No more overnight campouts for on-campus interviews

by Gall Pellerin
Staff Writer

Senior year not only means the celebration of graduation, but the beginning of job hunting as well. The University Placement Center located in Heron Hall is a service for students designed to aid in the sometimes frustrating search for employment after graduation.

This year the center has reorganized its on-campus interviewing, according to recruiting coordinator Karen Archambeault. "We have a standing interview sign-up sheet for each week so that you will know which employers will be on campus that week," she said.

Another service offered by the center is workshops on resume preparation, letters of application and interviewing techniques. These workshops are provided on an ongoing basis throughout the year.

The fact that employers interview and hire many engineering, computer science and business majors offsets the lower success in other fields, for a combined success rate of 65 percent, Archambeault explained.

"However, others may find a job with the aid of the research material we have here," she said, noting that on-campus interviewing is not the only way to find employment.

"It's a good idea to get started early," Archambeault advised. "Get interviews under your belt—then maybe by March you'll have a job offer."

Both rise from obscurity

Record stores are a big hit with the local music scene

by Chris Matthews
Staff Writer

"From small things baby, big things one day come."
—Bruce Springsteen

This line from a Bruce Springsteen song is especially fitting to the success stories of San Luis Obispo's two main retail record stores, Boo Bops Records and Cheap Thrills. In the absence of large chain stores in the area, such as the Warehouse or Music Plus, both stores have grown from modest beginnings by offering a wide variety of music for the popular listener and the avid audiophile alike.

"We used to sell records at the swap meet in L.A.," said Boo Bop's Glenn Forbes, who is co-owner along with Ed Taylor. "We moved here eight years ago and were originally located in the Park Hotel. Three years later we moved to our present site on Monterey St."

Boo Bops proudly specializes in out-of-print records, collector's items, Japanese imports, new wave and punk.

Japanese imports are particularly popular because they are generally considered to be better quality pressings," Forbes said.

Boo Bops features used records in its Wax Museum, stocked with unique pressings such as picture and colored vinyl discs, obscure groups, limited editions, demos and popular group anthologies. They once carried bootleg recordings, until they were raided last fall. "It was part of a state-wide crack-down," Forbes noted.

"While we do provide the mainstream with popular groups and tunes, we cater more to the fringe area people," Forbes said. "The store also carries many records, even some collector's copies, upon request.

"Sometimes it takes a little work and time to get an obscure record, but it's worth it," Forbes stressed.

Forbes enjoys his business. "There are always new products, new sounds. It's much easier to sample music than to sample books, for example. Besides, there is always a great deal of interest in popular music, and that makes it fun."

Likewise, Cheap Thrills, owned by Rick Farris, began to prosper in 1981. "This store, located above Korbs on Higuera St., stocks many items ranging from one-of-a-kind, rare, and new, to Radio Shack and Mail Order types of audio accessories."

Farris believes the reason for his success is persistence. "I have been involved here since 1971 while I was a student at Cal Poly," he said. At the time, I was an industrial design major. "Although the degree may not relate to what I do now, college gives you a broad learning experience that is valuable."

However, before seniors can sign up for interviews, they must participate in a mandatory orientation meeting for all students who plan to use the Placement Center services, Archambeault said.

At the meeting, Placement Center staffers explain how to use the interview program and how to follow the center's procedures.

One requirement, which students can not substitute for a professional resume, is a placement interview resume form which must be filled out by each student before actually participating in the on-campus interviewing process, she said.

The recruiting orientation meetings are held twice daily, five days a week: check the Placement Center for times and locations.

Students who are planning to go through the program should pick up an interview bulletin in the center. The recruiting orientation meetings are held twice daily, five days a week: check the Placement Center for times and locations.

The next bi-quarterly bulletin will be available Wednesday, Oct. 12.

"Students will have hopefully researched the bulletin so they will know which employers they wish to sign up for," Archambeault said, noting that a library of employer brochures and video tapes are also available in the center to help with students' research.

In addition to the research, she said, students should make an appointment with a professional adviser in the Placement Center to formulate a job search strategy. An adviser has been assigned to work with students from each school.

Another service offered by the center is workshops on resume preparation, letters of application and interview training. These training programs are provided on an ongoing basis throughout the year.

"It's a good idea to get started early," Archambeault advised. "Get interviews under your belt—then maybe by March you'll have a job offer."

"It's hard to keep up with it because it is constantly changing."

War Powers act undermined in Lebanon vote

Webster's Third New International Dictionary defines quagmire as, "a complex or precarious position where disengagement is difficult." The term is popularly used to describe, for instance, the United States' involvement in Vietnam.

Recently both houses of Congress passed compromise legislation committing U.S. Marines to remain stationed in Lebanon for 18 more months, thereby ending America's military disengagement from its complex and uncertain role in that region's war beyond difficult and toward the realm of impossibility.

Responding to 10 ill-fated years of American military involvement in Vietnam, the War Powers Act of 1973 was passed by a congressional override of President Nixon's veto in an effort to limit any future president's desires to deploy U.S. troops in potentially volatile regions.

The act requires the president to formally notify Congress of any deployment of American troops in an area of real or imminent hostilities. Congress then has 60 days to approve or withdraw the troops.

The measure passed recently by Congress, ostensibly a compromise, tragically undermines the spirit of the original act.

Congressman Bill Thomas (R-Bakersfield), who voted for the measure, asserted that "If war in Lebanon eventually becomes unavoidable, I would expect the president to remove our troops." On the contrary, it seems likely that an end to the shaky cease-fire which presently exists in Lebanon and an escalation of the fighting, in which four Americans have already died and a dozen others injured, will be accompanied not by a troop withdrawal, but by the further bloodshed of American soldiers in their "peacekeeping" mission.

The resolution enables President Reagan (who struck the deal with leaders of both Senate and House, including Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill, D-Mass.) to secure a virtual blank check from Congress on the length of troop deployment in Lebanon—a check which he will not have to cash, until long after next November’s election.

Representative Leon Panetta (D-Monterey), who reluctantly voted in favor of the resolution, explained this vote—"forced one" to choose between an 18-month commitment of troops and no deadline at all..." The War Powers Act was written and passed after the tragedy of Vietnam to prevent such a choice having to be made.

Our representatives need to know that the next drop of American blood needlessly and senselessly shed in Lebanon will stain the hands of congressmen who fail to work for the troops' immediate pullout and, especially, on the hands of President Reagan.

Humane treatment for animals

Editor:

I was astounded to read in the Oct. 5 editorial, "Setting the record straight on meat indutry," that Barbara Augustine and Elliot Robitaille that: "All animals raised for slaughter are treated humanely, here (at Cal Poly) and in the industry in general." The humane treatment of a calf requires no more than that we leave him alone with his mother in a place where there is adequate food and room to run freely.

Yet,veal calves are often raised in darkness and fed an iron-deficient diet which keeps them constantlyemic. Such calves are typically kept chained at the neck between wooden slates which almost completely restrict movement. A calf who is so treated that inevitably destroys the animal's knee joints, and are separated from their mother at the age of three or four days. Is this widely accepted practice "humane"?

Specimen—the word is not attractive to Barbajide or attitude of bias towards the interest of members of one's own species. Such an attitude to attitudes and action of the species keep animals. It should be obvious, though, that the fundamental objections to racism apply equally to specialist. If possessing a greater amount of power does not give a race one race to use another race for its own ends, how can it entitle humans to exploit non-humans for the same purpose?

It is a commonly accepted belief that our concern for others and our readiness to consider their interests ought not to depend on what they are like or what abilities they may possess.

Students urged to use rights, protest Diablo Canyon plant

Editor:

Now that I have my "Emergency Response Plan Booklet For The Diablo Canyon Power Plant," am I to feel safe, confident that I can "calmly escape" from heavy doses of radiation? The Board of Supervisors must think we are idiots.

Most everyone knows by now that it's not safe for this power plant to go into operation. Government officials are supposed to be our 'public servants.' How are they serving us by doing this injustice? Perhaps I'm too idealistic, only I would so like to believe that the members of the Board are on our side, that they uphold some sense of moral responsibility over and above money and power.

Have you taken a look at the symbol on the front of this booklet? "Not For Ourselves Alone." Wouldn't it have been more accurate if it read: "For Ourselves and PG&E?"

This is a critical time for students to act, to exercise their rights. Independent choice-making is not something to merely read about in history classes. It's true that students come and go, but there are people who've made this community their home. Should we ignore them or help them? If you agree with me, then I urge you to write letters to the Board of Supervisors now.

Ethics of animal butchering questioned...again

Editor:

I sincerely appreciate Barbara Augustine and John Robitaille's rebuttal, "Getting the record straight on meat industry," to my Oct. 3 letter, "Animal's Feelings." I would like to answer the questions these two animal science majors posed to me regarding my stance on utilizing animal products, and cite further facts concerning the meat industry.

My response to the statement in the rebuttal, "All animals are treated humanely, here and in the industry in general," was that of outrage! According to Dr. Michael Fox, a veterinarian and director for the Study of Animal Problems, it is a scientific branch of the Humane Society: "The level of cruelty and unnecessary suffering of animals in factory farming is even more difficult to conceive and to accept. Much of what goes on in this industry is behind closed doors, often in partial or total darkness. What the eye doesn't see, the consumer doesn't gripe; a styrofoam carton of impeccable eggs, neatly trimmed in plastic wrappers or a delicate slice of corduroy blue served on a silver platter does not tell the story....Factory farming has one advantage to the producer and consumer alike: more can be produced for less. Today we pay proportionately less for farm animal products than we did 50 years ago, but at the expense of animal suffering.

Why is this system considered by Dr. Fox to be cruel and abusive? People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, an animal welfare organization mentions some of the mistreatments:

Pigs and cows are castrated without anesthesia and kept in overcrowded pens, unable to turn around and groom themselves. Veal calves are separated from their mothers at birth, kept in total darkness and deprived of iron. Three billion chickens are debeaked with hot irons then forced to live in a space the size of a record album until turned into soup and pot pies.

Probably the most misleading information included in the rebuttal was that of the pork industry. It contends that "special effort is made not to scare, stress, confuse or upset the animal in any way." Isn't that a rather fallacious statement as compared to the Humane Society's report that 60% of hogs are raised in total confinement, with their tails docked (a very painful form of mutilation) to prevent the tail biting that often results from overcrowding?

The facts and statements briefly stated here are reason enough to assume the Ms. Augustine and Mr. Robitaille are indeed misinformed or simply haven't been fully exposed to today's meat industry. I suggest they pick up a copy of Animal Factory by Peter Singer and Jim Mason, available through PETA, P.O. Box 5627, Wash. D.C. 20011, or visit one of the local farms or slaughterhouses before they decide to embark upon this business as a professional career.

Peace Corps Special Work For Special People

Peace Corps volunteers are people pretty much like you. People with commitment and skills who have assessed their lives and decided they want to be of service to others in a troubled world.

The problems our volunteers deal with overseas aren't new. Such as the cycle of poverty that traps one generation after another because they're too busy holding on to get ahead. The debilitating effects of malnutrition, disease, and inadequate shelter. Education and skills that are lacking, and the means to get them too.

Your college training qualifies you to handle more of these problems than you might think. Such as teaching nutrition and health practices; designing and building bridges and irrigation systems; working on reforestation and fisheries programs; introducing better agricultural techniques; advising small businesses and establishing cooperatives; or teaching math and science at the secondary level.

The number of jobs to do is nearly as great as the number of volunteers who have served since 1961: Nearly 90,000. More volunteers are being chosen now for two-year assignments beginning in the next 3-12 months in Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the Pacific.

Our representatives will be pleased to discuss the opportunities with you.

The Toughest Job You'll Ever Love

Agriculture, animal husbandry, forestry, biology, French, home economics, math, and science majors. Are you graduating in June and looking for a challenge? If so, consider the toughest job you'll ever love. Consider the Peace Corps. Peace Corps representatives will be on the Cal Poly Pam Luns Obispo Union Plaza, be part of the solution...join the Peace Corps!

EXHIBITS

AIRPLANES AND ADS
Two exhibits are now on display in the University Union Galeris. "Air Force," a humorous collection of rabbit and airplanes, and "And Now a Message..." an artistic study of advertising, can be seen daily, free of charge. Galerie hours are Mon.-Tues., 10 a.m.-4 p.m.; Wed.-Thurs., 10 a.m.-6 p.m.; Fri., 10 a.m.-4 p.m.; and weekends, noon-4 p.m.

WATERCOLORS
Nat D. Past, artist and teacher, is exhibiting his watercolor paintings at the San Luis Obispo Art Center, 1010 Broad St. Past's works can be seen through Oct. 17 for free.

ASSORTED ARTWORK
Wooden whales, lithographs, acrylics and abstracts are just a few of the many pieces of artwork by various artists being shown at the Cambria Coast Gallery, 6100 Moonstone Beach Dr. The gallery is open Thursday through Monday, 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. in Cambria.

ARCHITECTURAL HISTORY
Cal Poly professor and artist, Vern Swansen, created more than 100 pieces of artwork while on a recent tour in Europe. His collection, "A Search for the Essence of Certain Periods of Architectural History," is on display for the last week in the Robert E. Kennedy Gallery. Swansen's watercolors can be seen during regular library hours through Oct. 14.

CLAIR ENFORCE
Ten Cuesta College faculty members are exhibiting some of their artwork in the Cuesta Library, on the second floor of the Cuesta College Library. "Clair et Fonce" flight and dark can be viewed through Oct. 12 during regular library hours.

CREAM OF THE CROP
The Senior Citizens Craft Group of San Luis Obispo is sponsoring an art show by the Williams Brothers Market parking lot on Broad St. Proceeds from the Oct. 15 show benefit the Jesparson School for the Handicapped.

GLASS CREATIONS
A unique collection of glass sculptures is on display at the San Simeon Gallery, 4700 Burton Dr., in Cambria. The handblown crystal forms are the works of Santa Cruz artist Paul Marwara. The gallery is open everyday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

To avoid higher costs, you may wish to minimize your home heating in October. This time of year, in some areas, nights can be chilly. But before you turn on your heat, there's something you should know. Home heating costs more before the end of October. That's because in winter you get additional "lifeline allowances" to heat your home. But winter "lifeline allowances" are not in effect until November 1, so you'll pay more for home heating in October. You may wish to minimize your home heating until you get your November bill.

To help, call your local PG&E office for more information on how to control your winter bills.

Stanford women outrun Mustang X-country runners

The Stanford women's cross country team suffered its first defeat of the season against the Cal Poly Mustangs last Saturday.

The Mustangs competed in the race to host Stanford, who captured the top four positions. The final score of the competition was Stanford: 38 points, Cal Poly: 47 points.

The Mustangs defeated the next six teams in the meet to secure the victory. Personal bests were set Saturday by Alice Pinner (18:28), Cari Hoppen and Randi Jaccard, who finished third and fourth, with freshman Coray who finished seventh in 16:17.

Marilyn Nichols, the number three runner for the Mustangs placed 10th in 18:54. Robin Root (17:07) and Gladdes Prieto (17:08) finished in close order at 17th and 18th. Katia Dominici (17:44), Katty Manning (17:40) and Jill Ellingson (17:46) rounded out the team. The most marked the toughest competition either team will probably meet this season.

"If Stanford had run the way they had been earlier this season, we would have given them a race," said assistant coach Dennis Enqvist. "Everyone on the Stanford team ran P.R.'s (personal records)."

The Mustangs will stay at home this weekend to compete in their own Cal Poly Invitational. Primary competition, according to head coach Lance Hatter, "will come from UC Santa Barbara and Cal State Northridge."
“Close, but no cigar...yet,” is how women’s volleyball coach Mike Wilton described his team’s efforts against UOP Friday night and UC Berkeley Saturday night. The Mustangs dropped both weekend matches, slipping to 6-9 on the season.

Friday night against the UOP Tigers, the Mustangs dropped a tough 13-16, 15-4, 14-16, 8-16 heart-breaker to the Tigers. The loss was the Mustangs sixth in the last seven matches.

Even though the Tigers won the match in four games, Wilton said his team was in the driver’s seat in the third game.

“We could have won that match. We were leading 14-10 in the third game after winning the second 15-4. Winning the third game would have put us up two games to one, but we couldn’t finish the job,” Wilton said.

After fighting off a game point in the third game, UOP’s Therese Boyle served up a pair of aces to finish the third game and the Mustang’s hopes.

For the Mustangs, Sandy Aughinbaugh recorded 17 kills. Stacey Stowell added 17 kills of her own and Terri Puring and Ellen Bugalski contributed 11 kills each.

Saturday night against the Golden Bears of Berkeley, the Mustangs got off to a slow start with Coach Wilton calling a time out with his team down 8-7. The Bears gained another point but lost serve to the Mustangs, who took advantage of it.

Sophomores Terri Puring and Ellen Bugalski put the Mustangs ahead 14-10 with a game point, but the Mustangs surrendered the serve.

The Bears Sylvie Monnet served Berkeley back into the game, reaching 14-14 before an Aughinbaugh kill returned serve to the Mustangs. Cal Poly couldn’t hold serve and gave both the serve and the game back to the Bears.

In the second game the Mustangs proved no match for the Bears who jumped out to a quick five-point lead and never looked back.

Down two games, the Mustangs had their backs against the wall and really showed some intensity while coming back to win the third game 15-8. The Mustangs won many of their points from the Bears, shooting percentage being the difference in the match.

Opportunity knocks; Mustangs close door

by David Kraft
Staff Writer

They say opportunity only knocks once. The Mustang football team learned that painful lesson Saturday afternoon against U.C. Davis.

In this case, opportunity came knocking in the form of the third quarter at Mustang Stadium. When it did, however, the Mustangs didn’t answer.

Down 10 points at halftime, Cal Poly had a trio of golden scoring chances immediately following intermission. However, the Mustangs came up dry on two of three trips to the red zone.

This time the red zone was simply too much for the Mustangs to handle.

The result was predictable. "We knew that if we got into passing situations, it could be devastating," Sanderson said. It was. Snodgrass, a 67-percent passer entering the game, could only manage 12 of 26 for 171 yards against the harrassing Aggie defense.

The Aggies also kept the Mustangs bottled up on first down, a key to controlling a potent offense. "We kept having second and long, third and long, where they could put in their nickel (five defensive back) defense. We just couldn’t do anything consistently," Sanderson said.

Cal Poly head coach Jim Sanderson stressed that the Mustangs didn’t answer the bell. "That must have made the final quarter emotionally draining for the entire team. Before the game, Cal Poly head coach Jim Sanderson stressed the need for a more complete performance, following a spectacular wrap-up to the first half. A scrambling Tim Snodgrass hooked up with his favorite target, Jeff Smith, for a 72-yard touchdown pass and a 14-7 lead. The crowd was in a frenzy and the momentum was wearing the Poly green and gold.

Two plays later, that frenzy nearly ended. Pendant shots off "the Cal Poly Wall," of front blockers. The Mustangs then went on to capture the fourth game 15-9 with some excellent defensive plays and some awesome runs by the backs. As in the third game, blocked shots by Schroeder and Bugalski gave the Mustangs game point and with it a tie at two games each.

With the entire match boiled down to one game, the Mustangs looked as though they were in control when they led 6-6 at the change of sides. But the Bears tied the score at 8-8.

Then Mustangs gained serve and Aughinbaugh served Cal Poly into the lead at 11-8 and it seemed the game was in hand. However, "a game in the bag," is a phrase that doesn’t apply to volleyball.

The Bears tied the score at 11, and following nearly a dozen side outs, they served out the game to win 15-11.

Wilton said although he was disappointed after the match, he thought his team’s effort against both UOP and Berkeley proved the Mustangs can play with any team.

"To anyone who watched us this weekend, I think it was evident we can play with anybody, but we have to learn how to win again," Wilton said.

The Mustangs host Fresno State Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. in the Main Gym. Following the Bulldogs, the U.S. International University will come to Cal Poly Friday night and the UCLA Bruins will be here Saturday night.

Wilton said he is hoping the Mustangs can use Fresno State and U.S.I.U. to warm up for the Bruins.

"After all of the losses, it would be easy for me to get mad and plan for next year, but I can’t give up on this team. They’ve showed they can win; we just have to go out and do it," Wilton said.
