Fall ceremonies being examined

By Susan Dethlefsen

Fall commencement exercises will most likely be held for the first time this year, the university commencement coordinator said Wednesday.

Donald Coats recommended to President Warren Baker that fall commencement ceremonies be held at the end of this quarter and he met with Baker and the staff on Monday and their reaction was very favorable.

However, Coats also wants the endorsement of the Student Senate and the Academic Senate before he goes ahead with his plans. The Student Senate will be voting on the issue at their meeting next Wednesday.

Coats is enthusiastic about a Fall Commencement. When he talked about this, he said, was his findings that only 15 percent of the students who graduate in December go through graduation exercises.

He said this is understandable because sometimes it is difficult for students to return for graduation ceremonies because of jobs. He also said it's anti-climactic.

He said a fall commencement would give students an opportunity to get the recognition they deserve and to have family and friends present.

Approximately 500 students will be graduating in December. He thinks about 425 will want to go through ceremonies.

These are 425 people who are just as important as those who graduate in June, Coats said. "They deserve the recognition."

Students who graduate in the fall that want to go through ceremonies in June will be able to. Coats said Coats also pointed out that as far as he can tell, students who graduate in the summer, but want to go through the previous spring ceremonies will be able to do so this year.

The university generally lets students choose the commencement ceremonies if they are finishing their requirements in the summer. Last year 539 students went through ceremonies who said they were graduating at the end of summer. However, some students and faculty feel that everyone who goes through ceremonies should have just the requirements said Coats.

Coats said it is hard to enforce a rule that says everyone must have just the requirements before going through commencement, since the commencement ceremony is usually scheduled before the final grades and credits of graduates are evaluated. Eventually, he said, the university will start enforcing this. However, no plans have been made for this year.

ASI President Kevin Creighton said, as long as students are not on the campus in the spring, the spring ceremony is a fall ceremony.

Coats said the committee recommended that this fall's ceremonies be held on Saturday, Dec. 10 at 10 a.m. It would take place in the gym and there would be a restriction on the number of guests the students can bring. Probably six or seven per student. Coats said Fall commencement will be considerably different than the one in spring. In the fall, students' names would be called out and the student will receive his diploma at the main gym ceremony. There would be no individual school ceremony as in June.

Coats said they are also thinking of having an admission for all professors and students after commencement. This and other details of the ceremony are still being worked out. Coats noted a fall commencement fee just like in June is planned.

Coats said he thinks the commencement ceremonies will be good. It will be more personal and it's at a festive time of year.

Approximately 500 students will be graduating this quarter and want to go through a commencement ceremony. There will be a $10 a ticket fee charged to the Records Office and let them know names must be in by Nov. 4.

Suicide or nuclear war?

Brown University students found a new way of proclaiming the fatal logic of nuclear war, by fighting antiwar absurdity with absurdity. The Mustang Daily editorial board applauds them.

Undergraduates at the Rhode Island school last week approved a proposal urging the university's health service to store suicide pills for use in case of nuclear war.

Critics failing to see the black humor have attacked the students' approval, labeling them wimps, pacifists and traitors. The black humor is that suicide is the same as nuclear war. The logic is this: If you can't win, screw off. There is in fact as much reason to consider the Reagan Administration believes -- a winnable nuclear war.

"Whether there is cyanide in those pills, it's not going to make any difference," Steve Johnson, executive editor of The Brown Daily Herald, told the Mustang Daily. He reports three times as many undergraduates voted on the referendum as voted in student government elections.

Brown University administrators, at first completely cold to the idea brought forth by the four-member group, Students for Suicide: An Alternative Approach to Disarmament, said they will refuse to stockpile the pills. Now, with the national exposure, administrators are saying, "Now we realize it's something big and we have to deal with it."

Which is how everyone else should feel. To the conscience burning with the idea that nuclear war means absolute annihilation, this is an inspiration, a creative deed rather than heated words which go unheeded by the keepers of nuclear arms.

To the mind which thinks newer and better weapons will protect us from our own willful destruction, this is an inspiration, a creative deed rather than heated words which go unheeded by the keepers of nuclear arms.

Reader question: Central America situation

Editor:

On Oct. 16 the Mustang Daily ran a story entitled "Reagan Rhetoric" which I think was aptly titled. Ambassador Kirkpatrick's remarks were nothing more than parrotings of the Reagan party line. I think that in order to truly understand the issue of Central America one must know the truth in context and not one-sided musings.

Kirkpatrick said that Soviet economic aid is increasing. Could it be that the Soviets are increasing aid? Also, why are the Soviets waging war, in the form of contra violence, against Nicaragua? Nicaragua is continually refused to render aid? Also, why are the Soviets waging war, in the form of contra violence, against Nicaragua? Nicaragua is continually refused to render aid? Also, why are the Soviets waging war, in the form of contra violence, against Nicaragua?

And what is the Reagan Administration supposed to be doing about it? If Nicaragua is continually refused to render aid, why are the Soviet aid increasing? Could it be that the Soviets are increasing aid? Also, why are the Soviets waging war, in the form of contra violence, against Nicaragua? Nicaragua is continually refused to render aid? Also, why are the Soviets waging war, in the form of contra violence, against Nicaragua?

Seven Poly alumni honored at homecoming

By KEVIN H. FOX

Seven very special alumni will be treated royally on campus this weekend. In celebration of the 1984 Homecoming festivities, seven former Cal Poly students will be recognized as Honored Alumni.

The seven alumni, one from each of the seven instructional schools, will be presented to the university community throughout the weekend. Friday evening the recipients will be honored at a banquet hosted by the Alumni Association. They will be guests of Cal Poly President Warren Baker at the Saturday night football game. Cal Poly will be playing Cal State Nor.

She will become their most deadly weapon.

Late Bishop jokes with Olde Porters

By LINDA REIFF
Managing Editor

When Stephen Bishop took the stage at the Olde Port Inn, the audience was eager and ready for some good, mellow music. And who wouldn’t be after anxiously waiting nearly two hours?

Bishop’s second show, scheduled to start at 10 p.m. Oct. 11, actually started shortly before midnight. (The “early show” also began late.)

Bishop started off the second show with a few jokes, then broke into “Nobody But Me.”

He proceeded to play a variety of songs, including a few humorous tunes that he seemed to be making up as he went.

“Avocado/Guacamole,” sung to the tune “Desperado,” was a sure hit with most of the audience.

The dimly-lit lounge, at the end of Port San Luis Pier, was packed with people — mainly coupled off around small bar tables inside and out on the deck.

The casual atmosphere was just right for Bishop, who seemed right at home throughout the concert. He often told stories and joked with the audience.

Bishop even tested his talents at imitating a variety of entertainers ranging from Jimi Hendrix to Boy George.

As speculated, Bishop’s performance was at its best when he sang his two biggest hits, “On and On” and “Something’s Telling Me it Might be You,” the theme song from the movie “Tootsie.”

However, these and other songs were a bit stale, as he sang most of his songs to taped music. Along with his canned music, Bishop relied too heavily on his humor and deprived the audience of their $15-per-person singing entertainment.

Either the late hour or Bishop’s jokes were too much for a portion of the audience — many people left before the concert was over. (Some refunds were given because of the two-hour delay.)

Bishop was just one of many entertainers who will appear at the Olde Port Inn this year.

Tonight, Stu Blank and his Naughty Habits will be performing from 9:30 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. They will also be playing Saturday at the same time and on Sunday from 4 to 7 p.m.

There is a $3 cover charge to see this group from the Bay Area.

On Nov. 28 Tower of Power will be performing at 7 and 10 p.m. Tickets are also $12.50.

Elvin Bishop will be at the Olde Port Inn Nov. 9 in two shows — 7 and 10 p.m. Tickets will be $12.50 for patio seats and $15 for inside seats.

On Nov. 15 Tower of Power will be performing at 7 and 10 p.m.

Tickets are also $12.50 and $15.

Asian dancers to charm SLO

By BRENDA BIELKE

A duo of jewel-costumed dancers will bring a touch of Asia to San Luis Obispo Saturday, Oct. 20.

“Classical Dances of India” will be performed at the Laguna Junior High School Auditorium on Los Osos Valley Road at 7 p.m.

Kalanjali, a California-based company specializing in traditional Indian performing arts, will present three types of dance: the Kathakali, the Bharathanatyam and the Ras, a folk dance. The Kathakali, a dance-drama of the state of Kerala is seldom seen outside India. It will be presented in full traditional costumes and makeup, with gilt-ed ornaments and crowns inlaid with stones.

The artists, Kaiksthreta K.P. Kunhiraman and Katherine Kunhiraman, have performed extensively abroad and are highly respected for their strict adherence to traditional classical style.

The program is sponsored by the India Club, a local organization stretching from Lompoc to Paso Robles of those of Indian origin. It is presented as a celebration of Diwali, a popular festival of India.

“It is a folk festival of lights celebrated over most of India,” a spokesperson for the club said.

Paul Dunn, left, and Bob Denike practice last Spring for their cross country run across the U.S. for MS research and to promote the sport of skateboarding.

By MICHAEL MARTER

Poly students Paul Dunn and Bob Denike say they skateboarded across the U.S. this summer for two reasons: to raise funds and recognition for multiple sclerosis and to promote the sport of skateboarding.

But after reading between the lines of their conversations, a third reason emerges: people.

They met MS victims along the way, chatted with people from regions of the country they had never been to and talked to anybody who wanted to know why four guys would want to travel across the country on something they had never seen before and didn't know what to call.

TRANS-AMERICA '84: The Skateboard Crossing For Multiple Sclerosis, began July 1 in Newport, Ore. and ended 26 days and 2,896.5 miles later in Williamsburg, Va. Dunn, a 23-year-old biology major and Denike, a 22-year-old industrial technology major, were accompanied by Cuesta College student Gary Flutii, 20, and Jack Smith, 27, owner of a surf shop in Los Osos. Smith completed a similar crossing in 1976—he and his two friends were the first people to do so. His companions for this trip were not as well traveled, however. Dunn and Denike never been east of Lake Tahoe and Flutii's travels had been limited to west of Colorado.

Through a diligent letter-writing campaign; the team secured sponsorship and merchandise through several skateboard and clothing manufacturers. A support van was donated for the trip by the Chrysler Corp.

Smith's stories of his previous crossing entered his three longtime friends to repeat his trip, said Dunn. But they wanted to do it for a cause. "We wanted to do something for people less fortunate than us," said Dunn before their trip began. "We didn't want to do it for nothing. "The team decided to raise funds for MS because they felt it was an "underdog" charity spending the majority of its funds on research rather than administration.

What was originally a sideline trip became their unifying purpose. The charity kept them together when tempers got hot or when an MS victim gave them a smile of appreciation. Denike said that when he began to wonder why he had been so foolish to undertake such a trek, he would realize who and what it was for. When an argument would break out, the thought of their cause would bring things back to perspective. "I would say, hey, we're doing it for MS so it really doesn't matter," said Denike.

Wherever the skaters went they passed out flyers from the National Multiple Sclerosis Society explaining the crippling disorder of the central nervous system that afflicts some 250,000 Americans. Ironically, the group's route through the northern U.S. is a region with a high percentage of MS victims. Dunn said: "The disease and the frustrations of those who suffer from it became stunningly less abstract one evening in Reed City, Mich. When Dunn and Denike spent a night in the home of an MS victim, Bob Grandy, a former machinist, was stricken with MS 12 years ago. He is confined to a wheelchair. After an awkward period of small talk upon arriving at the Grandy's, Denike said, Mr. Grandy, who is confined to a wheelchair. After an awkward period of small talk upon arriving at the Grandy's, Denike said, Mr. Grandy, who is unable to work, Grandy and his wife lived a meager existence, said Dunn, and they felt like giving the Grandys money. "You wanted to help him—but I figured that what we were doing already was," Grandy gave them a new understanding of MS, said Denike. "He gave us a second wind—not so much about raising money, but about raising attention to the disease." After the evening with Grandy, said Dunn, the group took their problems and arguments a little less seriously.

Another emotional moment came when the team was heading downstream about a quarter mile before grabbing a branch, Denike said. Dunn transported the unconscious three-year old to a nearby ranger station where she was taken by ambulance to a hospital.

Dunn and Denike estimate their trip raised between five and ten thousand dollars for MS through per-mile pledges and donations but since local chapters of the society solicited donations in conjunction with "Trans-America," an exact total is nearly impossible to ascertain. But the exposure they gained for MS research is priceless. For example, the skaters appeared in over 20 newspapers along their route and were interviewed on television and radio numerous times. The national newspaper USA Today featured two articles about their trek. The staff members at the Toledo, Ohio chapter of the MS society were sure that the attention caused by the four skaters passing through their city helped fund research.
their city resulted in the most exposure MS had ever received in the area. After all, skateboarders do not get police escorts through Toledo everyday.

In addition to the escorts and interviews, the trip presented a host of new experiences for the skaters. "We came across stuff I had only read about as a kid," said Denike. Dunn was especially interested by an Amish community outside of Williamsburg, Va. was anti-climactic in a small town of 1,700 people that happened often. "It will be a summer I will remember forever," said Dunn. But Denike, Dunn, Fluitt and Williams and Mark Lydon started working themselves out," and they did work out, the three students said. Their motto for the trip was "things have a way of working themselves out." Of working themselves out.

But that was not always the case. "When we stopped at a stop sign in a ghetto area of Illinois, a guy came up to us and asked where we were going and we said New York," Lydon said. "Then he said 'not if I kill you first.' They rode on before he could. We were finished, said Williams, since people were nice and the landscape was beautiful. They all agree they liked Nevada the least because there were no people and it was cold. Lydon said they even took a picture of the three of them cheering by a sign that read: "You are now leaving Nevada."

One of the biggest complaints the three students had was the late midwest winter they experienced most of the way. "We brought stuff in case we got chilly," said Lydon. "We weren't prepared for arctic weather." Lydon said the real bummer of the trip was when they found the Statue of Liberty blocked and obscured by scaffolding.

They appeared in newspapers across the country and almost got on the David Letterman show in New York, but their appearance date was changed without their knowing and they arrived a day too late. The three said they got along great during the trip. This was an accomplishment, said Williams, since their tent was so small they had to sleep head-to-toe. They planned this trip for about a year and it cost each of them about $1,700 not including their bikes. They were sponsored by Domino's Pizza and got free pizza from them across the country.

All three students said they would definitely do it again. If they had the money, Lydon said, they would have taken a plane to Europe to continue riding instead of flying home.
LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal judge will hear final arguments Nov. 7 on a claim by Penthouse magazine that it has the right to republish eight-year-old nude photographs of "Three's Company" star Priscilla Barnes.

Prior to those final arguments, U.S. District Court Judge Ideman, who on Wednesday heard a nervous Miss Barnes testify she authorized publication of the photographs in 1976, will review the actress' claim that republication violates terms of her original agreement.

Ideman also will review a video deposition submitted by Penthouse publisher Bob Guccione outlining the magazine's policy toward use of photographs.

Town appoints woman chief of police

IMPERIAL, Calif. (AP) — City council members in this southern California town of 3,000 have selected a woman as their new police chief, making her the only female chief in the state.

Roni Crowder, 42, was appointed by the council Wednesday night to succeed Lon Hettlinger, who resigned in September. Ms. Crowder will be acting as interim police chief.

Officials said they believe Ms. Crowder is only the second woman in state history to become a chief of police.

"I'm very proud of what I've done with myself — came a long way from my start as a little dispatcher," she said. "But I had excellent supervisors who gave me a wonderful training."

Only Major Victor Mendoza voted against Ms. Crowder's appointment. Mendoza said the council had agreed to advertise for a replacement.

The new chief will oversee a department that includes four officers and a sergeant. Her annual salary will be about $21,900, which Mendoza had complained was too city residents.

After two wins at home, women travel to Utah

Once is not enough for the Mustang women's volleyball team. After being ranked No. 1 on the NCAA Volleyball Poll last week, the spikers maintained their hold on the top position in this week's poll. The team, which is now 17-2 for the season, made a well-deserved move up to the No. 3 position in the traditionally low-ranking Tachikara Coaches Poll also this week.

In Tachikara the Mustangs are now ranked below No. 1 USC, which they beat in four games earlier this season, and No. 2-ranked UCLA.

The team will travel to Utah this weekend for matches against Utah State, Thursday, University of Utah, Friday and BYU, Saturday. The match which head coach Mike Wilton expects to see some competition from unranked Utah State in Logan, "Utah State has been a perennially top-ranked team. Maybe they aren't this year, but they're going to be all fired up because they're playing a No. 1 team," he said.

But Wilton, who is anticipating the highest match to be against 5th-ranked BYU. Although the Mustangs beat the Cougars in three games at the San Diego International in September, Wilton has sad memories of meeting against BYU last spring at Utah. "That's the same team that's always in the top 10. They gave us one of the highest defeats of our season last year. That was one of the most painful defeats of my career, we literally just laid down on the floor and said 'Don't hurt us' so we went to redeem ourselves in their gym. They're always tough in their own gym," he said.

Even though Wilton feels it will take some hard work to do well this weekend, "We're going to have to be pumped up to come out of all three matches without a loss," Assistant Coach Craig Cummings has high expectations for the outcome, "I would expect us to beat Utah State in three straight and Utah too, but I have a funny feeling we'll go to four against BYU. We should do really well and come out with three wins," he said.

Following the Utah trip, the Mustangs next play will in the first-ever UCSB 'Tiger Invitational in Santa Barbara, Oct. 26 and 27. Then the spikers will come home for a match against Fresno State, which they beat in three games in Fresno on Oct. 2. The Mustangs will return home to play Fresno State on Oct. 30.

Homecoming game

Mustang offense limps back home

By ROSEMARY COSTANZO

The Mustangs are hoping for a happy homecoming Saturday night as they square off against the Cal State Northridge Matadors.

Kick-off time at Mustang Stadium is 7 p.m., and Cal Poly is returning home after a disappointing three game road trip.

Their most recent defeat was suffered at the hands of Portland State Vikings last week as the Mustangs remained scoreless to the Vikings 20.

"We were beaten by a good football team," said Mustang head coach Jim Sanderson. "We are just flat not executing. It's that simple. In the first half we executed very poorly on defense. While we were able to make adjustments defensively in the second half, we were not able to get things turned around offensively."

Matador's coach Tom Keel has called the Mustangs the toughest team on their schedule next to Northern Arizona. "The game with Cal Poly has added significance since it is a conference game. We have to hitch up our pants and get back on the right track," said Keel.

Starting for the Mustangs at quarterback will be Yale Keckin. Keckin has completed 46 of 114 attempts and has had 8 throws intercepted. He has thrown for a total of 649 yards. Keckin's backup, Jeff Byars has made good on 22 of 47 attempts for 264 yards. He has had four throws intercepted.

Quarterback for the Matadors will be Charlie Wegher who started his first game last week. Wegher has completed 29 of 66 passes for 393 yards. He has had three passes intercepted.

The Matadors are averaging 247 yards in total offense per game, while giving up 349 yards.

Both teams will be losing key players to injuries. The Mustangs will be missing running back Gary Myers because of a knee injury and offensive tackle Eric Tautolo who has a sprained ankle. They will also be without Kirk Anderson who has a stress fracture to his foot.

The Matadors will be without starting wide receiver Rick Carboneau because of a broken arm, defensive tackle Doug Minor who also has a broken arm and free safety Ron Foster who has a broken ankle.

"Northridge is having the same problems we are, key injuries to key personnel. We certainly aren't overlooking them, we can't overlook anybody," said Sanderson.

Harriers run in only home meet

Poly Invitational, fun run slated for this weekend

by Karen Kraemer

For the first time in a year, students will have a chance to see the championship cross-country team run at home.

Since their last home meet the women runners have competed on courses ranging from Stanford to Waukesha, Wisconsin from which they brought home last year's Division II national title.

The Cal Poly Invitational is the last meet before the Mustangs head towards the regional and national meets, trying to defend their national title.

The Saturday meet will include teams such as Cal State Norridge, Cal Poly Pomona, Azusa Pacific, and top junior college teams. Women's coach, Lance Harter said he sees most of the competition coming from the Norridge team, which he describes as "probably the second ranked Division II team on the west coast."

The Poly Invitational will be more than many of the Cal Poly runners. A deciding meet is needed to discern the top seven runners who will make up this year's national championship team.

"Unfortunately we are only allowed seven runners," said Harter.

The Poly cross country course is at the crop science unit, just off of Highland. The women's 5000 meter race begins at 10 a.m. with the men's 10,000 following at 10:30. If you have never been to a cross country meet, this could be the experience needed.

Cross country spectators in no way resembles the scene of a football or basketball game. At these games fans are expected to sit and watch provided that they have bought a ticket at the gate.

Rec sports offers diverse programs for sports fans

A doubles tournament, made up of three divisions, was sponsored last weekend by the Cal Poly Recreation Sports program. The event attracted 16 teams.

First place in the Men's division went to Darryl Horn and Jim Simon; women's first place to June Aoki and Marichelle Regala; and A doubles tournament, made up 3 divisions, was sponsored last weekend by the Cal Poly Recreation Sports program. The event attracted 16 teams.

USFL sues NFL for $1.32 billion

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States Football League filed a $1.32 billion antitrust suit against the National Football League Wednesday, seeking the voiding of the NFL's television contracts with the three major networks and charging that "a conspiracy" exists to put it out of business.

The USFL also asked the court to break up what it calls the NFL's monopoly on player contracts and stadiums in the nation's major cities.

In the suit filed in Federal court here, the USFL, which has played two spring-summer seasons, said it "seeks redress for past and ongoing violations of the federal antitrust laws" by the NFL. It names as defendants all 28 NFL teams as well as Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

Filed on behalf of the league by New York attorney Roy Cohn, the suit accuses the NFL of "numerous predatory and unlawful actions" by which it "sought to perpetuate the competitive football."" McNamara new Boston manager

BOSTON (AP) — John McNamara, who rejected an offer to continue as manager of the California Angels, was named Thursday as manager of the Boston Red Sox.

The Red Sox made the hiring official at a news conference 10 days after McNamara met with Haywood Sullivan, Boston's co­ owner and chief operating officer, and General Manager Lou Gorman. McNamara reportedly will be paid $150,000 a year, the same salary Ralph Houk received for four seasons before he decided to retire three weeks ago.

McNamara, 32, and the Red Sox executives met after he rejected a California offer to remain as field boss.

Running shoes are not necessary but suggested. In fact, for those who want to come early, a community run will proceed the invitational races at 9 a.m.
