Cal Poly Society of Women Engineers to Bring Hands-On Activities to Local Fourth-Graders

SAN LUIS OBISPO – Cal Poly students from the Society of Women Engineers (SWE) will visit local fourth-grade classrooms the week of Feb. 22–25.

SWE members are scheduled to visit schools in Morro Bay, Santa Maria, Grover Beach and San Luis Obispo, where they will lead fourth-graders in hands-on science experiments and talk with them about engineering.

“We want to get younger students interested and excited in engineering through participation in a fun experiment” said Anastasia Newark, SWE Fourth-Grade Days commissioner.

Cal Poly’s SWE chapter has a long history of excellence and outreach within the community. Members often become “study-buddies” for elementary school children and mentor junior high and high school students. Other programs such as Building an Engineer, Shadow an Engineering Student and Girl Scout Engineering Day give youngsters a hands-on opportunity to learn about engineering.

“Our SWE members show students how fun engineering can be,” said Helene Finger, director of the Women’s Engineering Program at Cal Poly. “The fourth-graders relate well to our students, and this connection allows the younger students to see that being an engineer is a great career choice for someone like them.”

SWE members will be at the following schools (teacher names included):
