Donn Morris feels that punkers are stereotyped. The 21-year-old journalism major is what society has labeled a "punker." But Morris doesn't feel he's a punker.

"I call myself the average Cal Poly journalism student," he said.

Morris sports a "mohawk" type haircut and wears layered clothing typical of the '50s. He doesn't wear dazzling earrings on his earlobes, nor does he wear tattered T-shirts that most everyone typecasts as what a punker should wear.

But still, Morris' appearances have shocked some people and have even caused others to take action against him.

When Morris came to Cal Poly four years ago, he said he looked like "your average regular high school student, who was becoming a freshman."

Soon after entering Cal Poly, Morris went through a transformation in his life. "I don't know whether it has to do with dorm-life breeding, though the one I was in was a zoo," he said. "College turned out to be the whole difference. High school was a sort of incubation period."

"In high school you basically knew everyone, you led a very stable lifestyle. Then in college, you hear all the myths about the different people, and you're out there living with them—it's different," Morris said.

One of the major differences in Morris' life was the style of music he began listening to. "I was into every band in high school—Zepplin, Van Halen, Aerosmith and Journey to name a few." He said. "Mainly I was listening to them because everyone else was listening to them. There a few bands caught my ear and I really liked what I was listening to."

He began to listen to bands such as the Sex Pistols, These bands, who were labeled punk rock, approached world concerns and questioned society. "They were addressing these problems, whereas the others were still singing about the same old stuff—all about love and how my baby left me and how I got my baby back," Morris said.

Soon after discovering these bands, Morris' life was transformed. He got his haircut and slowly began to dress "differently from others."

He recalls, "When I showed up at Cal Poly, I got the haircut. I could count the number of people who looked like me on two fingers."

After the change in his lifestyle, Morris noticed a change in the attitudes of people on and off campus. "Everyone just started staring at me as though I was a stranger. I don't think I was any different. I wasn't out to say 'screw you' I'm going to look different. It just pleases me," he said. I wasn't out to make any type of statement like 'Well, here I am, I wasn't trying to please anyone but me. I liked it. It pleases me. Before I try to please or displease anyone—I'm going to please me," Morris said.

He began to notice people stereotyping him. "I couldn't understand why. When I first got the haircut and the clothes, people were very vocal, I couldn't understand why. They'd say things like 'you godamn punker,'" he said. "I just couldn't figure that out. If I was walking down the street and saw the strangest person on the earth, I don't think I would start calling them names.

Morris said he found many people who thought of his lifestyle as "wild and crazy.

"You really get a lot of hypocritical analogy—stuff like punkers beat people up is one of the major stereotypes," he said. "I can't say that it's not all true, but a lot of it isn't."

Morris recalls a time when a member from a motorcycle gang came up to him and began "screaming in my ear about what he thought of me.

He added, "I've been pushed around because of Students react to different campus lifestyle

the way I look, but my reaction to it is to act like it never happened. People are expecting a reaction— that I am going to fight back.”

The number of people who have changed their lifestyle to that of a punker’s has grown. Whether it’s a fad or fashion, Morris doesn’t know.

“ ‘It depends on the individual. I don’t dislike what people do, it’s their lifestyle,’ he said. ‘People are seeing things out there, and some of them are there just following the leader type of thing’.”

Because of his punk lifestyle, Morris knows people view him differently. He knows that when he does start looking for a job things will be different.

“If I were to work on a newspaper or such, I’m sure I would have to look the way a journalist is supposed to look,” he said.

He added, “I’d be just as comfortable dressing in that way. I’ll still think the same. I realize that. I have even had instructors who have gone out of their way to tell me that I may have to conform. I lead a lifestyle, but I’ll have to conform to the dress.”

“Most employers want to hire a nice, responsible person, and I guess responsible goes into the looks and dress,” Morris said. Although people think Morris seems strange because of his lifestyle, he said, “I don’t feel at all like a revolutionist—though I’ve been blasted by a lot of people because of the way I look.”

“People think I’m strange, but I just think they look stranger, he added. “I’m not saying that what everyone else is doing is wrong, but I don’t think that what I’m doing is wrong either.”

EVELYN WOOD READING DYNAMICS
California university and college students are invited to submit entries to the 1983 Great California Resource Rally poster contest.

The Rally, scheduled for April 18-24, is designed to encourage Californians to become involved in recycling, litter control, waste reduction and other waste-eliminating activities throughout the state to help promote the 1983 Great California Resource Rally and must include the name, "The Great California Resource Rally," and the date, "April 18-24, 1983." All entries must be submitted by April 18, 1983.

The poster designs should highlight the theme of the Rally and must be original. "The California Waste Management Board at (916) 529-1391 or Kathryn Cleary of Solon and Associates at (415) 254-0957.

The poster contest offers non-professional artists the opportunity to gain widespread recognition and experience in their field. The winning poster will be reproduced, distributed and displayed throughout the state to help promote the 1983 Great California Resource Rally. Winners will be announced at a special news conference in late February or early March.

Cash prizes of $700, $300 and $100 will be awarded to the top three poster contest winners. The winning poster will be reviewed, distributed and displayed throughout the state to help promote the 1983 Great California Resource Rally. Winners will be announced at a special news conference in late February or early March.

Applications are available from the California Waste Management Board at (916) 529-1391 or Kathryn Cleary of Solon and Associates at (415) 254-0957.

International universities propose foreign challenges and stimulation

by Teresa Mariani

The International Programs office is looking for students interested in a year of college study abroad. Cal Poly sends about 100 students to overseas universities each year through the California State University system's International Programs. Last year 96 students from Cal Poly spent a year at an overseas campus through the foreign study program.

"It isn't something that's just for rich kids," said Holly White, past Alumni Assistant at the Cal Poly branch of the program. "It's for serious students who also have a sense of adventure.

White said most foreign study programs involve European universities. The most popular and competitive programs overseas are in architecture and business.

White said Cal Poly's strength in these two majors accounts for the high proportion of students from this campus who are selected for foreign study programs.

Students can study at universities in 15 different countries through CSU International Programs. Depending on the foreign university they want to attend, students must have at least a 2.75 or a 3.0 GPA. Students must also have junior standing by the time they intend to leave for overseas study in order to be considered for the program.

All units earned abroad will transfer back to CSU campuses, and any financial aid students received in California can be applied to overseas study.

The cost of a year of overseas study for a student depends on the cost of living in the country. It ranges from $4,500 for a year in Mexico to $8,000 for a year in Denmark, according to Joanne LeBaron, this year's Alumni Assistant for the program.

"It also depends on the extracurricular activities that go along with studies," she added.

White and LeBaron both said a year of study at a foreign university impresses prospective employers and helps students get into graduate schools.

Experience in a foreign culture and in foreign studies is something most people don't have, LeBaron stressed.

Students whose majors and career goals would best coordinate with overseas university study programs are most likely to be accepted to the international study program, LeBaron said.

To be chosen for the program, students must apply and are then interviewed. Students who want to study at universities in Spain, France, Peru or Brazil must have two years of college study in the country's language. Students going to Japan, New Zealand, Denmark, and some other countries do not have to have any experience in foreign languages.

The application deadline for the foreign study program in Feb. 9. Applications are available in the International Programs office in Room 211 in the Duster Library Building. Interested students can drop by the office or call 546-2153.

Anti-nukes demo inefficiency

On Monday, Jan. 17 and Tuesday, Jan. 18, from noon to 1 p.m., People Generating Energy will hold a Lemonstration ("a Diablo is a lemon" demonstration), to show the economic consequences of the Diablo Canyon Nuclear Power Plant.

The Lemonstration, which will occur at Pacific Gas & Electric's San Luis Obispo office at 849 Monterey St., will oppose ratepayers' support of Diablo Canyon.

Mismanagement, design flaws, poor construction practices and the expenses inherent in nuclear power have driven the cost of the plant up to $3 billion from an original figure of $515 million, according to the Edison Electric Institute recently reported in overpay electrical use, a key measure of power demand, has gone down for the first time in nearly 40 years, leaving the industry with a surplus generating capacity of 38 percent, the highest since 1938.

Fresh lemonade will be sold at the Lemonstration. For more information on this event call 543-8402.

International universities propose foreign challenges and stimulation

The International Programs office is looking for students interested in a year of college study abroad. Cal Poly sends about 100 students to overseas universities each year through the California State University system's International Programs. Last year 96 students from Cal Poly spent a year at an overseas campus through the foreign study program.

"It isn't something that's just for rich kids," said Holly White, past Alumni Assistant at the Cal Poly branch of the program. "It's for serious students who also have a sense of adventure.

Men host one-sided WW III

by Mark Gang

If Ronald Reagan is serious about cutting the nation’s defense spending, he ought to consider using the Cal Poly men’s basketball team as an inexpensive deterrent to nuclear attack.

In twenty minutes of action during Friday night’s CCAA opener against UC Riverside, the Mustangs’ 1-2-2 zone allowed just two field goals and limited the Highlanders to fifteen percent shooting.

But, just when it looked like a blow-out the Highlanders put on an all-out frontal attack. Using a full-court press, UCR scored the first ten points of the second half to cut Poly’s lead to 26-18.

A quick Poly time-out cooled off the visitors and the Mustang lead got no smaller than six points as Ernie Wheeler’s troops held off UCR for a 46-37 win.

While UCR was shooting fifteen percent in the first half, Poly wasn’t much better (thirty-three percent). In fact, UCR outshot Poly for the game — 30.1 to 37.8.

The scoring difference came in the free throw department where the Mustangs outscored the Highlanders 18-5. Most of those came late in the game.

Highlander head coach John Masi said the difference in the game was experience. “We have two guys who have played in the CCAA before. When you have a lot of young guys they don’t know what to expect. You can’t be kickback and laissez-faire in this league.”

You can’t win with only four players scoring either. Chris Rentie and James Fontenette got their averages with 13 and 12 points, respectively, but no one else got more than 6.

Poly’s scoring was balanced as usual. Jim Van Winden and Tom Perkins each scored 8 points to lead the Mustangs.

On Saturday night the Mustangs faced a markedly different team, according to head coach Ernie Wheeler. “Riverside is a quick team but Pomona is bigger and stronger,” he said after Friday’s win.

No matter. The Mustangs adjusted well enough to register a 72-60 win behind a balanced scoring attack, led by senior guard Alex Lambertson with 19 points, Pat Fracisco with 12 and Tom Perkins with 11.

After the first weekend of league play, the Mustangs are 12-4 overall, 2-0 in the CCAA.

Next week, the Mustangs hit the road for the first time in a month, going to Northridge and Los Angeles for conference games.

Mike Franklin gets part of a rebound against UC Riverside Friday night. He had four on the night, helping Poly to a 46-37 win.

Pomona was following Cal Poly San Luis Obispo most of the night Saturday, John Shoals, Tom Perkins and Alex Lambertson showing how.

Women attempt Upset Weekend, upset themselves

by Mike Mathison

There was very little hope, if any at all, for the Cal Poly women's basketball team to upset No. 1 nationally ranked Cal Poly Pomona Saturday night down south in California Collegiate Athletic Association (CCAA) activity.

So the Mustangs concentrated their collective efforts in upsetting UC-Riverside Friday evening in the CCAA opener for both teams. The Highlanders entered the contest ranked No. 8 in the nation in Division II.

The girls talked all week about beating Riverside. They knew they had a chance, and weren't just kidding themselves into believing they had a chance.

But, it wasn't to be. The Highlanders, who led 40-34 at intermission, held off every Mustang second-half charge en route to a 77-69 win. Saturday night at Pomona, Poly went 0-3 in the CCAA standings as the Broncos whipped the visitors, 93-47.

The 4-12 Mustangs continue CCAA play this weekend when they host Cal State Northridge in the Main Gym. Going in, the first weekend of CCAA play, Northridge was ranked No. 15 in the Division II poll.

Lisa McAllister pauses to perform a moment of grace for the Cal Poly gymnastics team, as Poly called on her the rest of the game, "Wilson said. "And didn't do foul out."

"We just didn't get the bucket, we needed at the right time," Wilson said. "I thought we did a good job on Hammond-Mares. We held her to 21 points and that's a pretty shallow performance for her."

The Mustangs were 15-of-20 from the line in the second half, the Mustangs were one-for-two. For the game, Riverside was 23-for-30, Poly five-for-nine. So that as it may, the Mustangs still had their chances in the second half to tie the game. They were within two a few times, but could never knot the score.

From the standolnol ol the Mustangs, who are 1-0 in the CCAA. Darla Wilson, it's not what was averaging 24.5 points and 11 rebounds. The Bronco's rais­ed their record to 14-2. They are 1-0 in the CCAA.

"Pomona is the best Division II team in the na­tion," Wilson said.

"The Bronco's shot 57 per­cent from the field (42-for­71). That's awesome. "If there would have been a three-point line, Pomona would have made a dozen of them," Wilson said.

"We were in Jackie White's face all night and she hit jumpers from the sideline all night. You can't do a lot with that. We pushed as much as we could."

"We're not in large numbers," Wilson said of the Mustangs, who are now down to eight players.

Kathy Ferguson is out of action for at least three weeks because of a stress fracture in her right foot.

"And everyone did adapt themselves at Riverside last night. I think that had a lot to do with our perfor­mance against Pomona."

Ulrich led the Mustangs in scoring against Pomona with 18. She also pulled in eight rebounds. That tied Hosken for the team high.

Hosken said the Mustangs are 1-0 in the CCAA.
