Prosecutor says Curry is guilty

BY ROSEMARY COSTANZO

Deputy District Attorney Dan Hilford gave his opening statement yesterday against Kenneth Wayne Curry, the man accused of killing two Cal Poly students, and asked the jury to suppress evidence gathered by Sheriff's deputies during interrogations before his arrest.

Judge Warren Conklin denied the defense's motion to suppress evidence against Kenneth Curry as a result of his arrest. Curry was arrested June 5 and 7, when detectives interviewed Curry about the deaths of Luisa Ada and Stephen Braun. Defense lawyers for Kenneth Curry had argued that Curry should have been advised of his constitutional rights on the first day he was interrogated and that the techniques used were similar to those used on persons who have been arrested.

They are questions with the purpose of eliciting incriminating statements.

Judge denies suppression of evidence in trial

Defense lawyers for Kenneth Wayne Curry, the man accused of killing two Cal Poly students, were denied their motion to suppress evidence gathered by Sheriff's deputies during interrogations before his arrest.

Judge Warren Conklin denied the motion, which would have blocked the defense from using the cause of the death as exonerating.

Sheriff's deputies said they believed the cause of death was determined as a single gunshot to the head.

Informal comparison to SLO restaurants

Snack bar prices consistently higher

BY GREGG SCHROEDER

Although Cal Poly Foundation officials monitor off-campus restaurants to keep university food prices competitive, the Snack Bar does not always follow suit. As a result, the Snack Bar often charges more for the same products. This year, the Snack Bar will not fare as well as the university food service.

The snack bar is part of the SLO market, and the snack bar offers a similar product to the university food service. However, the snack bar tends to charge more for the same products.

Although the snack bar charges more, it is still a better deal than the university food service because it provides a wider variety of products.

Prof still fighting for paid substitutes

BY SUSAN EDMONDSON

A Cal Poly professor is fighting for the right to hire paid substitutes to assist in her classroom. Prof. David Leamnson, a geology professor at the Climate Change Office, has been denied the right to hire paid substitutes.

Leamnson claimed that the provision in the contract that limits the number of paid substitutes is unfair. The university has not yet responded to the claim.

A hearing is set for later this month. The decision will be heard by a panel of four judges.

Substitute teacher pay problem continues

The fight continues, but the Chancellor's Office still hasn't come out of the corner. A year ago the Physics Department filed a grievance with the Chancellor's Office over the complaint that there is no funding for substitute teachers.

A year ago we commended the act by the Physics Department and interim head Keith Stowe. Still, nothing has come of it.

Stowe is waiting for a reply from the Chancellor, a reply which could either indicate a fund for substitute teachers, explain why there is no fund or explain why the current policy isn't in violation of a contract.

The contract in question, which was in fact approved by the Chancellor's Office about two years ago, in effect says that substitute teachers would be paid at "the faculty substitute rate." Which implies that there is some money pot somewhere which would pay out those substitute teacher compensations.

But the question still remains where that pot is designated to stay.

A response from the employee relations specialist, Gary Lebowich, was sent to the general manager of the California Faculty Association, a faculty union. Lebowich's response disclaimed any implication that funds to pay substitutes must be available through the university. "The contract language...leads to no implication — the words mean what they say," the letter says.

Anyone could figure out that substitute teachers should be paid at a fair rate.

The issue doesn't stop at the fact that the Chancellor's office hasn't made a move to look into 266 days to get a response after a hearing — and in fact almost ignoring the issue — but what about the issue of paying substitutes?

Substitutes should be available to all departments in the university, and should be paid as such from the state funds. The money that gets used for education largely comes from taxes and student tuition and fees. What the public is paying for is a public education system, and by paying for it, should be guar­anteed to have it.

There are instances in every department, with almost every faculty member, every quarter when classes are cancelled. This could be due to illness or conventions and other academic reasons. If we are paying for a full quarter's instruction, that's what we should get — a full quarter's instruction.

A student wastes money for each day that is missed, either by his own fault or if there is no one there to teach.

Should an emergency arise and a professor must be absent for a week or two, that is a considerable amount of money being lost, as well as a considerable amount of time, since Cal Poly is on a ten-week quarter schedule.

By dealing with this grievance situation in such an unresponsive manner, the Chancellor and her staff don't seem to be taking our whole education seriously.

We support Keith Stowe's continuing fight to improve the system. We can only hope others will too, and that those in Long Beach will realize it's a relevant problem.

Chicana group chastises Daily

Editor

Our complaint stems from the Mustang Daily's continued biasness to ignore reporting of Mexican and Chicano cultural activities and issues on campus. Highlighted by the recent lack of Cinco de Mayo coverage and publicity, Mexican and Chicano students are angered.

The failure to give public recognition to student activities as important as Cinco de Mayo and Chicano cultural programs is a slap to our Mexican heritage. The sooner the Mustang Daily, a student run paper, realizes its obligation to report all student activities, the sooner Chicano and Mexican students will feel that their concerns and needs are being recognized.

Your negligence creates a false picture of Chicano apathy and unimportance to the student community.

This past year, MECHA (Movimiento Estudiantil Chicano de Aztlan) has sponsored a Christmas benefit for Migrant Mexican Mariachi and folk music, Cinco de Mayo dinner and dance, Poly Royal food contest, and a Fiesta Mile Run and the upcoming Chicano commencement exercises. This inexcusable failure to give adequate notice of Chicano events and cultural activities deprives all students of experiencing our rich Mexican heritage.

In sum, this policy by the Mustang Daily to ignore Chicano issues and educational activities must end now. We are tired of being overlooked. We are important!

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jordan's King Hussein, saying it presented "a last chance" for peace in the Middle East, offered on Wednesday to negotiate with Israel in setting up an international conference "umbrella" involving the Soviet Union.

President Reagan reserved judgment on the proposal, telling reporters at a meeting with Hussein at the White House, "We have not resolved some of the differences. We are still discussing this whole matter."

But Reagan, winding up the impromptu news conference as a light rain fell on the South Lawn, agreed with Hussein that "the conditions have never been more right than they are now to pursue peace."

Hussein said he had the full approval of the Palestine Libera­ tion Organization in proposing that a joint Palestinian-Jorda­nian delegation negotiate with Israel on the basis of U.N. Secu­rity Council resolution 242.

The resolution, adopted after the 1967 Middle East war, and again after the Yom Kippur conflict of 1973, assures Israel the right to exist within secure boundaries. The Palestinians are referred to only as "refugees" without any mention of statehood aspirations.

Californians criticize Reagan tax proposal

U.S. Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., said Tuesday he likes Presi­dent Reagan's tax proposal, except for the proposed elimination of the deduction for state and local taxes.

The Democratic president pro tempore of the state Senate, David Roberti of Los Angeles, also complained about eliminating the deduction for state income taxes.

But the Republican minority leader of the state Assembly, Pat Nolan, R-Glendale, lauded Reagan's plan as parallel to his party's state effort "to have a fair and simple state tax, a flat tax."

Roberti told a reporter that "California gets to be the scape­goat state while states in other industrialized states with large service programs, will have to pay to keep the promises they have made to their citizens. At the same time, the oil companies are coming out pretty well."

Senate bill gets tough on harassment

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State Sen. Diane Watson, D-Los Angeles, said Wednesday she has been the victim of sexual harassment from other senators.

The harassment consisted of "all the kinds of comments you don't want to hear," she told reporters at a Capitol news con­ference.

Watson called the news conference to plug her bill, SB1446, to require the State Personnel Board to act faster on sexual harassment complaints from state employees, and to give the board power to initiate disciplinary action against off­fenders.

The senator, one of four women in the Senate, released a survey on sexual harassment in the state workforce, conducted by Vera Dunwoody-Miller and Dr. Barbara Gutek of the Claremont Graduate School.

The mail survey of about 1,150 state employees found that about 19 percent had been sexually harassed at work. The harassment ranged from looks or comments to demands for sexual relations. About 18 percent of those harassed are women.

Very few filed complaints, the survey found, and of those that did only 5 percent said corrective action was taken.
