The possibility of the Cal Poly Founda tion partially subsidizing the University Union, which may avert a student fee in crease, was discussed in an open forum at the Student Senate meeting Wednesday night.

"Costs have gone up at the University student and union fees have not," said Steve Dunton, student senator from the School of Engineering. "Either the Union will need a fee increase, or they will have to cut services. I believe the former is in error." Dunton suggested that the Foundation assess any additional U.U. costs that would raise student fees.

Referring to the Founding Audited Fi nancial Statement published in 1981, Dun ton pointed out that the Foundation makes an "excess revenue and support over penses and expenditures" of $1,333,270.

"For every dollar of profit, the Foundation makers, 67 cents is student generated," said Dunton. Because of this, Dunton suggests that the Foundation put some money back into a service that would benefit students most directly, the operation of the University Union.

Currently, students are paying $44 in quarterly fees for the University Union.
Roger Conway, executive director of the Associated Students Incorporated, anticipates that within three weeks the U.U. will make some kind of proposal to either cut services or raise fees.

Also in open forum, controversy arose in the Student Senate when one senator sug gested that certain posters on campus be prohibited because of graphics she con sidered "offensive and in bad taste."

Elizabeth Tucker, senator from the School of Science and Math, objected to flyers put up by an anti-abortion club on campus called Coalition of American Pro Life University Students (C.A.P.S.).

The flyers have pictures of aborted babies
in garbage cans and other abortion scenes.

"The ASI has no power to do anything about the posters," said Bob Parker,
senator from the School of Agriculture.
"It's up to the Administration."

Tucker compared the C.A.P.L.S. pos ters to pornography, which is not permitted on campus. This is obscene material as well," she said.

Many senators disagreed with Tucker saying that any group has a right to freedom of speech.

Foundation profits requested for Union

A computer program competition that gives students, faculty and staff the chance to become published software designers has been announced by the computer assistance services department.

Computational Adventures in Learning project is a conceptual design contest for software designed to assist students studying in the School of Science and Math. The project is funded by the Chancellor's Office and is open to students faculty and staff in the CSU system.

"We want to encourage anyone from the university to enter," said Heirendt. "You don't have to know any programming
language to enter this contest."

Twenty statewide winners will see their designs marketed by McGraw Hill, an educational publishing firm. Winning de signers will receive up to 25 percent of the proceeds.

"McGraw Hill is going to be marketing
the programs across the country," said George Westlund, campus coordinator for the contest. They are targeting these packages around the $50 range. "They are marketing..." Heirendt said of the contest.

The contest offers winners a better
money-making opportunity than a com mercial contract, said Heirendt.

Contest winners may be selected for Apple
II series microcomputers and IBM personal computers.

Cal Poly may get new fraternities, sorority

By Margaret Barrett

Two new fraternities and one new sorority may join Cal Poly's existing Greek system.

Walt Lambert, coordinator of Greek affairs, said that any new group can start a club on campus
as long as it passes certain ASI guidelines.

Panhellenic, the governing board of sororities on campus,
has certain guidelines before a new sorority can come to the campus. The Interfraternity Council, which is the board rep resenting fraternities on campus,
did not have guidelines last year when two fraternities wanted to start chapters at Cal Poly.

The two fraternities, Sigma Nu
and Beta Theta Pi, perform fraternity functions such as hold weekly meetings, perform
philanthropic activities and par ticipate in sporting events.

They have not, however, become part of IFC.

In order for the fraternities to become part of IFC, seven out of the ten fraternities must vote to accept them. Monday, the presidents of all of the fraternities
were asked to select representatives from Sigma Nu and Beta Theta Pi to give presentations as to why they want to be part of Cal Poly's Greek community. The presidents decision was to go back to talk to their members and make a final decision
two weeks later.

Representatives from Sigma Nu
and Beta Theta Pi are optimistic that the presidents will vote to let their houses into the system.

Those at first that were against the idea are now for it," said
Bruce Dunkeberg, president of Beta Theta Pi.

The president of Sigma Nu, Dennis Kuhl, said, "I'm speaking on behalf of the house. We're confident that IFC will accept both of the new fraternities.

Both presidents would like to build up a good impression of the Greek system on campus. They think that expansion of the Greek system will have a positive effect and that they can achieve their goals better by being part of IFC.

"I think the Greek community can have not just a very strong but a positive influence in the Cal Poly community and the San Luis Obispo community," said Dunkeberg.

Kuhl said, "We hope that by being a part of the Greek system
we will form a strong point from which we can generate in terest.

The president of IFC, Mike Pellici, said members of existing houses are concerned that new houses might create more pro blems with the city and more competition for housing if a Greek flow is not approved.

Jim Bickle, president of Delta Sigma Phi, said this meeting was the first time the houses had heard formal presentations by members of the new fraternities.

Bickle added, "The Greek system at Cal Poly has a potential for expansion."

The decision to postpone final vote was unanimous. "It gives the presidents one last chance

Secretaries may also be expan ding. Members of Panhellenic, voted last fall to invite a new so rority on campus. The decision was made because of the large collection of women who take the SATs. Another reason was that the numbers in each house are growing. The women wanted to keep the numbers in each house from becoming too large.

"We want all the girls to feel a part of their house," said Laurie
Maddox, president of Panhellenic.

Questions were sent out to eight national sororities. The sororities were chosen if their sizes nationally and locally were compatible with the existing Cal Poly sororities. Another con sideration was the level of inter est the sororities showed in the past in starting a Cal Poly sorority.

Lambert said, "We don't want to have too small a house that will be dominated. The new house has to have at least 24 members of Panhellenic behind it. They have to promise they will need all the help they can get.

The sororities that show an in terest in starting a chapter at Cal Poly will be invited to speak to the members of Panhellenic. An expansion committee will be formed to investigate the pro spective sorority and to report
among the members of Panhellenic will probably take place during spring quarter.

In response to criticism, the Concert Committee is polling students to find out what groups they would like to see on campus.

Free speech: a basic right

Student: "What gives you the right to come here and try to push your religion on us?"

My reply is "I'm glad you asked that question because I thank God that I live in the United States -- a country which allows me the right to come here and speak."

This is the essence of a conversation that occurred on campus the other day. A student, probably in disagreement with the evangelist's views, asked a question that has probably entered many students' minds at one time or another.

Last week the United Athletics were on campus, sparking debate among students who questioned their right to present atheistic views on campus. Evangelists, pro-abortion, anti-abortion, pro-nuke, anti-nuke and countless others have spoken or passed out literature.

More than one student will always ask, "What gives you the right to be here?"

Well, the evangelist said something each student on this campus should be in agreement with.

Freedom of speech is a basic right of all Americans. It is a right that should be protected and fought for.

This freedom means that everyone on this campus and in this country has a right to stand up in the University Union Plaza, or nearly anywhere else, and say what they want, providing it is not obscene.

The right to disagree is not what is in question. To disagree with something that has been said is also a precious right protected under the freedom of speech clause in the First Amendment.

It is when students question the right to someone else's free speech that a problem arises. Questioning this right is the first step to the human oppression now evident in so many nations.

Every time students walk through the University Union and hear someone speaking or get handed a brochure advocating some cause, they should be thankful. Even if they are in disagreement.

It's a right that they may want to use themselves sometime.

Students support alternative music of KCPR

If Mr. Fischer is looking for a format change why not look to Cal Poly's own station, KCPR? The station is here to give students "hands-on" experience and to provide a service to the Cal Poly student body. If the number of potential listeners is as large as Mr. Fischer says then the majority of the college population is not being served by KCPR.

Since the station is non-profit it does not place the financial worries of others who rely on advertising revenue for survival. Max I suggest to Mr. Fischer that he change his aim and work to make KCPR more responsive to his needs and to the needs of other Cal Poly students as well.

Rick Lopes

Editor:

Let me begin by saying that I agree with Mr. Fischer's stand on Top 40 radio here in San Luis Obispo and that a change would be nice. But I realize too that this is not going to happen. I don't feel that an album rock station would "overwhelm" a Top 40 station in rating here in San Luis Obispo.

Generally I realize that the Cal Poly population represents a significant amount of people in the city, but the signals of both KRLY and KROQ reach people far outside the reality of Cal Poly. These listeners and their tastes must be considered, too.

Without a doubt stations in Los Angeles like KLOS, KMET and KROQ have a wide following but unquestionably the number one station in L.A. is KLOS-FM (92.7). A Top 40 station. The reason is simple, they provide a form of programming which is appealing to the masses.

We here in San Luis Obispo don't have the luxury of people in L.A. who have over 80 stations. If we turn our sights to the north we see that within the past six months two of Northern California's most popular album rock stations have changed their formats. In August KROZ in Sacramento became KSAC and plays middle of the road music (MtlFm) and in October KMEL in San Francisco changed their format to Top 40. Without a doubt the reason is money and we need to realize that radio is a business and that stations will adhere to the format which will make them the most money.

KCPR is free to serve students

In regards to Mr. Fischer's thoughts on KLOS, a Los Angeles rock station, I would like to say I have listened to them and have found no variety in their proggamming, such as KCPR. KLOS is just another average rock station that plays the latest rock. These stations are all across the nation. Also I might add KROQ, a Los Angeles station, has a format close to KCPR and is recently voted #1 in the nation in Rolling Stone magazine.

I applaud KCPR and encourage in playing new innovative music without stifling in commercials between each song like some local stations.

Ag Ed Department helps Home Ec student teachers

By TED LEWIS
Staff Writer

The Agricultural Education Department is assisting the Home Economics Department this quarter to observe students who are student teaching at the local junior high and high schools.

The Home Economic Department is usually in charge of the student teaching, but the coordinator of student teacher placement, Dr. Sandra Crabtree, is on a medical leave of absence. Bill Kellogg, professor in the Agricultural Education Department, said the department was asked to assume the responsibilities. Because ag ed teachers are required to have a vocational education certificate, they were qualified to supervise the student teachers in classroom settings.

"There are a lot of similarities between the Home Economics Department and the Agricultural Education Department," said Kellogg. "Both are vocational programs involved in preparing the students for a job in the consumer education field."

The aged teachers that are involved in the supervision of the student teachers this quarter are Bill Kellogg, Bob Flores, the School, Glen Casey and Kim Perry. Mary Richmond, home economics teacher at San Luis Obispo High School, is also supervising and instructing.

The student teachers are assigned to a teacher at either a junior high school or a high school, and assignments require two quarters of student teaching. The first quarter is a part-time assignment, requiring two periods a day of student teaching and one hour of preparation time. The second quarter is a full-time student teaching position at the school. The student teacher does all the teaching that quarter for the permanent teacher, said Kellogg.

The aged teachers visit the student teachers three or four times a quarter, to observe them while they are teaching in the classroom setting.

"We go out to the classroom to observe the classes in order to provide suggestions on how to improve the student teachers' lesson plans," said Kellogg. "We also help to plan goals for the student teacher while we are there with the student teacher and the home room teacher."

The aged teachers and Mary Richmond also supervise the Home Economics Student Teaching Seminar. The seminar covers subjects that will help the student teacher find a teaching job. It also discusses the problems that can take place while teaching, said Kellogg.

This is the only quarter the Agricultural Education Department will join with the Home Economics Department in its student teaching program. Crabtree will return to her position next quarter or the Home Economics Department will hire someone on a permanent basis, said Kellogg.

As of Jan. 1 Pacifique Bell has three discount calling plans available for its San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara County residents which the company refers to as "Call Bonus" plans. The discounts, which apply be- between the hours of 11 p.m. and 8 a.m. weekdays and weekends from 11 p.m. Friday to 8 a.m. Monday, can save customers from 20 to 30 percent on toll nearly long distance calls, said Vivian Hao Lauster, media relations manager for Pacifique Bell. Nearby long distance calls are those within each Pacific Bell service area - San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara Counties make up one service area.

Plan 1, according to Lauster, provides a 20 percent discount on toll calls within a service area and is available for $2 a month. Plan 2 offers an increased discount of 35 percent for $4 a month. For those customers who place toll calls on a consistent basis there is a third plan which gives $7.50 of calls free and a 25 per cent discount on additional calls for $6 a month.

Customers also have the option of extending the hours of any plan for an extra 75 cents a month, she added. All plans have an initial sign-up fee of $5.

Because the program is so new, it is not known at this time what kind of a response the "Call Bonus" plans has had so far, said Lauster.

No discount plans are presently available for long distance calls out of the service area, said Jim Monroe, public relations manager for AT&T Communications.

"We did have a plan called "Reach Out California" that was approved by the Public Utilities Commission," said Monroe. "It is not known at this time what kind of a response the "Call Bonus" plans has had so far, said Monroe.

Time libel case over, no 'malice' proven

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal jury decided Thursday that Time magazine did not libel former Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon when it linked him to a massacre of Palestinians, but it said some Time employees were careless in putting together the story.

The six-person jury decided that Time did not show "actual malice" in publishing the disputed paragraph, which it earlier found to be both defamatory and false. For "actual malice," it would have had to be proven that Time published the paragraph knowing it was false or with "reckless disregard" of whether it was true or false.

Both sides claimed victory. "A lawsuit is very much like a war," said Time attorney Thomas D. Barr. "Who wins the battle is not particularly important. What is the war is over and we won." "We came in order to prove that Time magazine lied and we managed to prove that they lied," said Sharon of his $50 million libel suit. Sharon claimed a Feb. 21, 1983, Time cover story blighted him in reporting he "discussed" revenge for the assassination of Lebanon's president-elect, Bashir Gemayel — who killed the Phalangists — one day before the Christian militant massacred hundreds of people inside two refugee camps in Israel-occupied West Beirut.

After announcing the verdict, the jury foreman, Richard Peter Zag, read a statement in which the jurors said certain Time employees, especially Jerusalem correspondent David Halevy, acted "negligently and carelessly in reporting and verifying the information which ultimately found its way into the disputed paragraph."

"The jurors were taken from the courtroom shortly after the verdict and were not immediately available for comment." Halevy, 43, a native Israeli who testified at the trial, was not present.

Thursday's verdict was crucial because although the jury, which had been deliberating since Jan. 14, had found for Sharon on the two earlier points, it also had to show malice and damage to his reputation to prove libel.

If the jury had found "actual malice," a mini-trial would have been held to determine if Sharon's reputation was injured by the article and how much in damages he should be paid.

"We're most pleased with the verdict," said Ray Cave, Time's managing editor, who appeared at the courthouse at key points during the trial. "We remain unwavering to the suit's themes, but in due course it will be shown that it was true."

"I'm extremely happy that we won," said Henry Waxman, Time's editor in chief. "I'm totally happy with the jury's finding. It's an entirely just decision. I believe that they were wrong about defamatory." "We believe that our story was substantially true, but the important thing is that Mr. Sharon was not able to defeat us in an American court for his own purposes," he said. "The important thing is that they found the case." In a written statement, the magazine said, "Time feels strongly that the case should never have reached an American courtroom."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Union Carbide Corp. knew of the possibility of a "runaway reaction" of methyl isocyanate at its pesticide plant in West Virginia less than three months before at least 2,000 people were killed by a massive leak of the chemical from its sister plant in Bhopal, India, according to an internal memo released Thursday.

The memo, prepared by a Union Carbide safety inspection team and received by the manager of the Institute, W. Va., plant last Sept. 19, warned of two "major" concerns about toxic chemicals at the facility.

The team cited "the possibility of a runaway reaction in the MIC unit storage tanks" and "corporate rules required a corrective action plan to be developed within 60 days.

The safety team concluded that "a real potential for a serious incident exists at the MIC unit and questions whether response to one would be timely or effective enough to prevent catastrophic failure of the MIC storage tanks." But the team added that it did not consider the problems "imminent hazards requiring immediate correction."

On Dec. 3, an estimated 21 tons of MIC escaped from the facility, which Union Carbide officials have said had the same safety and operating procedures as the West Virginia plant.

"They're warning about the exact same thing that happened in Bhopal," Waxman told a news conference. "It looks like there's a possibility Bhopal could have been avoided. If nothing was done, I find this a very disturbing situation." There was no immediate word from Union Carbide about what action may be taken to address the memo's concerns.

Dick Henderson, a spokesman at the Institute plant, said the safety team plays "a devil's advocate. They take the worst-case scenario.""The safety memo surfaced a day after the Environmental Protection Agency released a report saying that 28 MIC spills had occurred since 1980 at the Institute, which even chemical industry critics describe as one of the best-operated U.S. plants.

First home meet tonight in Gym

By NANCY ALLISON

The Cal Poly women's gymnasts team will host its first home meet this season in the Main Gym tonight at 7:00 p.m.

Coach Tim Rivera expects to see close competition between Poly and the meet's other three teams: UC Davis, San Francisco State and Sacramento State.

"Sacramento and Davis are scoring about the same as we have in recent meets, so I expect to see a real exciting, competitive floor," said Rivera.

The Mustangs are ranked No. 16 in the nation in NCAA division II and have a 6-2 record after tumbling their way to victory last weekend against host San Francisco State and Sonoma State.

The Poly women won the meet with a season high 161.70 points, followed by Sonoma's 152.90 and San Francisco State's 146.76 points.

Hoopsters play running LA team

By DAN RUTHEMeyer

In its practices this week, the women's basketball team has concentrated on shooting the ball under pressure and defending against the fast break as it prepares to take on the run and gun Lady Toros of Cal State Dominguez Hills.

The game, which will be played at 5:45 p.m. Saturday, is important for the Mustangs as they look to improve on their 7-10 record.

Dominguez Hills, who is ranked 18th in the AP Division II poll and boasts an impressive 13-2 record, is known as a fast breaking team with few set offenses.

"They are a very undisciplined team," said Cal Poly head coach Marilyn McNeil. "They run the ball up and down the court quickly and don't have set plans."

To combat the transition game of the Lady Toros, Cal Poly has devoted many practice hours to improve its fast break defense.

"We worked on the transition game and the defense against it," said McNeil.

Attributing to the success of the Lady Toros has been the double-figure scoring of three of their players. Adrienne Harris, a 6'0 senior, averages 16.3 points and 13.5 rebounds a game. Sherri Ellern averages 14.5 points with 7.8 rebounds a game and Deadrea Johnson nets an average of 14 points while pulling down 9.3 rebounds.

Stacking up against this for...
Midlevel offense will be the not so shabby defense of the Mustangs. Giving up an average of 59 points a game, the defense has been Cal Poly's bread and butter. Although the Mustangs have been having trouble scoring points, McNeil says that she will continue to use her players the same way she has been all season. "Our whole team has been playing and we just keep substituting until we find someone that shoots well," said McNeil.

Because of the quick striking offense of the Lady Toros, McNeil sees the upcoming game as quite a contest. "They are really hard to play because they don't have any set plan. The way they play is to run and gun," said McNeil.
Sophomore Jana Lehman, who has been a high all-around contender all season, earned a first-place tie with Sonoma’s Nancy Nims with a 33.30 total. Kristie Broder placed 4th in all-around with a 31.85, while teammate Suzy Ingersol finished 6th with a 31.70 score.

The Mustangs have been missing three of their top gymnasts, due to injuries. Sophomore Paige Allan will be competing for the first time this year after suffering from a skull fracture in December. Allan is Poly’s top all-around gymnast according to Rivera, but will only be competing in two or three events tonight.

Renee Azari is out with an ankle injury, while teammate Wendy Meyer, who was the California State Champion on balance beam, suffers a stress fracture and could be out all season. Rivera said the injuries have hurt the team, yet at the same time brought them closer. “It has made the healthy girls work that much harder to compensate.”

Junior Barbara Lewis will be competing in two or three events tonight. Lewis, the outstanding athlete of Mexico City.

Jana Lehman does a hand stand on the beam. Lehman is the team’s leading gymnast so far this year.

Forego pursuit of knowledge for Happy Hour

By Chris Counts

While the eternal pursuit of higher education and the equally eternal pursuit of wild times often clash, students will persist in drinking.

And since Mummy and Daddy financial contributions toward pursuing higher education is often dwarfed by the inflated cost of wild times, students will persist in drinking.

Which brings us to Happy Hour. Happy Hour is basically a term used to designate a time when alcoholic beverages can be purchased at discount rates. Restaurants use Happy Hour to attract new customers. New customers use Happy Hour to drink.

Occasionally, when the pursuit of knowledge is replaced by the desire to pound a cold one, Joe College and Sally Campus empty out the pockets of their argyle sweaters and clean out the ashtrays in their BMWs in search of loose change. Armed with an arsenal of nickels and dimes, Joe and Sally are ready to embark on a journey beyond higher education, a mission into the unknown, and a trek where no recitation syllabus has passed before. With the dedication and fervor of a fraternal ritual, Joe and Sally enter Happy Hour.

Most Cal Poly students, of course, would never mix drinking with the pursuit of higher education. Cal Poly students, as we all know, eat right, brush their teeth three times a day and prefer calculus to TGs. But, as a courtesy to that small element that pollutes our fine campus, we offer this guide to Happy Hour in San Luis Obispo.

Obviously we can't list every fine establishment this town has to offer, so a random survey of Joe's and Sally's lets us concentrate on the Happiest of Happy Hours.

Located on Nipomo just west of Higuera, Tortilla Flats is a virtual Happy Hour Mecca. From 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. every day, students can enjoy Bud on draft for $7.54 a glass or $2.75 a pitcher. The Flats also offers $1 margaritas plus free chips and salsa during Happy Hour. And for serious students of discount drinking, Tuesday night is Medical night. Mascell is a particular variety of tequila noted for the worm that occupies its bottle. After drinking the bottle and eating the worm, thrillseekers are recognized by a plaque on the wall that proclaims 'I ate the worm at Tortilla Flats.' Along with Spikes, 'The Flats' is the place to be seen during Happy Hour.

Between 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. on Monday the Cigar Factory on Higuera offers what may be the best drinking bargain in town. Not only are patrons treated to free hors d' oeuvres, but all drinks are just 60¢. This offer is basically the same for the rest of the weekend with the rates increasing slightly each day.

Thought known primarily for its food and entertainment, Shady Grove, also on Higuera, offers a Happy Hour. From 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday, students can drink Coors, Lite, Lowenbrau and Bud for 50¢ a glass or $1.75 a pitcher.

Los Hermanos, located on Osos just west of Monterey, offers an atmosphere and menu virtually identical to that of Tortilla Flats. Los Hermanos offers a Happy Hour Monday through Friday from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. and Thursday through Saturday from 10 p.m. to 12 p.m. Margaritas are always discounted at Los Hermanos as is a rotating selection of drinks. Patrons are also treated to complimentary chips, salsa and nachos.

The dark horse of Happy Hours is the Dark Room. Located just north of the Fremont Theatre on Monterey, the Dark Room provides a Happy Hour Monday through Saturday from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Bud on draft is 50¢ a glass and Heineken just 75¢ a glass. The Dark Room also provides entertainment during Happy Hour on Friday.

Although Spikes, which is located on Higuera just around the corner from Tortilla Flats, doesn't offer a Happy Hour, it deserves an honorable mention. To a core of serious Cal Poly drinkers, Spikes is the only place to be seen during Happy Hour.

"A Spike's card is a lot like an American Express card," Joe Campus says. "I wouldn't want to leave home without it."

A Spike's card is a 2x2 inch slab of brass that designates exactly how worldly a particular drinker is. Based upon how many times a drinker can be heard talking to the world at Spikes' he or she is rewarded with either a plaque, a t-shirt or a mug. Infinitely more popular than eating a worm.
CA Poly students who are interested in cross-cultural teaching to serve a part-time to one year internship. Qualifications for the internship would include a background in teaching and a wish to travel. Spanish language training is desirable, but not necessary. The most important qualification, according to Lint, is that a person would have to care about other people.

Lint would like to be able to offer the intern a living quarters and a "shield to protect themselves from culture shock," until the school becomes self-sufficient. Then, he said, perhaps the internship could evolve into a salaried job.

"But for now, it's a profit of the soul, not monetary," said Lint.

"We don't feel that we'd just like to go down and provide an interest in teaching and a wish to travel," said Lint. "I think we can bring something back."

Busy open markets and the serenity of the countryside are part of the charm of a new movie about colonial India, ‘Passage to India’

By Lisa McKinnon
Special to the Daily

Here we are a mere twenty-five days into the year, and already USA Today has named 1985 the "Year of India." Small wonder. Interest generated by the award winning film "Gandhi" in 1982 has resulted in a veritable cornucopia of India-related cultural offerings this year, from an excellent PBS mini-series, "The Jewel in the Crown," to a traveling art exhibition called the Festival of India. Somewhere in the midst of all that is "A Passage to India," an exotic film based on E.M. Forster's 61-year-old novel about personal growth and social prejudice in the context of colonial India.

Superbly crafted by director David Lean ("The Bridge on the River Kwai," and "Doctor Zhivago"), "A Passage to India" is quite literally a journey to that country for the audience, from the scenes of busy, aromatic open markets to the mystical beauty of the countryside.

We are introduced to India at the same time that Adela Quested, a young Englishwoman visiting India for the first time, arrives there with her intended mother-in-law, Mrs. Moore. As British ladies and the guests of the local magistrate, Romy Healsop (Moore's son and Adela's groom), they are whisked through the "unpleasantness" of the market and the honors of Indians there to the British section of the city, where the streets are named "Trafalgar" and "Picaidy" and all the houses are surrounded by neatly maintained lawns.

A series of dreadful tea parties sponsored by the Indian ladies, which follows, and Adela and Moore become horrified at the way the Indian guests are treated. An Indian band dressed in British military garb is forced to stumble its way through "Tea for Two," for background music. The other British ladies are snobbish to the Indian ladies and Adela and Moore never really get to talk to anyone who isn't British.

Dissatisfied with life in the transplanted England she is limited to, Adela would rather hew to Ronny's idea of showing her a good time up to a polo game—in India—in favor of seeing the "real" India.

She and Moore are invited on a day trip up to the mysterious caves by the ever-accommodating Dr. Aziz, an Indian who has some amusing ideas about the proper way to treat British ladies. Aziz enlist the aid of an elephant and some friends to carry chairs, tables, umbrellas, rugs and other supplies up the hill for a picnic at the base of the caves because he heard that British ladies aren't even allowed to sit on a rug on the ground.

The happy excitement of the day is disrupted when Adela becomes upset in one of the caves and runs at breakneck speed back down the hill in hysterics. Chasms are brought against Aziz, and what follows threaten to explode the increasingly volatile mood of Indians who are questioning England's right to hold India as a possession.

The acting in "A Passage to India" is extraordinary. Judy Davis brings depth to Adela's struggle to find direction for herself, and Peggy Ashcroft is delightfully Queen Mother-ish as the caring Mrs. Moore who seems an "old soul" in her understanding of Indian culture. Both gain our acceptance for being so "unsafely" amidst a lot of British pomposity.

Vincen Banerjee is rather ham­flinsh as Dr. Aziz when we first see him, but it fits the ultimate innocence of his character and contrasts dramatically with the attitude he has after his run-in with British law.

In smaller parts, Alec Guiness is deliciously funny as the Indian professor who speaks in philosophical circles ("You can do what you like but the outcome will be the same," he explains), and Nigel Havers is appropri­ately, oddly, coldly, British as the magistrate. James Fox some­times hitches on being con­descending as the Britisher who eschews all the conventions for treating Indians, but we have to admire him for it.

"A Passage to India" is a film of epic proportions and scope. It tells the story of kindness that transcends all races and forgiveness that can transcend all the conventions and forgiveness that can transcend all races and prejudices. In the end, it makes us think about ourselves and others. The film is an experience much in the way that India is. As Mrs. Moore says, "India forces one to come face to face with oneself."

Capitol would be in California!"

Cheers, Cheers, Cheers.

The President danced with his wife for the ninth time, the last time to each other that night and then left. I had finally seen the President in person. I was impressed.

The evening progressed with drinking and dancing, until the midnight hour. Each guest had paid $125 for a ticket to this ball, each guest was in his or her finest clothes and wearing the finest jewels. As people began to leave, "party favors" were given out at the door. Each guest received a gift from the Republican Party, with which to remember a night of elaborate festivity, unabashed expense and glamour. Each guest received a key chain.

So I left this ball, knowing that I may never again attend so elaborate a party, holding my keychain, remembering the evening and the victory of the Republican party.

State aims to stop child abuse

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Public hearings are to gather data to improve state child abuse laws.

Two-day hearings, expected to draw more than 30 experts on subjects ranging from day-care licensing to reporting and prosecuting child abuse cases, are sponsored by the attorney general's Commission on the Enforcement of Child Abuse Laws.

"Today we have the opportunity to make a firm and lasting contribution to a system, much more help, the child abuse victim," Van De Kamp said in his opening remarks. "The subject is too important to turn our eyes away from the dirty little secrets that have been with us, with our neighbors, even with our relatives."

Van De Kamp said that 85 percent of California's convicted violent criminals were abused as children, and he called child abuse "the root cause of crime."

"They learned a way of life and have carried on the vicious cycle," Van De Kamp said.

While Urban, representing defendant Betty Raidor, told a crowded courtroom where the first child witness has been testifying in a preliminary hearing in the McMartin Pre-School mass molestation case.

Seven of the school's teachers and officials are charged with 207 counts of molestation and conspiracy involving 41 youngsters.

That is where we have failed miserably," Block said.

Los Angeles Pre-School molestation case continues

The development came in the seventh month of a preliminary hearing to decide whether there is sufficient evidence to try the seven defendants on 208 counts of molestation and conspiracy involving 41 youngsters.

Although prosecutors allege that students at the Manhattan Beach pre-school were photographed nude, investigators say no such photos have ever been found.

Urban would not confirm that the single child in the reported nude photos was the child of the parent who has the photos, saying only that the parent is a man who is "very involved in the case."

Urban said that according to the district attorney's evidence, the parent refuses to turn the photos over to the Manhattan Beach police because he has allegedly been warned by counselors into saying he was molested by former teachers.

"That is where we have failed miserably," Block said.

He said children suffer additional trauma after charges are brought against their abuser.

For example, he said, that an 8-year-old boy "literally gave in and altered his testimony in order to be dismissed from the stand," after undergoing more than nine days of questioning during a trial.

The hearings are taking place at the county Hall of Administration, a few miles from a courtroom where the first child witness has been testifying in a preliminary hearing.

"We have received a lot of calls from interested companies," said sheriff's spokesman Capt. Bill Hinoj.

He said negotiations began after Sheriff Sherman Block and State Assemblyman Gray Davis, D-Los Angeles, unveiled the campaign a week ago by announcing that Ala-Dena Dairy would print the picture of missing children from Southern California communities on its half-gallon milk cartons.

Those cartoons began showing up on store shelves Monday. The next day, 13-year-old Deria Paige Yarbrough, who ran away in November, returned to her desert home in Lancaster, about 40 miles north of downtown Los Angeles.
