President race goes on, runoff slated

Carr gets narrow VP win

BY MARY McALISTER

The ASI election yielded no conclusive winner in the presidential race and almost resulted in a double runoff before a ballot recount gave vice presidential candidate Mike Carr a narrow forty vote victory.

Neither of the four presidential candidates received the required 50 percent plus one vote majority and the two highest vote getters, Stephanie Nelson and Dennis Hawk, will face each other in a runoff election May 14.

Hawk received 967 votes, or 39 percent, and Nelson received 675 votes for 27 percent. The other two candidates, Will Fox and Mike Jashers, received 507 and 268 votes for 21 and 11 percent, respectively. The remaining votes went to write-in candidates.

Neither Hawk nor Nelson were surprised about the runoff. "It's a shame with four candidates, they believed it would be difficult for anyone to receive a majority."

They both plan to run the remainder of their campaigns just as they have all along, trying to meet as many people as possible and letting their views be known, they said.

They were both surprised at the low voter turnout of 15 percent and expressed hope that it would be higher for the runoff.

The vice presidential race remained inconclusive until late Friday, when initial vote counts revealed Carr to be the winner, but a second look showed that he did not have a majority, and it appeared that there might be a runoff between Carr and his opponent, John Schouten.

Dean: appointees will harm farm-labor relations

BY SHERRY HEATH

Governor Jerry Brown's two percent appointees to the Agriculture Labor Relations Board "means another period of frustration for California agriculture employers," Cal Poly's Dean of Agriculture and Natural Resources Howard C. Brown said Friday.

"I'm afraid we are experiencing, and totally unacceptable to Mr. Song's "ignorance of farm labor law, his inexperience with the farm labor law, his inexperience with the National Labor Relations Act—and from their records, it's apparent that they certainly have no sympathy for California's agricultural community."

Hallett pointed out that Waldie "helped Caesar Chavez raise money for his United Farm Workers Union in the early 1970's—and just recently he met with Mr. Chavez to explore the possibility of representing the UWU in a union matter that was scheduled to come before some governmental agency."

She said that Song's "ignorance of farm labor law, his inexperience with agricultural issues and his long, long pro-union record make him a candidate who is totally unacceptable—a real disaster for agriculture."

Obviously, this tuition closeness doesn't work well with those who will line up with labor on every occasion. They won't look to see if an action is fair to employers as well as employees."

24 students elected senators

A total of 24 student senators were elected to represent the seven schools in the student senate for the 1981-82 academic year after Cal Poly students went to the polls last Wednesday and Thursday.

In the School of Agriculture and Natural Resources, those elected to the student senate were Ron Lee, with 379 votes; Allen Peters, 270 votes; Jeff Sanders, 263 votes; Cynda Clary, 261 votes; and Jeff Crovelli, 258 votes. The school's turnout was 14.8 percent.

In the School of Architecture and Environmental Design, Randy Reynolds with 154 votes and John Hopkins with 145 were elected. The school as a whole had a 17.2 percent turnout.

In the School of Commerce and Humanities, Michelle Mello, who received 89 votes, Lyn Ploch, 191 votes; Christopher Hartley, 86 votes; and Jeff Crovelli, 326 votes. The school had a 12.5 percent turnout.

In the School of Education, those elected were Ann Harnett, 109 votes; Stacey Lambert, 104 votes; Greg Blanc, 104 votes; and Barbara Greenin, 89 votes. The school had an 8.7 percent turnout, the lowest of any school.

In the School of Science and Math sent Sue Smith, 131 votes; Cam Bauer, 92 votes; and David Chapman, 86 votes to the student senate. The school had a 12.5 percent turnout.

County joins anti-drilling suit

BY ROBIN LEWIS

The San Luis Obispo County Board of Supervisors passed by a one-vote margin Monday a proposal to join a lawsuit against the Department of Interior concerning offshore oil drilling near Morro Bay.

By a 3-2 vote the board joined the state of California and five state agencies in a lawsuit seeking to change the Department of Interior's decision to list 34 northern tracts in the Santa Maria Basin. The offshore basin stretches from Morro Bay to Point Conception, the thirty-four tracts run from Shell Beach north.

Seven northern California counties and the city of Santa Barbara have agreed to join in the state's suit.

With supervisors Jeff Jorgenson and Kurt Kupper supporting the measure, and supervisors Jerry Dedecker and Howard Markows opposing it, board chairman Steve MacElwaine cast the deciding vote to join the suit.

The suit challenges Interior Secretary James Watt's "misinterpretation or misapplied" the 1978 Outer Continental Shelf Act Amendment, said county attorney James Lindbolin. The act requires the Interior Secretary to accept the recommendations of a state government unless "overriding national need" can be shown by the federal government.

The suit charges that no need has been shown, making illegal Watt's inclusion of the 34 tracts against the recommendation of California.
Senate rejects two budget cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate rejected two attempts Monday to cut $200 million for water projects, termed "a diet of pork" by one Democrat, as the chamber marched toward passage of a $699.1-billion budget plan made to order for President Reagan's tax and spending cuts.

First, the Senate voted 55-30 against a proposal by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., to transfer $200 million earmarked for water projects into accounts for mass transit and student loan programs.

Then, on a vote of 52-29, the Senate turned back an attempt by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, to cut the $200 million from the budget altogether and reduce the projected $46.8 billion deficit for 1982 by the same amount.

The votes were the firstest indications to date that Republicans and Democrats will combine to approve a 1982 budget blueprint almost precisely as Reagan likes it.

Irish snipers wound two soldiers

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Snipers wounded a house for a vantage point Monday and opened fire from a window, wounding two British soldiers escorting a shipment of money to a post office in West Belfast, police said. Youths in the Roman Catholic neighborhood hurled firebombs, rocks and acid-filled milk bottles at nearby troops, authorities said.

One of the British soldiers killed by the sniper bullets was seriously wounded, police reported. Residents of the West Belfast neighborhood said a woman and a young girl were struck by plastic bullets allegedly fired by troops in the ensuing violence. No officials confirmed it.

French prepares for uncertainty

(AP) — The Paris stock market and the franc fell sharply Monday as France began a season of political uncertainty under a Socialist president, Francois Mit­ terrand. The Western allies reacted warily, unsure what role the new president might have in running France.

Just a day after Mitterrand ousted Valery Giscard d'Estaing in presidential elections, the focus of French politics was switching to the vote for a new National Assembly, expected near the end of June.

Mitterrand hopes to elect a leftist majority in the Assembly that will support his plan of economic change, including major nationalizations.

Paris Mayor Jacques Chaize, moving to take over leadership of the conservatives from the defeated Giscard d'Estaing, issued an appeal for unity among the center-right parties in order to hold their majority in the Assembly.

Premier Raymond Barre, whose government will resign in the next two weeks, said Mitterrand's election would lead to "the deterioration of the democratic and international situation of our country."

Traders reported "near-panic" on the Paris stock exchange, where the flood of selling orders found virtually no takers. The closing market indicator showed a fall of more than 9 percent, but that was based only on 12 of the more than 200 issues on the market. The absence of buying orders made it impossible to quote other stocks.

Correction

A quote attributed to Cal Poly Environmental Health and Safety Officer Don Van Acker appearing in Friday's story which read "I wouldn't want to be changing those ballasts either." was actually said by Health Center Director James Nah.
Educational system wastes students' time, speaker says

short, he said, is as it defines truth solely within the realm of science and mathematics. The safety of empirical verification is preferred to intuitive knowledge.

Little or nothing is offered in today's stifling educational mold to encourage students to rise to the level of history's great thinkers and artists, said Brandwein. He quoted Rilke in German and Dante in Latin, with subsequent translations, as examples of the non-linear, right-brain thought neglected in schools. Piano selections by Liszt, Haydn and Bach, played by Brandwein, illustrated what he called insights and emotions unapprehendable through standard, sequential thought.

"Agony, suffering, love; where do we teach that kind of truth?" asked Brandwein. Citing his studies in educational systems in Africa, he said educators there play down the quantitative, while lending more importance to "ultimate human goals": justice, beauty, love, faith.

Such values are largely taboo in Western education, said Brandwein. "Where are the canons of beauty taught?" he asked. Dance, poetry and painting, while patronized, are no more than diversions to most persons, he said.

While crying, "Equity always," Brandwein decried crude notions of justice as "equal treatment of unequal." No two students are alike, he said, and institutional efforts to treat them so are responsible for much student failure.

Love, ethics and faith are perhaps the most frightening subjects to the Western notions of education, said Brandwein. Safely quarantined within the bounds of philosophy classes, they make little impact on the workaday world.

"When do we love our neighbors," he asked rhetorically, referring to those next door as well as those across the globe. "We might have learned something about Iran...we might have known what to do," with serious, courageous study of faith and love, he said, in reference to the hostage crisis.

He did not propose the abandonment of science and technology, Brandwein said. "Technology must be maintained," he said. "A job is important."

While offering employment opportunities, however, the central role of the university should be to provide familiar with fundamental values, he said. Only then will life's undeniable companions—sadness, joy, madness—be tolerable. Only then can the pursuit be resumed of humanity's only truly worthy goal: "To treat others humanely, to grow wiser, firmer, humbler, and stronger."

The suit also claims the decision violated "consistency of offshore determinations of the Coastal Zone Management Act, and violated the National Environmental Protection Act, because, said Lindholm, a supplemental environmental impact statement was not made when the U.S. Geological Survey doubled its oil resource estimates of the basin.

Lastly, the suit accuses Watt of violating the Endangered Species Act by allowing leasing in areas that support the endangered southern sea otter and gray whale. The act makes illegal development that would threaten habitats of endangered species.

Macklin and Diefenderfer both were members of the committee to withdraw a course is 5 p.m. on Monday, May 18, Cal Poly Registrar Gerald Punches reported.

Elephant riders find it's a little harder than it looks

BY MAURA THURMAN
Staff Writer

Elephant racing is not a comfortable sport. 12 contestants discovered Friday in an event sponsored by Circus Vargas at Madonna Plaza.

"It's prickly," said Cal Poly cheerleader Sue Flatley after her ride. She lost her race against Jim Thomas' match races. The two elephants, Tusko and Lot­tie, were lead by handlers during each of the heats.

"It's not steady like a horse," cheerleader Kim Adamo said. "It goes up and down vertically, it's bumpy." However, she managed to hold on and won her race against disc jockey "Grateful Don." Poster of radio station KS­LY.

The last-minute cancella­ tion of KQZY-V's contest ant allowed a third Cal Po­ly cheerleader to compete. The television station declined to participate after an elephant swept its trunk through the sta­tion's box at Thursday night's circus performance.

"I'm glad I didn't have to stay on while it was go­ing," she said. "I think I had a good deal."

Dean criticizes governor's agriculture appointees

But Brown said that the agriculture community will have to adopt a "wait and see" attitude concerning to two new AHRI members.

"They could break with the past and come through for us. We’re hoping that they will realize that ag is California’s number one in­dustry," added Brown.

Brown said that the in­dustries grosses over $14 billion yearly, but that too many producers have left California recently because they couldn’t stay here a season or a number of reasons.

Top on the list is labor costs, which have been with the advent of strong labor movements.

"I think it will be wise to put together all of the groups involved, get to know each other," he add­ed.

"Maybe we could look around some ideas and get together some goals so we can get the ball rolling right now and not have a time lag at the beginning of next year."

Recount gives narrow win

Schouten called for a re­count, which included a closer look at the write-in votes to determine their validity.

The recount proved the race to be four votes short of a runoff, with Carr receiving 1151 votes to Schouten's 1110.

Carr said he was really excited when he heard about the final count and said that he was worried when the initial figures in­dicated a runoff.

"I am not sure what I would credit my win to," he said. "Hopefully the groups that both John and I spoke to listened to both of us and picked me."

"I can get the halls rolling around some ideas and get to know each other," he add­ed.

The Cal Poly pitching staff was pushed to its limits this past weekend, as they battled the Mustangs as the Mustangs were finally eliminated from California Collegiate Athletic Association title hunt. The Mustangs did go down fighting though as it took an impossible schedule, two late inning rallies and a weak set of arms to finally sink coach Larry Harr and his Mustangs.

The Mustangs were in the middle of the title hunt until the seventh inning of Sunday's loss to Dominguez Hills. If Poly could have won all three league games against Dominguez Hills and Chapman, Poly would have knotted the CCAA league lead into a three-way tie with Cal State Northridge and U.C. Riverside. Both schools finished the conference race with identical 17-13 records.

Poly, 14-14 in the CCAA, had the weekend start and end on sour notes. The Mustangs suffered a heart-breaking last inning loss to sister school Cal Poly Pomona, 4-6, on Thursday.

The Mustangs bounced right back on Friday and split with Chapman, 7-0 and 1-12, and split again on Saturday with Cal State Northridge and U.C. Riverside. Both have knotted the CCAA league lead into a three-way tie with Cal Poly finishing third, one game behind the co-leaders.

In Friday's win, it was all Mark Bersano as he went seven plus innings and allowed only one earned run. Bersano lasted until the seventh inning of Sunday's loss to Dominguez Hills.

Larry Pest led Poly by singling in a run in the fourth inning and doubles in the fifth and sixth. Eric Peyron doubled and scored the first run.

In Friday's win, it was all Mark Bersano as he went the distance to post the shut out and pick up his seventh win of the year. Bersano allowed only four hits and left only three on base.

At the plate, Gerber slammed his third home run of the year. Paul Harr doubled in a run. Bill White singled twice and scored two runs and Peyton kept his hitting pace going with a double.

In the nightcap, the game was decided in the first inning as Chapman erupted for seven runs. Poly's lone run came after back-and-forth doubles by Kirby and Gerber in the sixth.

On Saturday, Poly lost a pitcher with Chapman. Chapman exploded out of the blocks for another early lead, 6-0 after three, but Poly whitlashed away and pulled within a run at 7-6 in the seventh inning before Chapman sealed the win with a three-run outburst in the bottom of the seventh.

Peyton tagged his ninth home run of the year and singled twice to pace Poly. White singled in three runs. Hartler added two singles and Tim Young popped a single.

Despite the loss on Sunday, Harr was impressed with Bersano's gutsy performance on the mound. After going nine scoreless innings on Friday, Bersano lasted seven plus innings and allowed only one earned run.

Editor's note: Sorry for any inconvenience that may be caused by Sunday night's late inning loss to visiting Cal State Northridge.

If Poly could have won all three of its final games, the Mustangs would have been in the middle of the title hunt this past weekend and the Mustangs took its toll as the team finished the season 31-16.

The Cal Poly women's tennis team closed out the Southern California Athletic Association campaign with a disappointing loss to visiting Cal State Northridge.

Northridge rolled over the Mustangs to rack up a 9-0 shut out win. All nine matches were won for the powerful Northern Knights.

Cal Poly finished the year with a 3-8 mark in the CCAA, conference. Two members of the Mustang squad will continue on as individuals at the Western Regionals in Los Angeles May 14-16. Top singles种子Rae Weigandt and Sheila Foley will carry the Mustang banner.

Terrorism unmasked

The death of Irish Republican Army guerrilla and hunger striker Bobby Sands last week focused world attention not only on terrorism in Northern Ireland, but on international terrorism as well. The possible existence of a 'world terrorism network' has been emphasized in government reports and the media. From this discussion, two primary viewpoints have emerged.

First, we have the Reagan-Haig thesis which has all acts of international terrorism bearing the stamp of the Soviet Union. On the other side are those who reject the Reagan-Haig position out and see the position as simply a rehash of the monolithic communist conspiracy fallacy of the 1950s. The truth, it would seem, lies somewhere in the middle.

The question of Soviet involvement in the terrorism carried out through the radical left has been explored by journalist Claire Sterling in her book The Terror Network. By Sterling's account, the Soviets have had their share of dealings with guerrilla organizations:

- Documents obtained through a Czechoslovakian defector indicate the Soviet Union's Politburo in 1964 moved to increase spending for terrorist activities abroad by '1,000 percent.'

- In 1966, Sterling writes, training camps for guerrillas fished one of the world's most successful terrorist groups.

The United States, in pursuing its "national interests," meanwhile has supported terrorist movements in the right-wing dictatorship of Greece in 1976, and Chile in 1973. President Reagan has pledged support for their way into IRA military units, which before had used predominantly American weapons. During the same year, the IRA established a "bilateral pact of mutual assistance" with the PFLP.

Soviet support of international terrorist activities has thus been documented. That the Soviet Union is actively directing these movements, every move, however, is doubtful. The Soviets apparently feel they benefit from a West destabilized by terrorist groups. But the guerrilla organizations they aid are regional in nature and act according to differing cultural and political objectives. They fight for their own causes, but accept support from wherever they can get it.

Sterling herself pulses a few holes in the Moscow-directed terrorism model of Reagan and Haig. In testifying before the Senate Internal Security subcommittee, Sterling gave the Italian Communist Party credit for combating Italy's Red Brigades, one of the world's most successful terrorist groups.

They fight for their own causes, but accept support from wherever they can get it.

Sterling herself pulses a few holes in the Moscow-directed terrorism model of Reagan and Haig. In testifying before the Senate Internal Security subcommittee, Sterling gave the Italian Communist Party credit for combating Italy's Red Brigades, one of the world's most successful terrorist groups.

The United States, in pursuing its "national interests," meanwhile has supported terrorist movements in the right-wing dictatorship of Greece in 1976, and Chile in 1973. President Reagan has pledged support for Ireland as early as 1972, Soviet arms were funding their way into IRA military units, which before had used predominantly American weapons. During the same year, the IRA established a "bilateral pact of mutual assistance" with the PFLP.
