Performing arts facility to be built at Poly

By Ken Miller

A new performing arts facility is scheduled to be built on the Cal Poly campus. Last week, Cal Poly President Warren Baker appointed a campus task force to look into problems associated with planning and construction, said Executive Dean Doug Gerard.

According to the initial directive issued by Baker, the task force has three functions:

- To develop a program statement for the building which addresses community needs.
- To serve as a committee of experts in negotiations with the City of San Luis Obispo and the Foundation for the Performing Arts.
- To establish a matrix that would indicate the impact university programs would have on the new facility, and relate that impact to the desires and needs that have been expressed by community groups.

According to Gerard, the Foundation for the Performing Arts Center is a non-profit organization whose primary function is to raise private money to assist in building the facility.

Warren Sinheimer, president of FPAC, said: "The money we donate will be raised by direct solicitation. We will be contacting not only individuals, but also corporations, foundations and government entities that would be interested in making grants for this activity. We're anticipating our share to be anywhere from $3 million to $5 million," he said.

"What excites me most about this project is the tremendous opportunity for the city, community, and campus to work together. This situation has no counterpart in California," Sinheimer said.

Paul Lanspery, city administrative officer, said a definite site for the facility has not been chosen. "Right now, we're comfortable discussing the master plan, which has the 1,500-seat performing arts facility adjacent to the theater," he said.

Lanspery said a parking structure will probably be built on the lot across from Vista Grande. "(The city) was hoping the facility could have been built in or near the downtown area, but after a hired consultant assessed the project's costs, we decided that a partnership with Cal Poly was the best idea," Lanspery said.

The consulting firm Hall, Goodhue, Hailey and Barker (HGHB), has facilitated discussion between Cal Poly, the Foundation, and the city.

The past 60 days have been spent drafting a letter of intent. When it's finished, it must be approved by President Baker, the City Council, and the Foundation board of community directors.

No conflict with classes

Activity hour worthwhile

By Jennifer Smagala

Students and staff agree that classes scheduled during the Thursday night activity hour don't prevent students from participating in co-curricular activities.

Out of the 4,000 classes scheduled every quarter, only 20 of those classes are held at 11 a.m. on Thursdays, said Don Coats, associate dean of Educational Services.

"We are convinced that activity hour is a worthwhile program. Co-curricular activities add a lot to students' educational program," Coats said.

Students to vote on fee hike for athletics

By Jennifer Smagala

The Student Senate unanimously approved Wednesday night to have students vote Nov. 4 and 5 on a resolution for athletic scholarship funding.

The resolution asks students to help fund athletic scholarships with a $4 student fee increase beginning fall 1987.

Tylr Hammond, author of the resolution, said the purpose of it is to let students decide whether or not they want the fee increase.

Presently, the athletics budget is made up of three sources: Instructionally Related Services (IRS), state monies and private funding. The monies from these three sources total approximately $600,000, said Athletic Director Ken Walker.

The IRA budget provides $271,000 with a $10,000 contingency fund; the state provides $60,000, and private funding — which is used strictly for scholarships — amounts to $100,000.

"As a result, athletics is in need of approximately $200,000," Walker said.

"We are in a bind because the state prohibits expenditures for grants and aid so we can't use state or IRA money for scholarships," Walker said.

Ultimately, this means private funding cannot keep up with the rising costs that inflate scholarship rewards, Walker added.

Three areas that have hurt the scholarship budget most are loss of campus athlete housing, student fee increases and Title 9 federal requirements, he said.

"Before athlete's housing was cut, we could recruit and offer to pay for students' housing because the Cal Poly Foundation paid for maintenance and custodial services which didn't affect the athletics budget," Walker said. "Now we have to pay for ATHLETICS, back page

The technology of suicide

There will one day spring from the brain of science a machine or force so fearful in its potentialities, so absolutely terrifying, that even man, the fighter, who will 되이 되어 흔들리며, 그 싸움이 펼쳐지면 그 폭격은 완전히 사라질 것이다. 그러나 자신들의 생존을 위해, 우리의 새로운 기술과 개념이 적극적인 방어와 방어성 방어를 개발할 것이다.

As it always has been in the past, when an offensive weapon is introduced, a weapon is developed to defend against it. Generally speaking, defensive weapons come in two varieties: the impeneetrable barrier version in which one builds a shield to ward off attack; and the activated defense version in which the defensive weapon destroys the offensive weapon when sufficient.

In ancient and medieval times, the impeneetrable barrier approach to defense was very successful. The Great Wall of China was finished in 210 B.C. and was not only successful in keeping out Hun invaders, it was also very successful in keeping in oppressed subjects under Emporer Shi Huang Ti's iron-fueled rule. Stone fortresses and mortar warfare. Castles were developed to defend against nuclear missiles. Activated defense now is used against offensive technologies where walls never serve any use. The problem with an activated defense system is that a certain warning time is required. As offensive technology advances, this warning time shrinks. Laterly, the present administration has adopted plans to defend itself against nuclear weapons. The Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars," would defend the nation against any one type of weapon, land-based nuclear missiles. The assumption here is that if more research is conducted in defensive weapons technology, someone out release offensive weapons technology. What is absurd here is that the technology used for SDI can also be used for offensive weapons, and it cannot be defended against. According to many prominent scientists, lasers that can be projected to destroy nuclear missiles can more easily destroy cities, oil refineries, military targets, etc. The warning time for a laser attack would be nonexistent, and therefore indefensible.

Suppose we continue on our present path. As new offensive systems are developed and warning times decrease, less time is available to assure that an attack is real and not a computer malfunction. Statistically, mutually assured destruction is guaranteed. If not this decade, perhaps the next. We are now playing Russian Roulette.

But we do have an alternative. We must realize that today war is unthinkable. By putting humanity above mere economic ideologies, a true peace can be achieved among all nations of the world. Any other path, however, will lead to certain death. To paraphrase a Chinese proverb, "If we do not put our path, we are likely to reach where we are headed." Charles Wolf is an electronic engineering senior.

parting shots

To Tipsy Taxi:

Noticed you left a woman stranded at Bull's for a few hours last weekend. That's an interesting strategy. I'm sure I'll wait until they sober up enough to drive home.

To Students:

Have you noticed that you can win a quarter's free tuition by thinking up a new name for the Ice Cream Parlour, while you only get lunch at the Spindle for coming up with the Poly Royal theme? Wonder who has more money to throw around, the Foundation or the Poly Royal Committee?

To Cal Poly:

About that odor last Sunday. What did they serve in the dining halls that night?

To Dave Garske:

So you won on the "Dating Game," huh? All that trouble just for a date! You should try Bull's on Friday around midnight.

To ASI:

Kudos on your efforts to register student voters. Now let's encourage everybody to show up at the polls in November.
Government spokesman resigns
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former newsman Bernard Kalb resigned Wednesday as chief spokesman for the State Department over a reported effort by the Reagan administration to mislead the news media on Libya.

"Faith in the word of America is the pulsebeat of democracy," Kalb told a farewell news conference. He will be succeeded by his deputy, Charles E. Redman.

Kalb, 64, held the job for nearly two years after a long career with The New York Times, CBS and NBC. He said his choice was "whether to allow myself to be absorbed in the ranks of silence, whether to vanish into unopposed acquiescence, or to enter a modest dissent."

Kalb praised Secretary of State George P. Shultz as "a monument to integrity, credibility, courage and strength."

The spokesman said he told Shultz of his decision Tuesday night. "The secretary is a man of such overwhelming integrity that he allows other people to have their own," Kalb said.

Shultz, in a statement read by Redman, said: "I am sorry to see Bernie Kalb go. I admire him as a fine journalist, respect him as a colleague and adviser, and value him as a friend. Bernie has my thanks for the job he has done and I wish him well."

The Washington Post raised the credibility issue last Thursday with a report that the administration had devised a policy that included leaking to reporters false information designed to convince Moammar Gadhafi, the Libyan leader, that the United States was about to attack his country.

Company fails to sell
Stanford firm on divesting

STANFORD (AP) — Stanford University has divested more than $362,000 worth of Diamond Shamrock Corp. stock because the company failed to sell its interest in a South African subsidiary, university officials announced.

George Pasley, director of investor relations for Diamond Shamrock, advised Stanford on Sept. 15 that an agreement in principle for the sale had been reached and a definitive agreement would be signed "in short order."

Two weeks later the mining company said some obstacles still remained, and on Oct. 6 the company said it hoped to complete the sale by Dec. 1, but indicated this was not firm.

Robert Freelan, Stanford vice president for public affairs, said the company seemed to be acting in good faith, but more than seven months had passed since Diamond Shamrock reported its intention to sell.

Prof. Richard Brody, head of the commission, said the Diamond Shamrock management had shown a "shocking attitude" toward shareholders, attacking the legitimacy of those who raised questions about its activities in South Africa.

Cal Poly business school turns away 90 percent

By Rod Santos

This fall, the School of Business accepted less than 10 percent of all freshman applicants, making Cal Poly one of the most selective business schools in the country.

Of those accepted, 90 percent applied to Cal Poly first, along with schools such as Stanford, UC Berkeley, and UCLA, said Kenneth Walters, dean of the School of Business. Two primary reasons for this overwhelming popularity are the reputation of the School of Business and the exceptional rate of job placement among its graduates.

"Being a graduate of this school looks good to potential employers," said Kristin Stansbury, president of the Cal Poly chapter of the American Marketing Association (AMA). She said that although many excellent students are being turned away, "we're getting the very brightest people. We might be missing out, but our loss is another university's gain."

Stansbury said that when she began attending Cal Poly five years ago, she knew three students with 4.0 GPA's who were turned down. "It's always been bad," she said.

Of those rejected, Stansbury said: "Most likely, they're going to go to another university. What they do with their education from there is up to them."

Stansbury said she likes to see freshmen get involved right away. "If they get involved now, they'll be ready to take on leadership roles by the time they are sophomores or juniors," Stansbury explained. AMA supports this involvement with informative welcome letters, a table at University Union Night and by speaking to freshman level business classes.

The Business Student Council encourages representatives from each of the business clubs to include their freshmen members also, said director of activities Mark Herman. "I see a lot of pride in these people — people who want to improve the school," he said.

This kind of student involvement is a major force in the strong reputation of the business school, said Herman, adding, "Whatever helps the school, helps the students in getting jobs afterwards."

The council encourages involvement from the beginning, with an "ice cream social" during WOW week. They also offer a welcome letter, Parent's Day (coming up this weekend), a barbecue, a wine and cheese party or a golf tournament.

These activities are better for the stability of the clubs, Stansbury said. "It's nice to see these motivated people; they make us all look better."

1849 federal treaty may nullify initiative

STOCKTON (AP) — A long-ignored federal treaty mandating Spanish and English as the official languages of California could pre-empt implementation of the English language initiative on the November ballot, according to state Attorney General John Van de Kamp.

The ballot measure, Proposition 63, proposes to make English the state's official language.

But Democrat Van de Kamp, in an interview published Thursday in The Stockton Record, said the treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo, virtually ignored since its signing in 1849, could void many of the proposition's requirements.

The treaty that ceded California from Mexico to the United States was made at a time when most of the state's population was Spanish-speaking. Included in the pact was a promise that all official acts and mandates English as the official language of some states.

He said history has proven that those laws were based on hysteria and that the immigrants who were targets of the laws went on to become fully integrated, English-speaking citizens.

Supporters of Proposition 63 were unavailable for comment.

EDDIE MONEY: making a comeback
Twinkie Defense examines absurdities of life

By Matt Weiser

Staff Writer

As a band with the drive and talent to create its own original material, Twinkie Defense represents a small but exciting musical subculture on the Central Coast.

Very few local bands even have the ability to get beyond cover tunes, and if they do have the appeal, are often weak and the creativity short-lived.

Although Twinkie Defense has been together officially for only four months, they have five originals recorded and four more ready to go. Guitarist and vocalist Doug Richenberg said he expects many more originals to come out soon.

All four members of the band participate in writing songs. In addition to Richenberg, the band has Steve Kindel on six- and 12-string guitars and vocals, bassist J. J. Holoubek and drummer Chris Churchill, a Cal Poly physics major.

Richenberg, a former Cal Poly soil science major, said, "Whoever writes the song comes up with the basic chord pattern, the lyrics and the structuring." Then they all sit down and work the basics into a meaningful unit, with each person developing the music for his instrument.

LOCAL BANDS

The band's influences include R.E.M., The Replacements, Talking Heads, Bob Dylan, Neil Young and Rush, and their cover music includes songs by these bands. This diversity shows up in Twinkie Defense's music. In fact, a person in the audience at the Darkroom said of Kindel: "That guy sounds like Neil Young."

"And we learned to play together playing Neil Young songs," added Kindel.

Their overall musical genre leans more toward the R.E.M. or Replacements side of the spectrum, however.

Despite the confinement of the Darkroom, Twinkie Defense came across as a strong live band. One audience member called it "inspired." Churchill plays drums forcefully; they are a strong element in the music. The two guitars have good solos and interplay. Although it didn't come through in their live performance, Holoubek can rip on the bass.

The name "Twinkie Defense," comes from the controversial legal case in which Dan White murdered Harvey Milk and San Francisco Mayor George Moscone. White was defended on the basis that he had just eaten a Twinkie and the sugar rush made him lose control of himself. The band's name and lyrics suggest a disgust for such absurdities, but not at the expense of good, entertaining music. The song "Impending Doom" is an example of this. "Lyrics are quite important to me, and catching a moment," said Richenberg. "A good song with good lyrics, every time you listen to it, is like poetry. Every time you listen to it you get something new out of it. I'm really interested in passing that along."

The words of Chris Churchill are perhaps the best news for music fans. "I've never been in a band before where I've actually gotten high off of playing music, like I do in this band. I've listened to records and gotten high off the records, but I've never gotten high off of playing music, like I do in this band. I've listened to records and gotten high off the records, but I've never gotten high performing before."

Treats up attendance

HUNTSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Students in this East Tennessee district are being treated to sundae school.

School Superintendent Ed Culver said Wednesday that students in the Scott County schools have been offered sundae school.

"We underestimated the value of a chocolate sundae. Attendance has gone berserk," said Joe Fields, the school system's special projects director.

Fields said the new program has resulted in perfect attendance by 2,450 of the system's 3,072 students for the first six weeks of school.

At the end of each six weeks, students with perfect attendance are issued coupons for gifts at banks, fast-food restaurants and other businesses, Culver said.

"Phillip's Drive-in is one of the places involved. I don't know how they are going to feel when 2,500 kids show up for sundae," he said.
Eddie Money

he's 'back from the dead,' on the road and making a comeback bid

Eddie Money performs his new hit "Take Me Home Tonight," with Ronnie Specter.

He proved a little too wild for policework; after using a piece of police teletype paper to write of a personal experience with certain controlled substances, he was bounced off the force. Mahoney then moved to Berkeley, Calif., where he played the East Bay club circuit billed as Eddie Spaghetti.

Deciding to drop a few letters from Mahoney, he became Eddie Money. Not long after, Money hooked up with legendary producer Bill Graham, landed a contract with Columbia Records and began his climb to success.

Since his early days of rock 'n' roll fame, "I have grown up a bit," Money has said. "My voice is where it belongs: not screaming my ass off, but singing."

As writer or co-writer on six of the album's ten songs, Money has created a personal statement about loneliness and redemption, about being on the outside looking in. "I am a blues singer," he has said. "There is a lot of want and anxiety in the album, but there is also a lot of hope in it too."

The Eddie Money concert is tonight 8 in the Main Gym. Greg Kihn with Jimmy Lyon will open with a special acoustic performance. Advanced student tickets are $11.50 and are available at the U.U. Ticket Office, Cheap Thrills, and Boo Boo Records. The tickets will be $12.50 at the door.

Tall tales told of Newman

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Paul Newman and the New York Post are locked in a tussle over the Blue-Eyed One's height, and there's no absence of malice.

The dispute started last week, when the Post noted on its Page Six personality column that Newman had been described in the New York Times Magazine as "a lean 5-foot-11."

"Anyone who has met Paul face to face says he has never hit 5-foot-11 except in heels," columnist Richard Johnson wrote. "Page Six hereby offers $1,000 to Newman's favorite charity or political candidate for every inch he measures over 5-foot-8 — bare foot."

Newman came back Wednesday with "something even more hardball."

He told WNBC-TV's "Live at Five" that he's willing to write the Post a $500,000 check if the verdict when the Blue-Eyed One's height, and involved in drugs, Money accidentally overdosed. He fell awkwardly on his leg and lay close to death for fourteen hours before being taken to a hospital. When he recovered, his leg had nerve damage. Fortunately, he retained his mobility.

In 1982 he made his first comeback with his "No Control" album. He said in a Rolling Stone interview before he went on tour, "Half the people in the country probably think I'm dead, but I'm not dead. I'm back."

However, since 1983, Money has been out of the limelight and has somewhat settled down. He took a break from the music world and got married. He said in a recent press release that his days of drugs and alcohol have passed and that he is ready to rock again.

"Take Me Home Tonight," a duet with Ronnie Spector, is climbing the charts and his concert here tonight marks Money's return to the frenzied concert circuit he left three years ago. Money has played at Cal Poly before, he kicked off his Royal in 1984.

Money (originally Mahoney), was born to an Irish couple in Brooklyn March 21, 1949. When he was eight years old, he was invited to play for friends and relatives at a family gathering; his performance of "My voice is where it belongs: not screaming my ass off, but singing."

Looking for a sober but not somber night at home? Want to rent a movie somewhere in the intellectual spectrum between "Citizen Kane" and "European Vacation"? Want an enjoyable movie that doesn’t insult your intelligence? Do you hate rhetorical questions? Here are three fun movies that are worth a spin:

Silverado
- Year: 1985
- Rating: 8
- Description: A very fun, exciting western that jams into one film. These include a jailbreak, a wagon train, a mean land baron, a posse, a kidnapped child, a fire, a rescue and finally a shoot out.

Valley Girl
- Year: 1983
- Rating: 9
- Description: This film manages to dodge the bullets that kill most teen movies. These include: gratuitous sex (there are no nude girl shower scenes), two-dimensional parents (as we find in most John Hughes movies), adult emotions and reactions. These are kids. They talk like kids and they act like kids.

Eating Raoul
- Year: 1983
- Rating: 8
- Description: There is only one major flaw with this movie: its title. How an enjoyable, authentic, human movie can get stuck with the nauseating name "Valley Girl," I don’t know. But this is the movie that "Pretty in Pink" tried so hard to be.

The story is a simple one: boy meets girl, they fall in love, and she is pressured by her friends to dump him because he’s different. What makes this film work so well are the actors and the characters they play. Nicholas Cage ("Birdy") is Randy, a punk with — and I emphasize this — a personality. Deborah Foreman is Julie, the valley girl who must make the decision between romance and popularity.

This film manages to dodge the bullets that kill most teen movies. These include:

- Gratuitous sex (there are no nude girl shower scenes).
- Two-dimensional parents (as we find in most John Hughes movies).
- Adult emotions and reactions. These are kids. They talk like kids and they act like kids.
- Although there is good rock music in this film, it does not degenerate into a rock video. The music is chosen to work with film (for example, when one young man is fighting with the decision of whether to approach a girl, the song "Eaten by the Monster of Love" by Sparks is played). The movie also features the great Josie Cotton musical question, "Johnny, Are You Queer?"

The only time the film stumbles is when food is thrown ("Animal House" and "The Great Race" are the only two movies where food fights have been even remotely funny), but overall it’s a terrific little movie.

Champion pepper eater can take the heat

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — Those tears streaming down Joe Marquez's face as he claimed victory over dozens of competitors weren't tears of emotion. He'd just won a contest that put his taste buds to the supreme test.

Marquez, 33, survived eight heats to take first place in last week's Pecos Valley Chile Pepper Eating Contest. In the final round, he downed seven jalapeno peppers in 30 seconds.

The contest attracted 70 entrants, who had to chew each pepper at least five times before swallowing it. Splitting a pepper out meant immediate disqualification. Less hardy gladiators fell by the wayside at hotter and hotter pods were introduced.

Marquez made it to the top by downing, in order, Santa Fe Grande, Ancho Extra Hot, Jalapeno-M, Serrano, Yellow Cascabells, Cayenne, Jalapeno Plaza and Tabasco peppers.

Each contestant had to sign a release form absolving the sponsors of responsibility for medical difficulties from the consumption of the chile peppers.

The contest attracted 70 entrants, who had to chew each pepper at least five times before swallowing it. Splitting a pepper out meant immediate disqualification. Less hardy gladiators fell by the wayside at hotter and hotter pods were introduced.

Marquez made it to the top by downing, in order, Santa Fe Grande, Ancho Extra Hot, Jalapeno-M, Serrano, Yellow Cascabells, Cayenne, Jalapeno Plaza and Tabasco peppers.

Explorer Jean-Michel Cousteau begins planned Cousteau television "World." aboard the windship Alcyone, Sunday in Santa Barbara Harbor Islands for TV sophisticated maritime equip­ pilot, without knowing what their filtning on seven of the islands will reveal.

"If we know what we are going to film in the Channel Islands— we wouldn't go," Cousteau said.

The crew, which started filming Monday on Anacapa Island, is scheduled to move to San Miguel Island on Tuesday and Santa Rosa Island toward the end of the week before finishing at Santa Cruz Island. Later, they will film on San Nicolas Island, in­ cluding Santa Catalina, San Clemente and San Nicolas.

The southernmost of the Channel Islands, San Clemente, is about 60 miles west of nor­ thern San Diego County and about 120 miles southeast of San Gabriel Island, the nnortheastern of the island group. San Gabriel Island is about 25 miles offshore from Santa Barbara.

Dundee tops box office HOLLWOOD (AP) — "Crocodile Dundee" gawed through its box-office competition for a second weekend in a row, easily chasing off "Tough Guys," the new comedy starring Burt Lancaster and Kirk Douglas.

Featuring Australian television personality Paul Hogan, "Crocodile Dundee" grossed $8.2 million to boost its two-week total in America to $19.5 million. The film is already the all-time top grosser Down Under.

Its success here is apparently due to Hogan's appeal to an au­ dience of older American men who usually don't go to the movies, according to Sidney Ganis, a vice president for Paramount, which is handling the picture in the United States.

"Tough Guys," from Touchstone, opened firmly in sec­ ond place. The action comedy about two aging train robbers grossed $2.4 million.

Paramount's "Top Gun" con­ tinued to streak toward blockbuster status, earning $2.4 million and placing third in the weekend ratings. Its 21-week cumu­ lative total is $15.7 million.

Fourth was Columbia's "Stand by Me," Columbia, $2.4 million, 844 screens, $3.1 million, nine weeks, $8 million. 5. "Children of a Lesser God," Paramount, $1.9 million, 215 screens, $1.9 million, one week.

6. "Playing for Keeps," Uni­ versal, $1.4 million, 1,148 screens, $1.4 million, one week.

8. "Ruthless People," Buena Vista, $917,166, 861 screens, $68.5 million, 14 weeks, $17 million.

NBC finishes first in Nielsen ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC finished comfortably in first place in the week's Co. ratings, but the producer of "Crime Story" was called in for questioning Thursday about the future of the network's weakest show.

"Crime Story" was NBC's only show in the bottom 10 as it prison-time programs averaged an 18.0 rating last week, com­ pared to CBS' 16.4 and ABC's 14.6.

NBC had four of the top five shows, led by "The Cosby Show" in first place, and 13 of the top 30. CBS placed first among new­ shows with "Tough Guys" finishing 18th. The show was nominated in 16 categories but won only one.

Last week's rating of 26.8 was the highest ever for "Moonlighting."

"Dallas," a top 10 show two weeks ago with a "dream" se­ quence, fell to 15th place last week and its rating of 21.6 was down 4.9 points. However, its competition on NBC, "Miami Vice," was in 24th place with a rating of 17.4, exactly the same as last week.

The top five shows last week were: "Dundee," "Cosby Show," "Family Ties," "Cheers," all of NBC, "Murder, She Wrote" on CBS and "Golden Girls" on ABC.

The rest of the top 10 included: "Night Court" on NBC, "Moonlighting" on ABC, "60 Minutes" on CBS, "The Last of the Summer Wine" on BBC and "Growing Pains" on ABC.

Two ABC shows, "Our World" and "Wheel of Fortune," tied for last place.

Barbie challenged by punked-out doll

HAWTHORNE, Calif. (AP) — This has been a tough year for Barbie, the 27-year-old queen of the doll set.

Her pre-eminence as the coun­ try's favorite female doll is fac­ ing a serious challenge by an upstart, punked-out band leader named Jen, who soared to 10th spot in October on the Toy Hot Parade — a ranking of popular U.S. toys by monthly retail sales.

Barbie clung to No. 3, behind G.I. Joe and Pound Puppies.

But Jen, who debuts in March, is forcing the normally prim Barbie — who not long ago made her first image switch from soft, white skins. "Barbie is particularly con­ cerned for the pretty seal page. She has a lot of pressures. Barbie never did that."

Earlier this year, Barbie found herself in a flap in Newfoundland because she and Mattel sug­ gested seal hunters are vicious killers of baby seals.

The dispute arose when a New­ foundlander was flipping through her daughter's Barbie Sticker Album of pictures and captions about fashion and travel.

She found an item about a Barbie trip to the Arctic that read, "Barbie is particularly con­ cerned for the pretty seal page. She has a lot of pressures. Barbie never did that."

The woman complained to a local TV station, and soon the sticker book was pulled from a west coast car dealer.

"We apologize if it has upset people," said Mattel spokesman Spencer Boise, pointing out that the album was produced by an Italian franchisee that bought the right to use the Barbie name. "It's completely atypical of Barbie to be involved in an ecological issue."
Bay Area musicians to perform

Cellist Bonnie Hampton and pianist Nathan Schwartz will present the second concert of the 1986-87 Quintessence Series on Saturday night.

Hampton and Schwartz are San Francisco-based musicians whose programs include both familiar and rarely-played works from the Classic and Romantic periods, as well as premiers of newly-commissioned works by American composers.

For the concert they will play works by Robert Schumann, Paul Hindemith (Stucke, Op. 8), and Beethoven (Sonata in C Major, Op. 102, No. 1, and Sonata in A Major, Op. 69). They will also perform a new piece, Rhapsody, by American composer Wayne Peterson.

Hampton was a student of Pablo Casals. Following her debut with the San Francisco Symphony and the Composers Forum in New York and San Francisco, Hampton and Schwartz are also members of the Francesco Trio.

The concert begins at 8 p.m. and is sponsored in part by the California Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts.

New ice cream parlor approved for Carmel

CARmel-BY-THE-SEA, Calif. (AP) — Carmel is going to have an ice cream parlor, something it hasn’t had for nearly 18 months.

A planning commission packed with appointees of Mayor Clint Eastwood approved the new business on Wednesday night.

The ice cream cone became a symbol of the ac­tor-turned-politician’s battle with the old city government when he ran for mayor. Photos of Eastwood wearing a baseball cap and licking a cone became fami­liar.

Among other things, the old regime claimed ice cream parlors would increase water use and litter.

“You better have raspberry there,” said Ken White, commis­sion chairman, after the unanimous vote to approve Michael Lajigian’s application for the parlor.

The decision, which ended 17 months of postponements, appeals and ordinance revisions and findings, was met with ap­plause from the audience.

“This is one of the happiest decisions I’ve made,” said Lajigian, who has been trying to open an ice cream parlor for 15 years.

Lajigian persevered in keeping his application alive with the city while other proposals fell by the wayside. His struggle began in May 1985 when Swensen’s closed after 15 years of operation because of a lease expiration.

In March, planning commis­sioners decided that the city’s zoning ordinance was too str­ingent and made it nearly im­possible to approve an ice cream parlor.

The commission’s decision took place before the April elec­tion in which Eastwood was elected mayor.

There were several months of inaction on a new “frozen dessert” ordinance until a vir­tually new commission appointed by Eastwood became oriented.

This is one of the happiest decisions I’ve made,” said Lajigian at Wednesday’s meeting. “He has to get on with his life.”

Airwolf’ star on trial for punching lady friend

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A jury Wednesday began de­liberations to determine whether “Airwolf” star Jan-Michael Vin­cent broke the nose of a woman friend of his Malibu home.

No verdict was reached during brief deliberations following final arguments on the lone count of felony battery. Superior Court clerk Erin Kenney said.

Chenoa Lee Ellis, 35, alleged that Vincent, 41, punched her on Sept. 6, 1985, after complaining that she was interfering with his relationship with girlfriend Joanne Robinson. Vincent and Robinson have since been mar­ried.

Ellis contended Vincent broke her nose and caused a split lip that required 16 stitches to close.

Vincent’s attorney argued that Ellis tripped over a telephone cord and fell.

Outside court Wednesday, Vincent said being a celebrity is a two-edged sword.

“There is an up side and a down side,” he said. “And this seems to be my down side.”

Frank's Famous Hot Dogs not a typical fast food joint

REVIEWED BY MARY ANNE TALBOTT

Fast food implies several things: plastic food, anonymous servers and out-of-graze. Frank's Famous Hot Dogs manages to avoid the first two, and most of the third.

Located at 12 Broad St., across the street from Lucky's Supermarket, Frank's serves up a mean selection of hot dogs, along with the usual accompaniment of fries and soft drinks. The thing that sets Frank's apart from the mass-produced feeling of a McDonald's or a Der Wienerschnitzel is the comfortable atmosphere of the place. The service is prompt, courteous and personable. The staff is small; only two or three people work behind the counter. Nobody says, "can I help you?" while wearing a striped polyester suit and a paper cap. And chances are, the same person who served you last week will serve you this week.

Frank's is small, but cheery. Most of the eating area is surrounded by windows, which gives the place a feeling of more room than it actually has. There are photos of Cal Poly Rose Parade floats on the wall, as well as a display of the various Frank's shirts on sale. But most important, the food at Frank's is really good. Hot dogs cost between $1.60 and about $2.

There are plain hot dogs as well as cheese dogs and barbecued dogs and kraut dogs. The chili dog is especially good. The Polish dog, made of a good-sized hunk of kielbasa, is a hearty meal. The hot dogs are the nice firm kind, not the bright pink, spongy variety found in the generic food sections. Frank's is generous with the toppings, too. The only problem with the famous dogs is the buns. Sometimes they come out limpy and soggy.

French fries at Frank's are the crispy, ridged kind. The fries are not soggy, but at times are a bit greasy. Fries are supposed to be greasy, though, so this is a matter of taste.

One of the best items at Frank's isn't a frank at all — it's the Monster Burger. The Monster Burger is a hearty, juicy beef patty on a nice firm bun. The burger also has lettuce, cheese, barbecue sauce, bacon and tomato, and drips all over the place when you eat it. For a scant $3.29, it's a lot of food.

Food is served to go, or in red plastic baskets. There aren't a lot of tables for eating inside, but the service is quick and the food is good. Frank's is a fast food place by definition, but in spirit it's a real food place.

A Soviet emigrant told of the harsh reality of being Jewish and living in the Soviet Union Wednesday night at Cal Poly. The emigrant also drew attention to the plight of his son, who was exiled to Siberia for wanting to leave the Soviet Union and join his family in Israel.

Fifty-year-old activist Vladimir Magarik made a one-day stop at Cal Poly before leaving to speak at the coming peace summit in Iceland. He is speaking throughout the country to make known the plight of his son and other Soviet Jews.

Magarik's presentation, which was attended by about 75 students, faculty and community members, was sponsored by the Jewish Students Association of Cal Poly and two national organizations — Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry and the North American Jewish Students Network.

Magarik and his daughter, Chana, have been biking across parts of the country and telling their story to university and college audiences as well as to political leaders. They recently completed bike rides and presentations across the Midwest, New York and Washington D.C., where they met with several congressmen and senators.

Magarik and his daughter immigrated to Israel in 1982. His ex-wife and 23-year-old son chose to stay behind.

The decision to leave the Soviet Union is not an individual choice, Magarik explained. It's a family decision which quite often is not unanimous, and contributes to the division of families. Party loyalties, patriotism and desires to remain with family and friends influence some decisions. In this case, the Magarik family was divided.

However, the majority of the emigration decisions are made by Soviet officials. It can take years of red tape and interrogations before visa applicants are given their answers, said Magarik. According to one report on the emigration process, trying to emigrate can be a process marked by constant harassment and conscious bureaucratic delays, especially for activists.

Before applying for a visa, a Jew must apply for an invitation from a relative in Israel or the U.S. in order to be considered an emigration candidate. This year alone, more than 500,000 Jews have applied for this special invitation and the majority of them have been refused by Soviet officials. Reports indicate that during the first nine months of 1986, the Soviet Union allowed only 631 Jews to emigrate, and the number will probably be held to less than 1,000 this year.

In a recent address about human rights in the Soviet Union, Secretary of State George Shultz said that the situation for Soviet Jewry is grim and getting worse.

Magarik said he knows the grimness of the situation and the difficulty of leaving it. He himself applied many times for a visa and was denied on numerous occasions. It took two-and-a-half years for him to get one, and he described the process as a real struggle.

While in the Soviet Union, Magarik earned a Ph.D. from Moscow University, and later taught math. He said that he was a respected professional until word got out that he wanted to emigrate; he was then labeled as a traitor. His colleagues harassed and interrogated him incessantly. The KGB searched for anything to hold against him, and even threatened to arrest him, he said.

"Pressure is their true intention," Magarik said. "They told me that I was earning too much money and that I was one step away from being arrested."

One year after Magarik left the Soviet Union, Alexei, Magarik's son, was married, and he and his wife applied for their emigration papers. Alexei was a talented cellist and teacher of the Hebrew language, Magarik said. He was also active in raising money to support the Zionist-Hebrew prisoners in Russia.

Yiddish rather than Hebrew is recognized by Russian authorities as the official Jewish national language. Therefore teaching Hebrew is risky, because it is not recognized as a legitimate profession, and it may not be taught or studied except at great risk.

Every six months Alexei and his wife Natasha were refused their visas, even though half of their family lived in Israel. The authorities gave them only a brief oral explanation as to why they were denied: "It is not desirable to let you go."

At the beginning of 1986, Magarik said, the authorities set Alexei up. They fabricated a drug offense by planting a small amount of hashish in his luggage and arrested him at a party for possessing and transporting drugs. Ten witnesses were ready to testify for Alexei, but Soviet justice does not work that way, Magarik said.

"It was the usual political trial," Magarik said. There was no public, just Alexei's wife, his mother and some KGB. "The dialogue was highly guarded," he added.

But Magarik received his son's statement, which he gave to the Soviet officials. Alexei said: "I am not guilty of possessing and transporting drugs. I'm sure that you do not envy me, but I do not envy you." In conclusion, Alexei warned them of God's punishment.

In spite of the fact that it was Alexei's "first offense" with drugs, that a small amount of drugs were found and that Alexei was a responsible citizen with a new family, he was penalized harshly: Alexei was exiled to Siberia for three years to one of the harshest labor camps, Magarik said.

"Alexei is constantly in transit, on train after train to many prisons," Magarik explained. His family is given little information about his welfare. "It is truly on purpose to make psychological oppression," Magarik explained. "It is a kind of torture to relatives not to give information about the plight of your relatives," he said.

"These arrests are acts of cruelty and part of a policy to influence Jewish people in the Soviet Union to stop emigration and to lose their Jewishness," he added.

"This case is typical," Magarik said. "Soviet Jews are persecuted." It is common to see SOVIET, back page.

Desperate plea

Vladimir Magarik has been biking across the country, trying to make people aware of the plight of his son and other Soviet Jews.
Cal Poly downed by aggressive Matadors
By John Samuel Baker

The Cal Poly men's soccer team lost to a quick and aggressive Cal State Northridge team 2-1 Wednesday night in a game marred by fouls and unnecessary rough play.

The fired-up Matadors scored a goal 10 minutes into the first half from five yards out off a give-and-go play in Poly's goal box, and continued to dominate the Mustangs until midway into the half.

It was then that Poly came to life and nearly got a goal when forward Dan Campbell headed in a free kick effort from sweeper Paul Wraith.

The Mustangs were inspired and dominated play until halftime.

Poly continued to control most of the play throughout the second half and was rewarded with five minutes left in the game when Quinn Allen headed in a free kick effort from sweeper Paul Wraith.

The Matadors scored the winning goal with less than a minute to play as forward John Tronson put a shot past the Mustangs' sixth and seventh runners when they go to nationals.

The front runners for the two remaining nationals spots are Sheri Minkler, Carol Gleason and freshman Colleen Donovon. The trio will race in the 15-team meet.

The Mustangs' top competition this week is likely to be UC Davis, Cal State Hayward and Cal Poly Pomona.

The Pioneers are expected to be a force on the ground.

The Mustang air attack may have to adjust its defense this week if it is to stop the option offense of Cal State Hayward.

With option quarterback Bill Neal running backs Mike Matthews, Marcus Whitten and Lee Franklin, the Pioneers are expected to be a force on the ground.

Cal Poly coach Jim Sanderson said the Pioneer defense relies on pressure andProduction for his team, and that one week is not a great deal of time to prepare for it.

"It's hard to prepare for the option in three days," he said. "Everyone has a job and there is no room for error."

Although Sanderson is looking for the Pioneers to try to gain control of the running game, he doesn't rule out the possibility they will go to the air.

"Last year they threw the ball a lot and we expected them to run," he said.

Splitting time with former quarterback Jeff Keppert last year, Neal completed 50 of 103 passes for 603 yards. The favorite receiver of the two was fullback Lonell Conner, whose 543 yards on the ground and 154 in the air made him the most powerful of the Pioneer weapons.

Conner has since gone on to graduate, which leaves Hayward without one of its premier runners from a year ago.

The Mustangs also sport a lot of new faces on the offensive and defensive lines. There is only one returning starter on the defensive line and only two on the offensive line.

Hayward remains fairly strong in the receiving department with their top two receivers returning from a year ago. Seniors JoJo Williams (15 receptions, 282 yards) and Kevin Conway (12 receptions, 242 yards) will lead the corps of Pioneer receivers.

Defensively, Hayward is expected to play a very aggressive style of defense and to blitz often. Sanderson said the Pioneer defense relies on pressure and tries to intimidate its opponents.

On the Mustang side of the ball Sanderson said he hopes his offense can continue to be effective at both running and passing the ball. Last week the Mustangs were able to pick up 215 yards in the air and 213 on the ground.

The Mustang air attack may

Glad to be back in the saddle this week due to the injuries of wide receivers Jeff Collins and Heath Owens. While Collins returned from several weeks with a bad neck, Owens was back in action after when he suffered a bruised sternum.

Sanderson said he will probably bring up a receiver from the freshman team to ensure that Cal Poly is two deep at every position. Three healthy receivers on the varsity squad are Lance Martinez (16 receptions, 361 yards), Claude Joseph (10 receptions, 118 yards) and Terrill Hill (four receptions, 40 yards). The Mustangs will also have to shuffle around their defensive backfield to compensate for the loss of Sinclair Miles, who is nursing a bad knee.

Sanderson said he plans on moving starting free safety Bobby Brandon to Miles’ cornerback position and then put Terrill Brown in the free safety spot. He said he doesn’t expect the switch of players to affect the Mustang defense.

Sanderson will also be without the services of nose guard David Moore, who will be replaced by Ken White.

Cal Poly is expected to show a little more diversity in its running game this week.

Prior to last Friday’s game against Cal Lutheran, the Mustangs relied only on the running of Jim Gleed and Cornell Williams. Friday, the Mustangs used Gleed and Williams as well as freshman Todd Henderson and senior Carlos Adams.

Henderson, who was playing his first college game on Friday, ran for 80 yards on 14 carries and was the Mustangs’ leading ground gainer.

Sanderson said he hopes the run of the week can increase the potency of quarterback Robert Perez.

“When I’ve lost the run game, I get a little more effective,” he said.

Mustang notes — Linebacker Bobby Green was awarded the Most Valuable Player in Western Football Conference’s Co-player of the Week for his performance for the second straight game against Cal Lutheran. Gallo had 12 tackles, but his three being unassisted... Quarterback Robert Perez is the second leading passer in the conference with 1,441.4 yards on 14 punts this season, which is tops in the conference... The Cal Mustangs offensive is the second most productive in the conference behind Southern Utah State Uni.

ACTIVITY
According to the Campus Administrative Manual (CAM), lecture classes are not to be scheduled during University Hour, Thursday at 11 a.m., without the expressed consent of the vice president for academic affairs. CAM does provide that activity classes which meet continually for a two-hour period or longer can hold one hour of the activity on Thursdays at 11 a.m. as long as there is another section of the class offered at some other time during the week.

"We have violated the policy to a minor extent, but the growth of the student body doesn't meet the facility capacity," said Coats. The state requires that all classrooms be used 53 hours a week at 66 percent occupancy. "Currently, we are averaging 80 percent occupancy in all of our classrooms," Coats said.

A few departments that have to schedule four and five unit classes have found it impossible to schedule a classroom at times other than 11 a.m. on Thursday, said Coats. "The department has to justify a special need to schedule a class during that hour."

"The whole reason of activity hour was for people to get out, relax and see each other as a group," said Scott Waldron, chairman of special events for the ASI Program Board.

"From a student's point of view, if there was no other time I could get a class, I would want the option of taking a class during that hour," Waldron said.

"The first thing students are here for is an education, but school is more fulfilling if you get involved," said Waldron.

"People can make a difference," Magarik explained. "We need to write to our political leaders and urge them to take action," he said. "And we must mention specific names: Alexei Magarik, Ida Nudel and Yosef Began—three of many Jewish activists in prison," he added.

Toby Goldman, president of the Cal Poly Jewish Student's Association, said that human rights everywhere are an all-encompassing issue which should affect everyone. He said, "Any compassionate, concerned person should stand up for the rights of Soviet Jews and other oppressed groups to help alleviate the lack of freedom which not all of us enjoy."

more practice to fire Jews from their jobs and put them in menial jobs. Psychological, financial and physical pressure on Soviet Jews is extensive, he said.

"The only way that I can get my son out and others like him," Magarik said, "is to get help from the west. We need to press American government and Israel to open the gates again to emigration. And Jews believe that the only force that can open those gates is the U.S."

Magarik said that the U.S. can help in several ways:
- Quiet diplomacy.
- Public opinion shaped and informed of the situation, including opinions of senators and congressmen.
- Mass media exposure of the Jewish-Soviet situation to encourage decision makers to act
- People can make a difference, Magarik explained. "We need to write to our political leaders and urge them to take action," he said. "And we must mention specific names: Alexei Magarik, Ida Nudel and Yosef Began—three of many Jewish activists in prison," he added.

The task committee's report states that for the 17 sports to remain competitive, the department will have to offer 91.5 scholarships at $4,850, which is 50 percent of the NCAA scholarship allowance. The extra $250,000 called for will go toward paying for these scholarships, said Walker.

If the Athletic Scholarship Referendum is not passed, some teams will be dropped into Division III competition, which is a non-scholarship program. If there are no leagues within the division for certain sports to compete against, the sports may be cut, said Walker.

Paraplegic saves her baby daughter
EL MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — A paraplegic mother, seeing her baby's head bobbing in the water, rolled her wheelchair into the family swimming pool, rescued the child and breathed life back into her.

Cindy Dunlop and her daughter, Kyla, 17 months old, were treated and released Tuesday at St. Mary Desert Valley Hospital after being found at the family's home here, 60 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

Dunlop and her daughter were in the back yard of their home about 9:30 a.m. when the telephone rang. Dunlop, who was paralyzed from the chest down during an auto accident 11 years ago, wheeled into the garage to answer it.

She heard a splash and looked out to see her daughter's blond head bobbing in the water. Then Dunlop charged the swimming pool.

"I don't know how I did it," she said Wednesday. "When I saw her in the pool, I just went for her."

Kyla was motionless when a doctor cleaned and bandaged her two-year-old. She was wheeled into the pool while remaining herself in her chair and started to breathe life back into the child.

She hoisted the baby onto her lap and breathed life back into her.
