Noise ordinance put off at council meeting

By GREGG SCHROEDER

A plan to reintroduce the proposed city noise ordinance, set first reading and rescheduled the previous ordinance was postponed Tuesday at the San Luis Obispo City Council meeting.

Police Chief R. L. Neuman told the City Council despite "a lot of favorable public input," there is one element of the community "(Cal Poly students) still questions the ordinance -- doesn't understand it."

Neuman said representatives from the San Luis Obispo Police Department will meet with students tonight to explain the ordinance.

The noise ordinance will come up for hearing again Jan. 15, 1985.

Faculty and CSU Chancellor debate contract issues

By GREGG SCHROEDER

Councilman Allen Settle asked Neuman if he anticipated any changes in the ordinance to result from the meeting with student representatives. The students included Linda Eshel, Associated Students Inc. community affairs representative, Mike Pianeta, president of the Inter Fraternity Council and Laurie Caldwell, president of the Panhellenic Council.

Neuman said he did not foresee any changes.

"We will interpret the ordinance to the students' satisfaction and understanding," he said.

When the discussion was opened to the public, Wayne Thompson, owner of the San Luis Obispo Travelodge, 1825 Montano St., addressed the council.

He expressed concern over the level of noise from his property line and on occasion recorded over 120 decibels from amplified music at Monday Club parties.

Crime Prevention Officer Steve Seybold said according to the proposed ordinance if noise levels exceeded fifty decibels (considered average for light traffic at 50 feet).

The latest stumbling block came Nov. 13 when Chancellor Ann Neuman addressed the council. He expressed concern that the new ordinance would only include noise created in a residential district.

Thompson said during the past 10 years that he has owned the motel, he and his motel guests have made countless complaints to the police department concerning noise from the Monday Club, located next door.

He said he monitored the level of noise from his property line and on occasion recorded over 120 decibels from amplified music at Monday Club parties.

Crime Prevention Officer Steve Seybold said according to the proposed ordinance if noise levels exceeded fifty decibels (considered average for light traffic at 50 feet) by 20 decibels, the noisemakers will be fined.

Fifty decibels is the sound level of light traffic at 50 feet.

My guests are guests of the motel and of San Luis Obispo and are entitled to a peaceful night's rest," Thompson said.

The council assured Thompson the proposed ordinance would include all of the city and not just residential areas.

Seybold told the Monday Evening the whole controversy seems to revolve around students feeling discriminated against," when in fact the ordinance applies to everyone.

Neuman said the student feeling that the proposed contract negates them out in the same as if 50 percent of drunk drivers were arrested.

"Would that be an anti-student gesture?"

Eshel asked Neuman what he thought of implementing the new ordinance temporarily in order to be able to try it out and then make adjustments.

Neuman said he does not believe in operating a temporary plan and then evaluating it after a short period of time.

"After two years -- then you can get a realistic evaluation," he said.

He went on to say the primary problem with student noise in San Luis Obispo is conflicting land uses, with fraternities and sororities converting into residential neighborhoods.

Baker lobbies in D.C. to save financial aid

By JILL PERRY

With the federal deficit looming and budget cuts inevitable, there is at least one group of lobbyists in Washington D.C. attempting to keep student financial aid from becoming a budget victim in the next two months.

Cal Poly President Warren Baker said he is working with several items in contract negotiations.

ASSCU will also focus its efforts on reauthorizing the Higher Education bill.

"All financial aid programs are covered by the Higher Education bill and have to go through an appropriations process," Larry Wolf, Cal Poly financial aid director, said.

Wolf said the budget decisions will be made within the next two to three months, but the reauthorization will take place next September.

"ASSCU will work to keep the legislation from being rewritten in a detrimental way and work with congressional staff members to keep student financial aid from being part of the cuts being made, down the deficit," Baker said.

"We will tell them it won't be in our best interest."

Baker said the possible cut will come after a surprising increase in some aid programs approved this year.

"The increases were forward-funded for 1985-86 for the supplemental grant and work-study program," Wolf noted.

As a Rougan-appointed representative of all universities with agricultural programs with international activity Baker gave a report to the Agriculture and Rural Development Committee and took part in the board of directors meetings.

He also chaired work sessions and a seminar on futurologists and objectives.

Faculty club study completed

By GREGG SCHROEDER

A Cal Poly architecture class has completed a study on the feasibility of building a faculty club on campus.

Architecture Professor Peter Behn gave his fourth year architecture design lab an assignment to design a club for faculty members according to what the faculty would want such a facility to include.

To do this, the class designed a survey to poll faculty needs and distributed it to 150 faculty members in all seven schools.

Forty surveys were returned. Despite the low level of response, the class used the responses on the surveys to plan a faculty club.

Among the benefits of having such a facility on campus, according to the final report put together by the class, it would encourage interdepartmental interaction, supply housing for guests lecturers and attract new faculty members to the university.

Survey results showed that an 80 percent increase in the number of people in dormitories would result from the facility.

"The increases were forward-funded for 1985-86 for the supplemental grant and work-study program," Wolf noted.

Student says conserving energy to dim spirit of holiday season

Editor

Where has that Christmas spirit gone this year? It surely isn't in Whitney Hall this holiday season, nor is it in the offices of the California State University, Fullerton. Since Christmas has been banned this year by decree from the California State University Board of Trustees, many students feel that Christmas lost its recognition.

No. Dec. 25 hasn't been deleted from the calendar, but for the many traditions associated with Christmas, this year Christmas does not exist. The holiday spirit is being defaced by some students who have vandalized 'P' and issues challenge

I would like to provide the opportunity for faculty, staff, students, and the community to make a needy child a Christmas a beautiful one. Toys for Tots is a 37-year-old program of toy collection that is being carried on this week by Cal Poly Marines in the University Union from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. All toys will be distributed to hospitalized or underprivileged children in this county. New, unwrapped toys are requested and cost is not a factor. A small surrounding area. This landmark appeared Sunday morning with a black patch on its newly painted surface. One of these traditions is: annual stringing of Christmas lights to bring brightness and joy into a normally cold and dreary season. But, a season of darkness has beset us here on campus. Under the guise of "Energy Conservation", there is an edict that we may not plug in the lights that bring cheer to this season. For, the birth of Christ and represents a time of peace and giving.

We find the excuse of "energy conservation" severely lacking at best. After checking the energy requirements of a string of incandescent lights, it was found they consumed power at the incredible rate of five watts, quite negligible when compared to a blow dryer at 1200 watts or even a simple light bulb at 100 watts. Running the lights for four hours a day, seven days a week for several weeks will consume a whopping two cents worth of power.

"Energy conservation? Doubtful"

For purposes of peaceful protest, the members of our quad will line up and walk unobtrusively for one hour each day to symbolize our unhappiness regarding this situation. I urge you to do the same.

View from the Hill

On my last day of work, my boss, the Honorable Don Edwards, was arrested. He was handcuffed, taken away in a police car, fingerprinted, photographed and then placed in a jail cell for the night. He was arrested, as had several of his colleagues, as part of a protest march against apartheid in South Africa.

As Chairman of the Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights, and one of those who had visited South Africa, Congressman Edwards knew well the plight of the black people there. In South Africa, there are 200 laws to protect whites at the expense of the black minority. These laws effectively keep the races separate and are not allowed to vote and have no representation in the government. They are forced to be citizens of a barren and jobless tribal government--"homelands." Little is spent on educating blacks; only $95 is spent by the state for each black child, while $787 is spent to educate a white one. The United States, South Africa's chief trading partner.

As a man who had protested discrimination in Mississippi and Alabama during the civil rights movement of the 60s, it was really no surprise when on Friday morning, Nov. 30, Congressmen Edwards was arrested at the South African embassy in Washington, D.C. His intern in journalism, the author of this column, was among the 200 other people, most of whom were black, demonstrating outside the embassy. The media was everywhere, pushing and shoving their microphones and cameras close to the Congressman, "Congressman Edwards," said one reporter, "do you plan to be arrested?"

"Yes, I do. The South African policy of segregation and political and economic discrimination against blacks must change. The Reagan Administration policy of increased trade with South Africa is nothing but an incentive for apartheid to continue."

"Aren't you nervous or afraid of spending the night in jail?"

"Oh, no," said the congressman, "I'm too old a dog for that."

And on he marched, until the organizer of the protest

Randall Robinson, Executive Director of TransAfrica, asked him to walk through the barriers with the other protesting congressman, George Crockett, Jr., and demand to see the Ambassador.

So the congressmen walked past the picket line and the police. Knowing of the inevitability of a night in a cold cell, the congressman's administrative assistant stood close to the barrier and handed him his winter coat as he walked by. Practical.

The police followed, reciting the law which restricts people from demonstrating with 500 feet of the embassy. The politicians paid no attention and continued. A selected group of journalists ran after them as well.

Meanwhile, the rest of the media ran across the street to get a better view of the arrest. I squirmed my way to the curb's edge, and watched as my boss was knocked on the embassy door. No answer. Another knock. No answer.

I watched all the different news stations Friday night, listening to Don Edwards on each network station singing and over and over, "We shall overcome, we shall overcome." The next day the charges were dropped. Most people would be overcome, but not Mr. Edwards. He had hoped for a trial to even prove his constitutional law which restricts embassy protests to be carried on 500 feet away from the building.

So while my congressman was travelling across town with criminals in a paddy wagon, I was reading myself to fly the friendly skies home to California.

Ag industry needs to update communication

By T. WILLIAMS

The agriculture industry is out of step with the times, said the president of a California agricultural association.

Lawrence H. Litchfield, president of the Council of California Growers, spoke Wednesday to about 100 students and faculty in Cal Poly Theater and said the agriculture industry is living in the past.

"Agriculture has talked to itself for decades," he said. "It must start to communicate with the public."

Litchfield said that because agriculture has traditionally been a non-communicative industry, ignorant of the media and its benefits, many negative stories have been written giving the industry a bad public image. As a result, four major public misconceptions have been created.

Litchfield outlined them:
- Farmers waste water.
- Farmers exploit laborers.
- Farmers poison the environment.
- Farmers make too much money.

Litchfield argued that these assumptions are false, but if the agriculture industry wants to rectify its image, it must learn to utilize the media.

"The media is a conduit to the public," he said. "You can't ignore it if you do. It results in a negative story. Instead of putting your head in the sand, talk to the guy."

Litchfield called this a "new generation" that requires unification within the industry.

"It is a time for agriculture to wake up, join hands and forget the past," he said.

This is where the Council of California Growers comes in. The purpose of the council is to increase public awareness and support California agriculture and related industries.

The council is a non-profit organization paid for by farmers and has a state-wide membership of about 3,000 people.

"We like to call ourselves the non-profit professionals." Litchfield said. "We initiate, develop and sophisticate ways to reach the public externally."

Litchfield said the council will not continue its programs in labor, water or land, but will broaden into more generic areas, like pesticides, to change the public perception of the industry.

The council also plans to implement a new program that will be called, "California Agriculture Public Relations Round Table," that will meet once every two months. The meeting will address the problems facing the industry and will include professionals in the industry as guest speakers.

"The professionals will get a chance to ask the professionals questions," Litchfield said of the program.

Litchfield, 49, graduated from Cal Poly in 1968 with a bachelor of science degree in agricultural journalism. He began his professional career in 1959 with the Copley News organization and held editorial positions with the San Diego Union, Glendale News-Press and Copley News Service in Los Angeles and Sacramento.

He went on to become an account executive for the public relations counseling firm of Carl Byoir and Associates where he worked for 10 years. He then went to Hughes Aircraft, and worked as the director of corporate public relations for 10 years. From there, he became vice president and account supervisor of a San Francisco public relations agency.

Litchfield joined the council in 1981 as vice president of communications and, in 1982, was elected president of the council.

This shows the Chancellor's office does lie," Andrews added. He went on to say that the president's have blocked settlement. "Obviously the president don't care."

The CFA cited that each of the CSU president's, including President Warren J. Baker, is receiving a substantial raise this year. President Baker earns an annual salary of $81,757, among the highest of salaries offered to a CSU president.

Baker will receive a $5,710 raise this year. Baker's raise is 14.78 percent of a full professor's step five salary, the CFA said.

Andrews reported the top salary for a full professor per academic year is $236,684 and the lowest is $20,148. He warned that the faculty is agitated.

Mathematics Professor Harvey Greenwald said. "The real issue is that the faculty received no pay raise for several years and then the legislature granted us a reasonable pay raise and the trustees are giving us less than they could."

Greenwald said that the faculty is beginning to take action in their own behalf. Such actions may include picketing, the distribution of leaflets and the forming of committees of different campuses statewide.

The faculty is prohibited to strike by law.

"I think we should wait and play to the upcoming fact-finding session and to some person who is objective," he said.

Picking folk heartstrings

Though he said he will retire in about three years, guitarist Doc Watson showed no signs of slowing down Monday night at the Cowboy in Pismo Beach.

Watson, who is Merle and baseline T. Michael Coleman ripped through the ballads and breakdowns the trio is famous for. The 63-year-old folk artist, whose fame grew during the '60s folk music revival, has been blind since birth.

Theatre 33 of San Luis Obispo Senior High School will open its season this week with the play, “The Miracle Worker.”

“The Miracle Worker” will be performed Dec. 6, 7, 8, 13, 14 and 15 at 8 p.m. at San Luis Obispo Senior High School. The play is adapted from playwright William Gibson’s motion picture and theatrical versions of the life of Helen Keller. Keller contracted a disease early in childhood that left her deaf and blind. The play is centered around the efforts of her tutor, Annie Sullivan, who eventually taught Keller to read, write and talk.

“There were basically three reasons why ‘The Miracle Worker’ was chosen for our opening presentation,” said Judith Carnell, director of the play. “First of all, I felt it was a challenging role for young women. Secondly, the play shows that Helen wanted to be treated like a normal person and I believe that this will show the audience that other handicapped people also want to be treated this way. The play also affords the opportunity to be emotional, loving and caring without being melodramatic.”

Shannon Keep will play the part of Helen Sullivan. “Shannon and Laura are the most talented because they have to play their parts as you can give at that age,” Carnell said.

The Tim Jackson Band

*Editor's note: this is another in an occasional series of features highlighting local music groups. This release comes courtesy of Kyl Records, Los Osos.

The Tim Jackson Band has been busy locally and statewide since it was founded in 1982.

Jackson, who played front man in the U.S. Band and Tumblr Doo, has worked in local bands for several years and gained a reputation for attracting large crowds with his endless enthusiasm and raw emotional delivery.

Jack Hayward, a founding member of the band, is a Cal Poly graduate. He studied music composition and theory for two years before earning his degree in Electronic Engineering by designing and building a wireless remote keyboard system. Hayward's knowledge and creativity are integral parts of the band's style. Eddy Sandor, owner and operator of a local recording studio since 1980, originates the band with his strong vocals and unique fusion guitar. Sandor has worked with Randy Hansen and Weird Al Yankovich, as well as with his own jazz-rock bands, Mass Transit and the Jeff Conrad Project.

Drummer Mark "Sharkie" Nielsen and bassist Leonard "the Glove" first started playing together in the 70s. Follows may remember them playing together in the Fat & Sassy Band. Sharkie has been on tour with Kingfish during the 1978 U.S. tour by Electric Light Orchestra, and he is a former member of the San Francisco All Stars with Mario Cipollina, who is now with Hury Lewis and the News.

The Glove has also toured the western U.S. with top acts including Johnny Paycheck, Les Dudek, Joe Cooker, and the Stone Canyon Band.

The Tim Jackson Band opened last week for Eddie and the Tide at the Spirit, having opened concerts for Randy Hansen and Rocky Burnett, where they played their hit single "Twisted," and their new hit "Saturday." "Rock & Roll's the Blues With Lipstick On," is the name of their soon-to-be-released LP, available on Kyl Records. It is produced by Tom Petterson of Cheap Trick.

Humboldt State editor files suit

EUREKA, Calif. (AP) — A university newspaper editor who defied California law by endorsing political candidates in state and national elections has filed suit after being fired from his job.

Adam Truitt, 23, says school administrators suspended him indefinitely as editor of the Humboldt State University Lumberjack on Nov. 1, and he has lost subsequent appeals to regain his position.

He filed suit on Friday in Humboldt County Superior Court, contending that the First Amendment gives student editors the right to make political endorsements despite a state law — Title 5 of the California Administrative Code — which bans such endorsements.

The suit, filed by Eureka lawyer Arnie Braafladt on behalf of Truitt and the Lumberjack editorial board, asks that Truitt's suspension be invalidated. It names 46 defendants, including university officials and Gov. George Deukmejian.

California officials have said state university newspapers are government-funded and it would be a misuse of tax dollars for the papers to endorse ballot measures or politicians running for office.

Lumberjack advisor and journalism professor Howard Swennan suspended the student editor, "but I happen to agree with what Adam did," he said in a telephone interview on Tuesday.

Aero student to be selected

Wings West offers scholarship

By KAREN ELLICHMAN

Wings West Airlines, a locally-based company, will offer a $1,000 scholarship annually to an aeronautical engineering student beginning this year, said a company spokesperson.

Carol Cronin, assistant director of marketing, said the Charles G. Wiswell Scholarship was established as a community service and to honor a recently retired employee.

She created the scholarship to keep Charles Wiswell's name alive in the community, and to inspire others to work in the industry as he has," said Cronin.

Wiswell founded Swift Air in 1969, and acted as president of that company until 1980, she said. He worked as vice president of operations at Wings West Airlines until his retirement, and now acts as an Outside consultant to the firm. "Charles Wiswell has been a leader in the San Luis Obispo community," said Cronin.

Wiswell will select the recipient of the scholarship each year, based on a student's financial need, academic standing, and demonstrated intent to make a professional contribution to aeronautical engineering, said Cronin. When Wiswell fully retires from business, the scholarship will be awarded by Wings West Airlines' board of directors, she added.

Aeronautical engineering students may apply for the scholarship by filling out both a student aid application and a scholarship application, according to Laura Dimitt of the Financial Aid Office.

The scholarship will be awarded during the 1985-86 school year.

The scholarship was presented to Cal Poly President Warren Baker by Wiswell and Wings West executive Mike Morrow two weeks ago.

POLICE BULLETIN

Money was taken Tuesday from a dorm room in Sequoia Hall, according to Cal Poly police reports. The incident occurred between 8:30 and 10 p.m., said Investigator Ray Barrett. The resident of the dorm room was watching television in the lounge when a suspect entered her room and removed $10 from her wallet.

The door was closed but not locked, said Barrett.
SF at home for playoffs
Walsh can rest injured

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers face two weeks of "garbage time," as they call it in basketball when all the suspense is gone. They already are assured of the homefield advantage in all playoff games.

But Coach Bill Walsh said Tuesday that the starting players on the team with the National Football League's best record, 13-1, will continue to get plenty of work in the final two games of the regular season.

The healthy ones, that is.

Defensive back Ronnie Lott and tight end Russ Francis, recovering from injuries, probably will be back in uniform for Saturday's home game against the Minnesota Vikings, but Walsh said they are not expected to play. Linebacker Jim Fahnorst will miss two games and possibly the playoffs because of a knee injury.

"Wendell Tyler is on the doubtful list right now," Walsh said. "We'll have to see how he functions in practice on Wednesday and Thursday."

The running back with 1,194 yards rushing sustained a thigh injury in Sunday's 35-17 victory at Atlanta. If Tyler is forced to sit out the Minnesota game, rookie Derrick Harmon would start in his place.

"On one hand, we'd like to see Derrick play. He's played excellently," Walsh said. "But we also want Wendell to play. He would like to play, certainly. He's within reach to break all the records."

Walsh referred to the team's single-season rushing record of 1,203 yards set by Delvin Williams in 1976. Tyler's current total is second best in 49er history.

Backup quarterback Matt Cavanaugh started the fourth game of the season, filling in for injured Joe Montana, and threw for three touchdowns in a victory over Philadelphia. He's thrown only four passes since then.

Oklahoma, Washington face off in Orange Bowl

NEW YORK (AP) — Regardless of what The Associated Press college football poll says — and it currently says that Brigham Young is No. 1 — the Orange Bowl is trumpeting the clash between No. 2 Oklahoma and fourth-ranked Washington on New Year's Night as a national championship game.

"Brigham Young hasn't played a representative schedule. Their opponents as a group have a losing record. How can a team like that be national champion?" Nick Crane, chairman of the Orange Bowl's team selection committee, said Wednesday. "In our opinion, and in the opinion of a lot of others, they shouldn't be ranked No. 1."

"We're saying it's for the national championship and we hope everyone else does, too," said Bob Lafferty, president of the Orange Bowl.

Oklahoma Bowl representatives and Coaches Barry Switzer of Oklahoma and Don James of Washington have not been as outspoken as the Orange Bowl committee. But they made no secret of the fact that they are rooting for Michigan to defeat BYU in the Holiday Bowl on Dec. 21.

"I'm not prepared to say BYU is not a good football team," James said. "I've been low-profiling the No. 1 thing because we play them the next two years. But I'm saying 'Go Blue' (Michigan's war cry) every night in my prayers.
Swanson conference MVP

Poly linebacker, four teammates get WFC awards

The Mustangs' leading tackle linebacker Gary Swanson was named co-Player-of-the-Year in the Western Football Conference. Four other Cal Poly football players—safety Nick Frost, defensive tackle Steve Gibson, corner back Chris Green, and offensive tackle Sal Cesario—were also named, on Tuesday, to the all league team.

The 6-2, 235 pound Swanson was named MVP for the team at the banquet last weekend and this is the second year in a row Swanson has grabbed player-of-the-year honors.

Swanson is probably the best player ever to play for Sanderson. In the 14 years I have been here, said Sanderson, "I haven't seen anyone better."

"I can't say enough about him."

This year's team has one of Poly's best defenses ever, said Sanderson. He added that Swanson has an "excellent chance of making it in the NFL. "The critical thing is who drafts him. If there is room on a roster, I think he will make it."

Swanson also grabbed all-conference honors last year as a sophomore and was the only Mustang offensive player to make all the conferences.

Frost, Stanbery and Gibson led a defensive that picked off 23 passes and recovered 13 fumbles. Frost picked off seven passes this year and was named to All-America.

Swanson was named co-player-of-the-year in the Western Conference, and had nine names on the all conference team.

Gary Swanson (48) was named co-player-of-the-year in the Western Football Conference, and had nine names on the all conference team.

And the all conference team. Cal State Northridge finished last with an 0-3 conference mark, but still managed to get two players named to the all conference team.

Santa Clara finished the year 1-2 and had Jimmy Haase named to the all conference team.

But they still have not qualified for the post season show, despite a 10-4 record.

"Right now we're 10-4, but we're not anywhere yet," said the Raider coach.

The Raider's situation is hardly bleak, however. They need only one of their remaining two games (Monday night at Detroit, or the following Sunday at home against Pittsburgh) to qualify as a wild card.

Or if the New England Patriots (6-6 and holding a tiebreaking advantage over the Raiders) were to lose Sunday at Philadelphia, that would clinch a spot for the Raiders in advance of the Monday night game.

For Flores, that would be an ideal situation because he would have a chance to get quarterback Jim Plunkett some action. Plunkett has not played in nine weeks, since suffering a torn abdominal muscle.

"We would like to get Jim some work," said Flores. "It would be nice to get into the fourth quarter with a big cushion so we could get him some playing time. Or have a Situation where the last game doesn't matter.

"For the Raiders, every game has mattered since a three-game losing streak dropped them to 7-4."

The best thing about this team is we have put ourselves in a hole and had to start fighting to make the playoffs," said Flores. "We've never looked back. We've taken each week, each game by itself and just did what we had to do."

But victories over Kansas City and Indianapolis weren't enough to convince the critics. When the Raiders beat Miami 45-34 last Sunday, though, that was convincing.

"There are fun games to coach," said Flores. "You look out there and somebody's always making a big play. Hopefully, most of those big plays are made by your guys."

Flores said the Raiders suffered no new injuries against the Dolphins and should be at full strength for the Lions.
