The trail rides apparently didn't take all the spook out of them. Each student has been bucked off more than once by a feisty thoroughbred, and one student, agricultural management senior Chris Alinassault, is in the hospital with compressed vertebrae after a hard fall Tuesday.

Finally, the riders took the horses to the track—an uneven clod-covered piece of land on the airstrip—where they have been working every since.

It has been a slow process. Each morning the students check the horses' legs carefully, wrapping them for support. Then the students put on bright green and yellow riding hats for workouts on the airstrip.
Students Needed
Students are needed to serve on a committee to help select the Distinguished Teachers of Cal Poly for 1981-82.

Anyone interested should apply in the University Union in Room 217 this week.

PAC Meeting
The Political Action Club will hold its weekly meeting tonight in the Business Building, Room 214 at 6 p.m. U.S. military aid to El Salvador will be the topic for discussion. Come and join in. Everyone is welcome.

Bake Sale
The Graphic Design Club will hold a fund-raising bake sale in the University Union Plaza on Thursday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The money raised will go toward paying for the Graphic Design Show on campus during the month of April. The fate of this show is in jeopardy so financial and student support is greatly needed. This show is one of the finest in the state university system.

Gymnastics Club
The Cal Poly Gymnastics Club will meet tonight in Crandall Gym at 8 p.m.

Moratorium on films enacted

Thoroughbreds head south

"...some clubs have lost two or three hundred dollars," Williams said. "As for next spring, it depends on the weather," he added.

Williams said, referring to the possibility of a continuation of the moratorium.

There has been some frustration among groups attempting to show films to raise money this quarter. The Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship lost $217 when they could not charge admission to The Hiding Place.

"I guess it really was our fault," said Rick Hocker, executive committee member of the fellowship. The group had been approved by the Films Committee to show the movie for free, but later decided to charge a $1 admission when they realized what the cost of showing the film would be.

The films committee learned of the plan to charge through posters advertising the event. The fellowship was informed that they needed to discuss the matter first with the films committee, Williams said. He added that the moratorium was not the result of the fellowship's attempt to charge admission.

"They breached standard committee policies by not informing us they were charging admission," Williams said. However, Hocker believes the decision was partly due to the moratorium.

"It seems to me that they don't like the competition," he said. "One of the nights we showed The Hiding Place was the same night they showed Apocalypse Now."

Some dissatisfaction with the moratorium policy was also expressed by Brad Owens, wing representative for the second floor of Fremont Hall.

Owens said his floor has been planning to show Rebel Without a Cause as a fund-raiser since the middle of Fall Quarter. After being turned down for the fall and winter, the film was approved to be shown in the spring by the committee.

"It's necessary to control films," Owens said. "But it sounds to me like they're trying to protect themselves."

The Pretenders show sells out in record time

All 3,600 tickets for the upcoming Pretenders concert at Cal Poly were sold by 2 p.m. Monday, making it the fastest sellout concert in Cal Poly history. It took only four hours for the concert to sell out, easily breaking the previous record of 24 hours set by the Kenny Loggins concert in 1980.

San Luis Obispo's Boo Records sold out all of its 100 tickets for the concert within four minutes after they went on sale. The Pretenders will appear in the Main Gym at 10 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 18.

Christian debate set for March

Many Christian leaders are repugnant to free speech, said Roland. He became angry, but said one of the Christians physically abusive to him.

"I've learned more about riding here..." said Dawn Schmid, a senior agricultural management major. "You can't comprehend how much work we have to do. Before we started we were warned that there was a lot of work to do here, and we said, "Oh, sure."

"But I'll tell you, there is a lot of work to do here!" she said.

The work may pay off, though. The four horses purchased at sales in California and Washington with Foundation money cost close to $40,000. And Gary Carothers, a Cal Poly student and Hunter's assistant in the project, estimated that the students could gross $100,000 in March.

After one-third of the earnings go back to the Foundation, the students would get the rest, which in the past has meant more than $3,000 each.

"We may not get anything from the sale, too. We may just break even," said Schmid. "It's just like gambling."

The other students in on the gamble include Jannet Glasgow, a graduate in agricultural management, and Diana Wulfshahler, a senior agricultural management major; Lisa Kenyon and Erica Sewall, senior animal science majors; and the only male in the group, two-year technical studies student Francisco Mireles.

Partly to prevent any attackers that may develop with a ride horse, the students rotate in the horse. The horses have not odd names racehorses have, like Olympic Sunrise and Mi Amigo Roberto, IT BAFFLINWILLY and Dancing Della.

But most of them go by nicknames. There's Bob and Blue and Red and Bugs and Addy.

After one morning workout this week—by the groans and complaints a particularly grueling one—the riders took their horses slowly back up to their stalls. Steam rose and swirled from the horses' bodies.

Mireles, known as Caco, called out to the group, all babbling in their riding hats.

"Do I look like Willie Shoemaker or do I look like Willie Shoemaker?" asked Caco, who is about two feet taller and nearly 40 pounds heavier than horse racing's winningest jockey.

DEAR STUDENTS

In the past issues of ASI times, Student Relations has spotlighted the ASI Executive Staff in order to bring you closer to your student government. Beginning this quarter we are going to focus on ASI Senate.

The Senate is the policy-making as well as legislative body of ASI. Senators are elected from each school and attend a number of meetings including Student Senate, Senate Workshop, and their School Council meetings.

In addition, all Senators are assigned to one of the following Senate research committees: Academic, Ad Hoc, Administrative, Codes & Bylaws, Elections and Personnel Policy. In this issue and those that follow, we will be spotlighting these committees.

Good luck this quarter, and watch for School Senators in the ASI Times.

ACADEMIC COMMITTEE

Issues currently being considered by the Committee are the possibility of Cal Poly shifting from the quarter to the semester system also being considered is a proposal to improve Academic Advising on campus.

ASI recently adopted a resolution proposed by the Academic Committee regarding Dead Week. The proposal stated that scheduling of regular examinations during the week prior to finals be banned.

Anything the Academic Committee presents is in the form of a recommendation.

The committee makes a proposal which is heard by the Student Senate. The proposal then goes to an appropriate sub-committee of the Student Senate. If passed, it is heard by the general body of the Academic Senate, which is comprised of faculty members.

If the proposal makes it through these channels, it is sent as a recommendation to President Babcock.

Clary said that faculty members do not always give committee's proposals serious attention. "We don't have a lot of power or authority, it's frustrating when you can't see tangible results."

Clary expressed concern about the committee's and her own ability to make informed resolutions. "You must have a lot of faith in your ability, to make decisions for 15,000 people."

Clary said that the committee is needed for its ability to look at academic issues other than her, of ASI might not have time for.

U.U. BOARD OF GOVERNORS

WHAT IS IT?

The University Union Board of Governors is an organization responsible for planning and managing the operation and management of the Student Union.

WHO SERVES ON IT?

The Board consisting of a student majority is chaired by Stephen Caselli, an Ag-Business major.

Other members of the Board include Cara White (Vice Chair), Ron Coron (Director of ASI Business Affairs), James Landreth (Director, Business Affairs), Joe Willis (UU Building Manager), and several other representatives of the University.

IN WHAT WAY IS IT IMPORTANT?

During the Thursday meetings (1-3 PM in OC 228) the Board discusses and decides on such matters varying from directing the Union to expansion and modernization such as the new Double Decker Student Center, the Multi-Cultural Center, and a possible Union satellite.

The Board encourages student involvement and input. Please feel free to attend any of the meetings.

BEEN ESCORTED LATELY?

The Escort Service has been in business since January 17th. Statistics are provided weekly, and services are available every Sunday through Friday.

Kevin Rice and Mike Ghiglia of Lambda Chi Alpha feel that the service is working well and that maybe in the future there will be more stations with additional people at each station.

They also offered a few words of advice:

1. Don't go out alone after dark.
2. If an escort is not available at the moment, wait. Someone will be there soon.
3. Escorts make sure to wear comfortable- foot and plan to do a lot of walking.

This service is provided for you, the student body: USE IT!

CHILDREN'S CENTER: THE PERFECT SOLUTION

The sound of laughter and pure, high voices can be frequently heard at the Cal Poly Children's Center, which is operated by the Associated Students and provides child development services for children from months to six years of age.

The Center is considered one of the best programs in the country. The program the Center provides for children includes an individualized environment, a nutrition program including breakfast, lunch, and snack, as well as nutrition education and assessment of the children's development — including dental, hearing and vision screening.

Parents are dependent upon income. Student parents are priority as do single parents and those with the highest income. Parents are encouraged to become involved as much as possible in the Center. Each parent pays in 10 hours of volunteer work each quarter. There are two parent meetings each quarter and continuous communication between parents and staff.

Parents can also become involved in the Center's policies making through Board memberships.

The Center even has a Parenting Library.

The Children's Center is the perfect solution for those who need it, the only problem being that the need far exceeds the services available. The Cal Poly Children's Center can serve 9 full-time children under 1 year and 24 half-time children between three and six years. The waiting list as of Winter quarter 1982 was 70 children long.

The reason for this is facilities. The Center's current facilities are all below capacity — California State Laws determine maximum capacity of children. Facilities Two years ago the Center had State issues regarding the program to serve children under these and had to rent an off-campus facility for this purpose, if the expansion was to happen. The renting of an off-campus facility mean that money which could have been used for children are open to a facility. The University is reluctant to allocate any more space on campus in the Children's Center program.

Besides traditional child care programs, there are several other related programs being offered through hiring a lab setting for Child Development students and helping with student projects from various departments, although this doesn't change its status for clients.

It is important to the Children's Center that others see how vital their service is as they continually request additional facilities on campus. It is their hope that sometimes they will be able to serve all the student parents who need child care.

STUDENT PROGRAMMING

Perhaps the most visible of all the Associated Student agencies in the Program Board, this year's budget has been $2,695.

The Board is responsible for every aspect of programming featured by ASI this year, its programming committee, the Planning Board, the Programming Committee, Fine Arts, Recreation and Tourist Guides, Special Events, and Music and Movie Board of Control.

The above committees provide the university community with a diversity of entertainment and cultural activities. Outings and Craft Center provide facilities for hire purposes. The new Multi-Cultural Center on the University Union is maintained through revenues provided by the Cultural Affairs Advisory Committee, an executive member of the Program Board.

The Fine Arts Committee programs the Visual Fine Arts venue, and works through Event Raise to Campus. Members of the committee program the Multi-Cultural Center.

The Board is a student programming board by students for students. It is a voluntary organization that allows Cal Poly students an opportunity to become involved, and to learn the skills necessary for the programming of a successful program, and to meet the requirement of a capital budget in excess of 100%.

One of Program Board's service abilities lies in its willingness to assist campus organizations in programming resource center. It solid student group has an idea for an event, it is a film, a speaker, a small concert, members of Program Board would be happy to help you, assisting in every manner for putting putting an event together.

In the purpose of the Board were best defined twenty years ago. "Program Board is thought of as that portion of the extra-curricular activities which serve to unify students, socially and physically, through educational experiences that involve social, cultural, or personal activities.

In all its phases, it envisages both single events and series, giving opportunities for achievement and social competencies. Its goal is the development of students as well as others. What we do is to have a place or activity to be a forum of character of personality.

You as members of the Board subscribe to that definition, but is that what they aren't in it for the money, but the experience.

All Cal Poly students are welcome to sit in the Program Board offices, located in the Activities Programming Center on the main floor of the University Union.

Mustang batters open with two wins over Hayward

BY VALERIE BRICEMAN

The time has come again for the long afternoons at the ballpark, sunflower seeds and arguing with the man in blue.

Cal Poly's baseball team opened its season over the weekend on a good note by winning the best two out of three games against visiting Cal State Hayward. The Mustangs won the first game with a score of 8-4 while the Mustangs stole the show in the doubleheader winning 4-0 and 12-1. Cal Poly appeared to have some beginning-season jitters as they allowed four unearned runs in the first game, but pulled themselves together for the doubleheader. "If we had to lose one game, I was glad it was the first and that we were able to keep our concentration during the doubleheader," Mustang coach Herdy Harr said.

Pitching in the first game was Joe Fiamengo, who received the loss after being replaced in the sixth inning by Oreg Gilbert. The Mustangs opened up the scoring in the first of the doubleheader with a run in the first and two in the second inning. In the sixth Monty Wala, after his standup triple, was hit home on Steve Ney's grounded to bring the score to 0-6. Steve Compagnone and Greg Alexander combined to shut out the Pioneers in the first game of the doubleheader. Cal Poly's scoring attack in the last game started in the first inning with three runs scored. Their attack continued throughout the second, third, fourth and sixth innings. Kirk Perry hit the only home run of the series for the Mustangs.

In addition, all three front-line players scored in double figures. Forward Kevin Lucas led the way with a game-high 19 points and 10 rebounds, followed by center Mike Franklin with 17 points and Mike Willis, in his third start of the season, with 13. Franklin and Willis also had nine rebounds each.

Besides shooting 48 percent from the floor in the game, 56 percent in the first half, the Mustangs' defense was up to its nation-leading form.

The Toros' high-scoring back court tandem of Dimitrius Lynch and Ed Fitzpatrick were held to just seven and six points respectively, while the Mustangs forced 18Toros turnovers.

Greg Island led Dominguez Hills with 16 points, followed by Karlon Johnson with 12.

Cal Poly opened up a 30-point lead early in the second half only to see the spread diminish to six, 52-46, with more than five minutes remaining.

"We got a little tired down the stretch," Wheeler explained.
Opinion

Moratorium needed

The Nipomo Dunes recreation area—nestled within tracts of private property southwest of Arroyo Grande—has recently become a battle zone in the continuing war between business and environmental interests in California. The scenic chunk of state parkland on the Central Coast has over the years fallen victim to environmental abuse and ineffective management. Today the situation has deteriorated to a point that the California Coastal Commission will soon consider imposing a moratorium on off-road vehicles use there.

The commissioners will examine this issue on Feb. 18 in Santa Barbara. The Mustang Daily Editorial Board supports the imposition of such a moratorium, which would be in effect until an environmental impact study of the area could be made. The moratorium would also provide time for the state park administration to formulate a proposal for both patrolling and controlling off-road vehicles that may use the recreational area in the future.

Poly biology Professor Drick Walters, chair of the Sierra Club’s task force on the Nipomo Dunes, told Mustang Daily that “the present level of (off-road vehicle) use is exceeding the carrying capacity of the land.”

Certainly any evidence pointing to possible abuse of our coastal areas must be taken seriously. Californians have traditionally viewed their Pacific coastlines as a special area of concern, as evidenced by the passage of Proposition 20 in 1974 which put environmental restrictions on development of lands within five miles of coastal waters. Moreover, coastal areas such as Nipomo Dunes represent a fragile component of the ecosystem since they lack the diversity of plant and animal life common to more resilient areas further inland. And being fragile, such areas require long periods of recovery time after being subjected to unrestricted use.

Unfortunately, coastal areas must be taken seriously. Californians have made. The moratorium would also provide time for the state park administration to formulate a proposal for both patrolling and controlling off-road vehicles that may use the recreational area in the future.

Central Coast businesses that benefit from ORV use—gas stations, auto repair shops, etc.—have predictably lined up against the moratorium. On the other hand, during these times of Reaganomics, recession and unemployment, we can sympathize with the plight of small businesses in the state. But when the central issue is between short-term economic gains and the long-term maintenance of a healthy coastal environment, we cannot help but to favor the latter.

Critical consequences

Editor:

In response to the editorial, Taking Precautions on Feb. 3, I would like to emphasize the use of the Escort Service. I have used the Escort Service several times since it began from both the University Union and the library. I feel that it is an excellent service and more women should take advantage of it.

Many women have misconceptions about the Escort Service, i.e., those fraternity guys are only doing this so they can meet girls, or, I don’t want some stranger to walk me home, or, it’s too embarrassing to ask. There were many of the thoughts that went through my head before I decided that it is common sense not to be walking home alone at night. Each volunteer that I have met has been very sincere and is just as concerned about the assaults upon women as are. If they weren’t concerned they wouldn’t be volunteering their time.

I can’t emphasize enough how important it is for women to be aware of the societal problem that is occurring and to take the necessary precautions. The service is available and we should be using it. Thank you to all those who have worked so hard to put the Escort Service together.

Excellent service

Editor:

In response to the editorial, Escort Service: What’s Up? on Feb. 3, I would like to reinforce the message that Mustang Daily is in support of the Escort Service. As an American, a Poly student, and a Poly biology major, I firmly believe that this service is important to the community. The Escort Service is available to all Poly students and faculty members.

The Escort Service is an important part of the Mustang Daily’s mission to provide a safe and secure environment for all Poly students and faculty members. The service was created to address the safety concerns of Poly students and faculty members, and it is important to support this service in order to ensure that all Poly students and faculty members feel safe and secure on campus.

We believe that the Escort Service is an important service that should be supported by all Poly students and faculty members. We encourage all Poly students and faculty members to use the Escort Service to feel safe and secure on campus.

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing to express my concerns about the recent increase in violence on our campus. As a member of the Poly community, I feel it is important to speak out against this behavior and to demand that something be done to address it.

The most recent incident occurred last Friday night when a group of students were attacked by a group of off-campus students. This is not the first time we have seen violence on our campus, and it is unacceptable. The administration needs to take action to prevent this kind of behavior from happening again.

I urge all Poly students to stand together and demand that the administration take action to address this issue. We need to create a safe and secure environment for all Poly students.

Sincerely,
