress.

"The secretary-general is confident all these efforts will lead to final solution of the crisis," the spokesman said. "The UN has no such connection. Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Khomeini said over the weekend that any decision on the hostages must wait until the election and convening of a new Parliament, not expected until April at the earliest.

KABUL, Afghanistan — Gunfire riddled the streets of Kabul through Monday in the face of strikes and violence in protest against the regime of President Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Medical sources said more than 300 civilians died in streets fighting.

Striking civil servants and office workers ignored orders to return to work and Afghan government troops were paralysed for a third day. A general strike of shopkeepers continued into its fifth day.

Heavily armed Soviet troops and Afghan troops, backed by submachine gun-toting civilian members of the ruling Muslim People's Party, maintained patrols throughout the city.

Radio broadcasts on the Soviet military command in Kabul was, in effect, setting as head of the government.

Radio broadcasts on the Soviet military command in Kabul was, in effect, setting as head of the government.

Raided and indicated fighting that raged in Kabul on Friday had slowed considerably. One report reaching New Delhi said gunfire riddled Kabul through Sunday night, but a Frenchman in Kabul told a Paris newspaper that the center of the city was calm.

In the Middle East

Court reverses convictions

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Arizona Supreme Court on Monday reversed the murder convictions of Max Dunlap and James Rohsen in the bomb-killing of newspaper reporter Don Bolles.

The high court said Rohsen, a Chandler plumber, and Dunlap, a state contractor, were unfairly的事实 by cross-examining John Adamson, the state's key witness in the 1977 case.

Adamson, who pleaded guilty to second-degree murder and was sentenced to 20 years, admitted planting a bomb under the victim's car but invoked his Fifth amendment privileges against self-incrimination when defense attorneys attempted to question him about a payoff for the killing.
Sports

Basketball clinches CCAA title

BY TOM JOHNSON AND BARRY SHORTZ

Senior Mark Robinson lifted into the pantheon for his efforts that helped Cal Poly Pomona clinch first place in the CCAA and a playoff berth.

California Polytechnic State University's men's basketball team clinched the California Collegiate Athletic Association title on the last day of the regular season at home against Cal Poly Pomona, the Mustangs entered Saturday's battle with a perfect 13-0 home court win streak. Saturday's loss also stopped their four-comers offense.

Mustangs were out to shoot two. He made the Mustangs were destined to go into a stall by using their four-corner offense. His in haste to grab the jumper which ticked harmlessly off the front of the rim.

Wheeler feels might be the winning basket with 10 seconds to go. Wheeler simply told his players to guard inside and force the Broncos to shoot outside.

Wheeler set up his last-second defense, Robinson formulated what his man Williams would do. "I knew we couldn't give them the basket. The last time they gave it to him (Williams), and I thought they'd do it again. So I positioned myself for the block," said Robinson. Williams saw was Robinson's hand slipping the ball out of bounds.

Still had to get the ball with three seconds left, but the best the team could do was a desperation jumper which ticked harmlessly off the front of the rim.

The Mustangs' championship hopes were almost a dream Friday, as the Pomona team maintained a 10-point cushion with less than 12 minutes to play. Robinson woke up the slumbering San Luis offense by causing a long jumper. Guard Kent Rayner then pumped in three straight jumpers to move the locals within two.

With 1:12 left to play, the Broncos were destined to go into a stall by using their four-corner offense. In his haste to grab the jumper which ticked harmlessly off the front of the rim.

Wheeler feels might be the winning basket with 10 seconds to go. Wheeler simply told his players to guard inside and force the Broncos to shoot outside.

Wheeler set up his last-second defense, Robinson formulated what his man Williams would do. "I knew we couldn't give them the basket. The last time they gave it to him (Williams), and I thought they'd do it again. So I positioned myself for the block," said Robinson. Williams saw was Robinson's hand slipping the ball out of bounds.

Still had to get the ball with three seconds left, but the best the team could do was a desperation jumper which ticked harmlessly off the front of the rim.

The Mustangs' championship hopes were almost a dream Friday, as the Pomona team maintained a 10-point cushion with less than 12 minutes to play. Robinson woke up the slumbering San Luis offense by causing a long jumper. Guard Kent Rayner then pumped in three straight jumpers to move the locals within two.

With 1:12 left to play, the Broncos were destined to go into a stall by using their four-corner offense. In his haste to grab the jumper which ticked harmlessly off the front of the rim.

Wheeler feels might be the winning basket with 10 seconds to go. Wheeler simply told his players to guard inside and force the Broncos to shoot outside.

Wheeler set up his last-second defense, Robinson formulated what his man Williams would do. "I knew we couldn't give them the basket. The last time they gave it to him (Williams), and I thought they'd do it again. So I positioned myself for the block," said Robinson. Williams saw was Robinson's hand slipping the ball out of bounds.

Still had to get the ball with three seconds left, but the best the team could do was a desperation jumper which ticked harmlessly off the front of the rim.

The Mustangs' championship hopes were almost a dream Friday, as the Pomona team maintained a 10-point cushion with less than 12 minutes to play. Robinson woke up the slumbering San Luis offense by causing a long jumper. Guard Kent Rayner then pumped in three straight jumpers to move the locals within two.

With 1:12 left to play, the Broncos were destined to go into a stall by using their four-corner offense. In his haste to grab the jumper which ticked harmlessly off the front of the rim.

Wheeler feels might be the winning basket with 10 seconds to go. Wheeler simply told his players to guard inside and force the Broncos to shoot outside.

Wheeler set up his last-second defense, Robinson formulated what his man Williams would do. "I knew we couldn't give them the basket. The last time they gave it to him (Williams), and I thought they'd do it again. So I positioned myself for the block," said Robinson. Williams saw was Robinson's hand slipping the ball out of bounds.

Still had to get the ball with three seconds left, but the best the team could do was a desperation jumper which ticked harmlessly off the front of the rim.

The Mustangs' championship hopes were almost a dream Friday, as the Pomona team maintained a 10-point cushion with less than 12 minutes to play. Robinson woke up the slumbering San Luis offense by causing a long jumper. Guard Kent Rayner then pumped in three straight jumpers to move the locals within two.

With 1:12 left to play, the Broncos were destined to go into a stall by using their four-corner offense. In his haste to grab the jumper which ticked harmlessly off the front of the rim.

Wheeler feels might be the winning basket with 10 seconds to go. Wheeler simply told his players to guard inside and force the Broncos to shoot outside.

Wheeler set up his last-second defense, Robinson formulated what his man Williams would do. "I knew we couldn't give them the basket. The last time they gave it to him (Williams), and I thought they'd do it again. So I positioned myself for the block," said Robinson. Williams saw was Robinson's hand slipping the ball out of bounds.

Still had to get the ball with three seconds left, but the best the team could do was a desperation jumper which ticked harmlessly off the front of the rim.

The Mustangs' championship hopes were almost a dream Friday, as the Pomona team maintained a 10-point cushion with less than 12 minutes to play. Robinson woke up the slumbering San Luis offense by causing a long jumper. Guard Kent Rayner then pumped in three straight jumpers to move the locals within two.

With 1:12 left to play, the Broncos were destined to go into a stall by using their four-corner offense. In his haste to grab the jumper which ticked harmlessly off the front of the rim.

Wheeler feels might be the winning basket with 10 seconds to go. Wheeler simply told his players to guard inside and force the Broncos to shoot outside.

Wheeler set up his last-second defense, Robinson formulated what his man Williams would do. "I knew we couldn't give them the basket. The last time they gave it to him (Williams), and I thought they'd do it again. So I positioned myself for the block," said Robinson. Williams saw was Robinson's hand slipping the ball out of bounds.

Still had to get the ball with three seconds left, but the best the team could do was a desperation jumper which ticked harmlessly off the front of the rim.

The Mustangs' championship hopes were almost a dream Friday, as the Pomona team maintained a 10-point cushion with less than 12 minutes to play. Robinson woke up the slumbering San Luis offense by causing a long jumper. Guard Kent Rayner then pumped in three straight jumpers to move the locals within two.

With 1:12 left to play, the Broncos were destined to go into a stall by using their four-corner offense. In his haste to grab the jumper which ticked harmlessly off the front of the rim.
BY DAVE BONTA

Iowa State wrestling coach Harold Nichols said his young team "has really come around" in the last part of the season. Saturday afternoon the No. 4 ranked Cyclones continued to come around as they also went under, over and through second-ranked Cal Poly without surprising ease, by a score of 29-6.

The 2,800 fans in attendance at the main gym had few moments to cheer about as the Mustangs won only three of the 10 matches. Gary Fischer, Scott Heston and Jack Jack were the only wrestlers to put points on the board.

In the opening match, at 188 pounds, No. 2 rated Fischer squared off against sixth-ranked Mike Piccioni. The contest, which at times looked like wrestling's version of the "Flying Wallendas," at Fischer on top by a decision of 14-6.

After that initial victory, however, it was a long dry spell for the Mustangs as they lost the next five matches. Mitch Dolezal was pinned, Tom Montez lost a close 6-7, Luis Montecano was edged by intial rated Dave Brown and Randy Fleury was decisioned 9-7 and Craig Tessler was defeated by 116-rated Tom Pickard 1-0.

Of particular interest was the 150-pound match involving Fleury and the Cyclone's fifth-ranked Nate Carr. The contest proved to be a contrast in styles, Fleury relying on his upper body strength and Carr utilizing his quickness. Fleury led 6-5 going into the final three minutes, but Carr scored a series of one-point escapes and then pulled off a two-point take-down to seal the victory.

It was not until Scott Heston, who has become San Luis Obispo's "favorite son," slid past Iowa State's Perry Hummel 6-5 that the Mustangs were able to get their second win. This supposed "dream match" between the No. 1 (Heston) and No. 2 (Hummel) men in the 187-pound weight class did not develop until the third period when Hummel came back from a 4-2 deficit to tie the score at 5-5.

---

Classified

Call 546-1144

Help Wanted

Interested in being a summer counselor Coconut Ranch Camp is interviewing at the Placement Center Feb. 27-28. Sign up at the Placement Center.

Help Wanted: San Luis Obispo County Sheriff's Office needs a part-time, temporary employee to handle Sales or photo experiences in the Sheriff's Office. Call at Jim's Campus Career Center.

Guy needed for 10 min. at a 10 am meeting. 543-1389, Bunny (2-28)

Services

TPR400
IBM Correcting Set 115. Call Mabouly 543-4495 (TF)

TPR500-2898
IBM Correcting Set 115. Call Mabouly 543-4495 after 4:30 (TF)

Professional Typing
Sam's Office Service
Call Connors 544-1808 (TF)

Professional Typing
Sani's Office Service
Call Connors 544-1808 (TF)

Super Secretaries
Pace 543-7092 (TF)

Lost & Found

Lost blue dog pack with wallet, 15 in. long. Found Fri. 15 in. C. Could be found at all P. Patience, if found at 3rd, 15 in. north.

Lost

Red-white tennis leretten's jacket sentimental value to wearer. 170 North Higuera, 541-2700.

Lost in university plaza a female dog. Tan with white nose, black nose. 543-3606. (1-16)

Automotive

Poly Student! Work the perfect job? Performance Machine has the parts, the prices and the people to guide you through the victory sphere. 1244 San Luis O.

---

Sponsored by

Rainier Brewing Company

---

One of the few bright spots for Randy Fleury in his match against No. 5 Nate Carr. Fleury, like the Mustangs, met with defeat last Saturday against Iowa State.

Olympians honored by Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — To the sound of the Marine Band playing the Olympic theme, the U.S. Winter Olympic team was honored by President Carter Monday as "modern-day American heroes."

"This has been a wonderful week for our country," Carter said in a wonderful week for the athletes disembarked from their planes.

From the air base, the athletes boarded buses to the South Lawn of the White House. The Olympic team was flown to Andrews Air Force Base Monday morning, the day after the conclusion of the games in Lake Placid, N.Y. They were greeted at the airport by thousands who braved wet falling snow, chanting "U.S.A., U.S.A." and waving American flags as the athletes disembarked from their planes.

---

Classifier

WANTED

Batteries for Calculators, Radios, Cameras, Smoke Alarms, Electronic Games and Toys

DURACELL

Batteries for Calculators, Radios, Cameras, Smoke Alarms, Electronic Games and Toys

---

IES

SHIN TATE RISING 10-7, DOGENKAZA 2-CHOME, TOKYO 130 JAPAN

TEACH IN JAPAN

Anyone with a bachelor's degree in engineering, business, linguistics, or languages wishing to teach full-time for one or two years in Japan should write to International Education Services with a detailed resume and a letter indicating an interest in the position.

The position involves teaching Japanese businessmen and engineers the basic vocabulary in various fields.

No Japanese-language is required for classroom instruction. Teaching experience is not required. An orientation is given in Tokyo. Information on salary, transportation and housing can be obtained by providing International Education Services with a detailed resume, and a letter indicating an interest in the position.

Personal interviews will be held in the California area in the middle of March. Selected applicants will be expected to arrive in Tokyo from June through October 1980.
Forensics Club

The Forensics Club is sponsoring an intramural speech tournament on March 1 from 10 a.m. to noon. First, second and third prizes will be awarded to the top three speakers. For more information, call Dr. Pam Miller at 546-1158 or the debate office at 546-2018. Entry deadline is Feb. 28.

Business Council

Nominations are now open for a student senator from the School of Business. Anyone interested should attend Business Student Council meetings, held in Fisher Science 292 on Mondays at 6 p.m.

AASK meeting

A special committee is being formed to organize a fund-raising walk-a-thon to help fund the Adoption of Special Kids program. Anyone interested is invited to attend the organizational meeting, to be tonight at 7:30 in U.U. 216.

Christian music

The Nazarene Student Movement will present the Soft Comfort Band with Phil Keagy in the Main Gym Feb. 28 at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $4 in advance and $5 at the door.

Winter Concert

The 14th Annual Winter Concert will be in Chumash Auditorium on Saturday, March 2. The 60-member Cal Poly Symphonic Band will play. Cost is $3 for general admission, $1.50 for students.

Pre-Law Club

Former Poly graduate Bobi Walthall, an attending Golden Gate law school, will be guest speaker at the meeting of the Pre-Law Club. The meeting will be in the Business Administration building, Room 214, tonight at 6 p.m.

One-act play

The one-act play "Past Imperfect Time" will be performed Thursday, in Room 211 of the H.P. Davidson Music Building at 8 p.m. Admission to the play, which was written and directed by a Poly student, is $1.

Logos contest

A cash prize is offered for the best logo design entry for the Student Science Department. All majors are welcome to enter. For more information, inquire at the acid science department.

Ecology Action

Two speakers from the Three-Mile Island area will discuss their view of the events there today in points of interest at the Ecology Action Club.

YWCA ski trip

A ski trip to South Lake Tahoe is being sponsored by the YWCA of San Luis Obispo. The trip, which will be Feb. 29 through March 2, includes two nights lodging and transportation. For more information, call the Y at 545-8235.

Wildlife Club

Guest speaker Tim portrait and nominations for officers will be the main focus at tonight's meeting of the Wildlife Club meeting. The meeting will be in the Ecology Action Club.

UBSAC reception

The United Black Student Awareness Council will have a reception in U.U. 220 at 8 p.m. on March 3. All are welcome to attend.

Newsprint

Milk Carton race

Laguna Lake is the site for the third annual Milk Carton Boat Race, sponsored by Los Lecheres Dairy Club. Boats can be people-powered, sail-powered or mechanically powered, but must use milk cartons as the primary means of flotation. Any questions? Call Bernie Muiler at 541-6657 about entering.

Slide show

A multimedia slide show titled "Off-Road Vehicle Destruction—The Nipomo Dunes, Pismo Beach, California," will be shown in Fisher Science Hall, Room 298, on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. The show, sponsored by the Biology Club and the California Central Coast Chapter of the Wildlife Society, is free.

Child Development

Poly Royal will be the subject discussed at tonight's meeting of the Child Development Club. The meeting will be in the Home Economics Building, Room 138, at 7:30.

Optimum learning situation

Do you know how to learn? Do you know how to learn best? Do you know how you learn best? Do you know what new approaches are being made in the classroom? Do you know how you respond to various stimuli? Are you interested in learning more about the field of education? If you answered yes to any of these questions, you should attend the lecture "Optimum Learning Situation" tonight in Ag 215 at 7:30 p.m.

Optimum living environment

Optimal learning situation.

Investigate both

In one-on-campus interview with NCR/Sunnyvale, Calif. on Friday, February 29th

NCR Engineering & Manufacturing/Sunnyvale is a fast-expanding unit of one of the world's largest computer companies. We develop and produce dedicated computer systems for manufacturing data collection, and we've created working solutions for more than 200 Fortune 500 companies.

Six factors make us a particularly good place to begin your career: (1) As a leader, we get the toughest, most challenging problems. (2) We are in a specialty that offers enormous long-range growth potential. (3) You will rapidly acquire expertise in attacking and analyzing problems, and developing integrated hardware-software solutions that are complete turnkey systems. (4) You'll be working with advanced distributed network architecture, data communications, microprocessors, and latest input-output devices, terminals, controllers and CPUs. (5) You'll be in a high-demand specialty area, at the very top of a rapidly growing, perfectly stimulating. Probably no other single NCR operation serves such a breadth of U.S. industry so directly. (6) You'll be working in a highly professional environment—in Sunnyvale, adjacent to San Jose and about 30 miles from San Francisco.

Peru trip

All interested in the Peru trip should attend a meeting today in U.U. 220 at 8 p.m.

Chinese counter remains popular

Indeed, sales are booming—to the relief of craftsmen in Ono, a city in western Japan that produces 80 percent of the nation's "soroban," as the abacus is called in Japanese.

"We thought we were doomed when electronic calculators first appeared on the market," recalled Tanimi Naito, director of the Milk Carton Makers' Cooperative in Ono, which employs 700 craftsmen.

1960 E.E.A. CS graduates

Optimum living environment.