President earns high marks

While Cal Poly students are still waiting to find out their midterm grades, President Warren Baker and his administrative staff have received their report card on their administrative performance over the past two and a half years.

Cal Poly deans, faculty members and students are generally pleased with the job Baker has accomplished since coming into office. Baker's seemingly open administration is a direct result of his personality, according to several persons interviewed.

Most of those interviewed see Baker as an outside president, as opposed to one who sits at his desk all day.

"He is shown as an outside president who is always off campus raising money as opposed to one sitting at a desk taking care of the little things," said Robert Cow, dean of the School of Business.

Baker delegates much of his authority to the rest of his administration, he added.

Private Funding

The most dynamic part of Baker's administration as seen by those interviewed is the gathering of private funds for the university—an effort to offset losses in public funding.

"It's necessary," said Willie Huff, former A.S.I. president. "Cal Poly has a natural draw from industry and it's coming perilously close to gobbling him up."

Laworthy echoes other's concerns in that Baker is kept very busy doing things that have ultimate value to the campus but does not concentrate on day-to-day administrative tasks.

Other faculty members see this in a different way, saying Baker shouldn't have to deal with the nuts and bolts of everyday campus administration. Instead he should get out and build Cal Poly's reputation.

The nature of my job takes me away from campus," Baker commented. "I have been involved in several statewide programs that I feel are important or I feel obligated to be on because the outcomes influence Cal Poly."

Faculty members and deans interviewed are very impressed with the way Baker has effectively spoken in Sacramento with state legislators for capital outlay needs.

"One of the things I feel particularly pleased about in the two and a half years I've been here has been the degree of success I've been experiencing in Sacramento," said Baker, who was previously vice president of Academic Affairs at the University of Detroit.

He is pleased with the rapport developed with legislators and wants to continue that development.

"We have a good tale to tell and I want to tell them," he added.

"He is an effective advocate of Cal Poly and we want him to go right on doing that," said Hazel Jones, vice president of Academic Affairs.

Faculty Concerned

The fact that Baker likes to hear many points of view is a style that has helped open up lines of communication in all levels of campus, said Tim Kersten, chair of the Academic Senate.

Baker echoed the statement made by many faculty members. "I feel it's important that we have an open..."
Guatemalan junta keeps power

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) - The military-dominated government emerged from presidential elections with its power intact but may have failed to gain U.S. backing for its fight against a growing guerrilla movement.

Sunday's elections, which gave the lead for the four-year presidency to the former defense minister, Gen. Angel Anzaldo Quiraul, were marred by charges of fraud, the detention of three opponents and a tough crackdown on political protests.

The United States suspended military aid to Guatemala in 1977 because of charges of human rights abuses and made it clear that honest elections and a reduction in violence would help end the suspension.

The U.S. State Department has since expressed its concern over reports of rigged voting but has yet to say what effect the accusations may have on American policy.

Guarner said Guatemala's relationship with the United States will depend on the reaction of the American people to the elections. Washington likely will wait and see if the three unsuccessful candidates have hard evidence of fraud or if they merely are sore losers, as Guarner insists.

Senate proposes abortion ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee on Wednesday endorsed a proposed constitutional amendment to give Congress and state legislatures the power to ban abortions — the first time foes of legalized abortion have cleared such legislation through a full congressional committee.

The amendment would overturn the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing most abortions.

Proposed by conservative Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, the amendment approved by a 10-7 vote would split jurisdiction over the emotionally charged issue between Congress and state legislatures. A state legislature would be empowered to approve a tougher statute than one that might be approved in Congress.

City adopts moratorium on new video arcades

BY MAURA THURMAN

San Luis Obispo's City Council voted 4-1 Tuesday to ban new video game arcades pending a four-month study of potential problems with the businesses.

The "urgency ordinance," which took effect as soon as it was approved, will exempt those who have already filed applications to establish video game centers.

Allen Settle, who cast the dissenting vote, said he opposed the measure on the grounds that no emergency exists.

"If we are going to exempt the applications in process," he said, "then where is the emergency? There isn't one."

Settle said the council received no complaints from the community residents about the arcades.

"The mayor initiated it the ordinance," Settle said. "We contacted groups like the PTA, and received very little response."

"If the water goes out, if there is uncontrolled condominium conversion, that's an emergency," Settle said. "But video games just aren't as important as all that."

Conditional use permits are sufficient to deal with any problems that may be discovered in the video game business, Settle said.

The ordinance only pertains to the establishment of more than four or more coin-operated games in one location.

The three arcades already established within city limits will not be affected.

Of the two applications now on file, Settle said probably only one would be approved, because their proposed locations are adjacent to each other.

The market for video game centers in San Luis Obispo is nearly full. Settle said, and he anticipates few new applicants.

"The vote was really useless because the market is just about gone," Settle said. "How many video games can people use?"

Traveling evangelist raises student ire

BY NANCY LEWIS

Student reactions changed from mere curiosity to anger as two traveling evangelists preached in the University Union plaza on Wednesday, calling Cal Poly a "God-forsaken campus."

With an audience of several hundred students, evangelist George "Jed" Smock and an unidentified companion began "preaching the truth," said a Cal Poly Christian who did not wish to be identified, but changed course by starting to add their own opinions.

According to students in the crowd, Smock directed accusations at the crowd in general and at individual students, calling all Cal Poly women whores and all Cal Poly men homosexuals.

"Girls at Cal Poly are worse than whores because whereas at least put a price on their bodies," one student said, relating Smock's message.

Objects were thrown at Smock and his companion as they cut down individual students in the crowd.

According to a Cal Poly Christian who wished to remain anonymous, it wasn't a disagreement that turned him away from listening to the evangelists, but "the methods of what to say and when to say it, makes it wrong."

"He was preaching the truth," the same student added, but he wasn't preaching with the spirit of love.

The evangelists were cutting students down and "never hailing" them, he said.

"Regardless of what students do as far as sin, God's hand is still stretch-\ed out," the Christian said. "There's always hope in Jesus Christ."

Reactions from students in the crowd were strong against the evangelists.

"He's an ass," said student Lori Smith. "If he's trying to win any new converts today, he blew it."

Smock was led away by police while singing a few lines to "Onward, Christian Soldiers;" his companion preached a few minutes longer before also being led away.

Several students remarked that the "evangelists were right on the Word of God," but "people were after the show."

Faculty promotion plan dies in Academic Senate

BY NANCY LEWIS

The Academic Senate struck down a resolution on Tuesday that would have altered the way faculty members are promoted.

After much debating and amending of the resolution, the Senate voted against it 7-31, with one abstention.

The new promotion plan would have allowed faculty members who are candidates for promotion to be recommended by rank ordering.

Rank ordering of the eligible candidates for promotion is seen as necessary because there are too many eligible candidates for the available budget to handle, according to the resolution.

Please see page 4
Academic Senate votes down promotion proposal

Rank ordering is ranking all eligible candidates in order of who should be recommended for promotion first.

Several senators proposed sending the resolution back to the Personnel Policies Committee, with requests that the committee review the amended suggestions, but that proposal was not met favorably by committee chair George Murray, who jokingly threatened to resign if it was sent back.

The motion unanimously failed.

Reasons for the strong opposition to the resolution were many, but among the most widely expressed was the separation of funds into two categories, associate professor and full professor.

Strong opposition was also raised about the proper role of department heads and deans in making ranking and recommending decisions.

The proposed resolution stated that deans and department heads had no say in who gets promoted, that faculty members or university committees should be involved.

An amendment was passed raising the authority of the dean for ranking and recommending eligible candidates, but the position of the department head stayed the same.

Currently candidates are ranked by the department head and then deans arrive at a school rank order after consulting with a standing or ad hoc committee, comprised of either the chair of the tenure professor selected from each department of school.

Another problem with the resolution was the suggestion that the Secondary Level Committee (SLC) comprised of the school dean and one full professor from each department within a school, should not be involved in both ranking and recommending a candidate.

Several senators wanted the SLC to only be involved in the ranking, for promotion, according to Murray.

The recommending, said the senators, should be left solely to the Primary Level Committee (PLC), comprised of a minimum of three persons including the department head and all tenured members of the department, or an elected committee of at least three persons having rank higher than that of the person eligible for promotion.

Keith Stowe, physics professor, echoed a widely felt concern among senators that techniques for promotion at the departmental level are already favorable and there is no need to change.

 Diary of a regional championship game.

It is all over now except for a few minutes more on a piece of paper and three rolls of black-and-white film, but there was a certain electricity surrounding the Bakersfield California College gym that caused my stomach to turn nervously.

Here are some recollections from last Saturday:

9:30 a.m.—The last Bakersfield Californian sells out at the coin machine in front of the Hill House Hotel. Acting Athletic Director Dick Heaton bought the last issue. Bakerefield City surrounds the hotel to fetch the two thousand electricity supplied by the House Hotel. Acting Athletic Director Dick Heaton bought the last issue.

4 p.m.—The team was الأجنبل for dinner but the coffee shop has closed because it is catering a wedding (for it expected another rush by the team). Coach Ernie Wheeler leads a caravan search in an attempt to order a 10-minute jaunt along Union Avenue before he settled for Farmer John's Pancake House and pizza, but he was dissatisfied. Assistant Mark Felix is sent back to the hotel to fetch the two Mike (Franklin and Siano) who were tardy for the dinner bus. Guard Alex Lambertson finds the borkerlythm readout—is this The Case of Bicycle vs. Auto?

In an unscheduled conference match, the Mustangs dropped a five-game battle to Ball State of Indiana last Thursday night: 16-18, 15-14, 15-9, 12-16, 15-10.

Ball State, fresh off an upset win over Division I front-runner USC the night before, sports an impressive 17-1 record and is favored to represent the Midwest in the NCAA tournament this spring.

"We were up and down," Cummings said of his team's performance against the Cardinals. "We didn't play all that steadily. The times we played, we stuck it to them. The rest of the way we were just too flat."

The Mustangs didn't stay flat for long, however, as Poly disposed of conference foes LaVerne and UC Riverside on Friday and Saturday night.

Outside hitter John Dinoico and middle hitter Tim Toon led the team in kills against LaVerne. They both hit eight points in 10 attempts.

ThesePresidentes ended their three-game match (15-6, 15-12, 15-4) with one of his three service ace of the night.

Middle hitter Booth led the Mustangs in their 15-6, 15-14, 15-9 triumph over the Highlanders of UC Riverside in the Main Gym. Booth had nine kills in 17 attempts.

The Cal Poly men's tennis team, 4-0 in CCAA competition, will host Sonoma State at 2 p.m. today on Poly's tennis courts.

Buehning: All American

Cal Poly woman soccer Laura Buehning was named to the college division Academic All-America team Wednesday by the College Sports Information Directors of America.

The 60 guard from Calgary, Canada, is a senior biology student, maintaining a 3.9 grade point average.

Buehning, 22, was also named California Collegiate Athletic Association co-Player-of-the-Year last week along with UC Riverside's Donna Hammonds.

Guatemala's future

El Salvador has received most of the attention in Central America as of late, but last Sunday's presidential elections in Guatemala may have been the prelude to events that could have a serious bearing on Central America for many years to come.

Ever since rebels, sponsored and supported by the CIA—overthrew an elected, left-wing president in 1984, Guatemala has been ruled by a series of army officers. The voters have known before every presidential election who the victor would be—the government-backed general.

But in Guatemala, like the rest of Central America, times have changed. The ruling government, embattled by leftist guerrillas, assailed by other nations for a horrendous human rights record and suffering through harsh economic times, has been hoping to change its image in an effort to gain new military and economic aid.

And so, Sunday became a big day for Guatemala, as it tried to prove to the world it could be a democracy by holding free and open elections for the first time in nearly 30 years. However the government's candidate, Gen. Angel Anibal Guevara was an easy victor, raising widespread accusations of election fraud in the process.

Guevara says the elections were run "as clean as could be," but Guevara himself, coming from candidates on both his right and left, will only further discredit and embarrass the government unless it can prove them false or insignificant.

But today, following a government crackdown on demonstrators against the election results, it looks like they will have a tough time doing this, for Guevara's opponents have cited several specific instances of fraud.

For instance, government officials are accused of intimidating poll watchers in some precincts, interfering with phone lines, and holding back returns in some areas. And in some towns, the returns showed more votes to Guevara than there were registered voters living there.

In addition, the government must live down the long record of foul play it has established in elections since 1954. Even over the last two years, more than 200 members of Guatemala's Christian Democratic Party have been murdered, mostly by government troops.

The greatest tragedy of all this is that the status quo desperately needs reform. Guatemala seems but a step behind El Salvador on road to violent revolution. Living under military rule for nearly three decades now, more than half of Guatemala's 7.2 million people live in isolated mountain areas, lacking such necessities as proper food, housing and education.

Unfortunately, the generals seem determined to put down any form of opposition to their regime. They continue to push ahead their own wishes, seeing how far they can go before people protest.

Looking over this recent history, it seems there was little good to expect out of Guatemala's election. And if the government does not learn from the example of El Salvador and other lands by taking steps toward democracy, then there is also little hope for the future of Guatemala.

It won't stop with registration

Editor:

Although Ms. Raiser (March 2) is technically correct in stating that handgun registration in D.C. is accompanied by assurances that it would not lead to a ban, it was followed a year later by just that—a ban on the private ownership of handguns and severe restrictions on the ownership of rifles and shotguns. Since all of the handgun control organizations that I am aware of are philosophically opposed to the private ownership of handguns, I doubt if Guevara would stop with mere registration in California any more than they did in D.C.

San Luis Obispo is coming up for air. But what kind of air are the people coming up for? Clean, unpolluted, untroubled, and toxic-free?

Dishonest or uninformed, many people don't realize that San Luis Obispo has some of the same pollution problems as Los Angeles, but they're not as noticeable.

One of the problems that exists in the county is the sulfur dioxide content, which is not always in the legal limits. According to research done by Norman Eutough, chemistry professor at Cal Poly, PG&E stacks secrete a plume into the air containing sulfur dioxide, which produces harmful sulfuric acid. These acids travel from Morro Bay, up the valley and toward San Luis Obispo.

Sulfur dioxide converts to sulfuric acid, a harmful toxic material, at a typical conversion rate of 0.5 percent per hour. But when the dioxide meets with a fog bank, or humidity, it converts at a much faster rate.

Jackson Browne anti-coal pollution concert set to be held at the Los Angeles Coliseum on May 10th. His concert will bring together some of the people involved in the anti-coal campaign and raise funds for the important cause of anti-coal pollution. Browne has been involved with the cause for many years and has used his platform to raise awareness about the dangers of coal mining and the need for clean energy sources.

The event is expected to attract a large audience of anti-coal activists and music lovers, with a variety of performers taking part in the concert. The funds raised will support the ongoing efforts of organizations working to promote clean energy solutions and advocate for policies that reduce reliance on coal.

The concert will feature music performances, speeches, and discussions with experts in the field of anti-coal pollution. Browne is expected to headline the event, with other well-known artists also participating.

The concert is a part of a broader movement to bring attention to the issue of anti-coal pollution and the need for sustainable energy solutions. It serves as an opportunity for people to come together and support the cause through music and activism.

The event is open to the public and tickets will be available for purchase. For more information about the concert, including ticket pricing and event details, interested individuals can visit the official website or social media pages of the organizers.

Let's work to maintain the quality of our air for tomorrow.
