Hearst Castle brings trade to San Simeon

By C. Barks
Staff Writer
Second in a series.

Hearst San Simeon State Historical Monument attracts more visitors per year than any other single location in California, with the exceptions of Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Disneyland, according to the State Department of Parks and Recreation.

San Simeon, a small village about five minutes south of Hearst Castle along Highway 1, directly benefits from this influx of people, said a San Simeon Chamber of Commerce representative.

"San Simeon is basically two or three blocks of hotels that are here to house the tourists, and some restaurants that are here to feed them," she said. "Pretty much everything that's grown up around here business-wise revolves around the castle."

Located almost exactly halfway between Los Angeles and San Francisco, the town is a popular stop for people who are touring the coast, she said. However, if the Hearst Castle tours should suddenly cease, "it would be very questionable whether the town could keep going," she said.

One of the drawbacks of being so near the castle is that the town has difficulty connecting as a community, she said.

"People get so involved in serving the tourists that sometimes we forget that we're a community — that's something that could be worked on."

However, the local merchants are certainly very appreciative of the money generated by Hearst Castle tourists. A San Simeon liquor store employee, who asked to remain anonymous, said, "Without Hearst Castle, this business would probably go broke. It's the tourists who spend the most money."

San Simeon business people aren't the only ones who are happy about the popularity of the castle. According to the State Department of Parks and Recreation, it is the only facility they operate that returns a significant amount of money to the state's general fund.

A guide at the monument, Denise Whaley, said that William Randolph Hearst spent about $5 million building and furnishing it. Today, the state of California estimates it would cost between $50 million and $60 million to replicate, not including the artwork, which is of incalculable value. According to Whaley, it cost about $6.3 million to operate the monument last year.

Attendance figures for 1984-1985 put the number of people who have visited Hearst Castle at 17,210,384 since its opening in 1958.

Campaign financing rejected by ASI

By Jennifer Smagala
Staff Writer

Student leaders decided last summer not to accept $3,000 from the Administration to fund an information campaign for the upcoming athletic scholarship referendum because they were worried about the ASI image.

"When you put a lot of money into a campaign, students find it hard to differentiate between an information campaign and a snow job," said Kevin Swanson, ASI president.

Students will vote Nov. 4 and 5 on whether to help fund athletic scholarships with a $4 student fee increase.

Swanson said that even if ASI received the money, he would be reasonably certain that the campaign would run unbiased. However, he said, "if we accept money from the Administration, students may feel we are being controlled by the university."

Swanson explained that the difference between accepting money from the Administration to run the campaign and using student money is that the Administration has made a public statement favoring the referendum, and ASI has not.

ASI Vice President Stan Van Vleck said, "The Administration never made a public statement on the issue. (Cal Poly) President (Warren) Baker said that he supported the task committee's recommendation for the fee increase if the students want it."

"Last spring, Michael Mendes, former ASI president, and I worked to get the money from the Administration. The money was offered in a verbal agreement to the students with 'no strings attached,'" Van Vleck said.

Swanson made the decision not to accept the money after consulting some members of his executive committee.

Solving housing disputes

Court may be the answer

By Jerry McKay
Staff Writer

Students moving into new apartments fall quarter may not think ahead to the time when they check out in spring, but it would be to their advantage to do so, according to Cal Poly Housing Director Robert Bostrom.

Tenants who believe their landlords have unfairly withheld charges from their cleaning or security deposit should challenge those charges either face-to-face or in small claims court, said Bostrom.

San Luis Obispo attorney John Ronca, Jr. said tenants are entitled to a full refund of their deposits or an itemized list of deductions either face-to-face or in small claims court, said Bostrom.

Robert Bostrom.

Tenants who believe their landlords have unfairly withheld charges either face-to-face or in small claims court, said Bostrom.

"Without Hearst Castle, this business would probably go broke. It's the tourists who spend the most money."

San Simeon business people aren't the only ones who are happy about the popularity of the castle. According to the State Department of Parks and Recreation, it is the only facility they operate that returns a significant amount of money to the state's general fund.

A guide at the monument, Denise Whaley, said that William Randolph Hearst spent about $5 million building and furnishing it. Today, the state of California estimates it would cost between $50 million and $60 million to replicate, not including the artwork, which is of incalculable value. According to Whaley, it cost about $6.3 million to operate the monument last year.

Attendance figures for 1984-1985 put the number of people who have visited Hearst Castle at 17,210,384 since its opening in 1958.

Campaign financing rejected by ASI

By Jennifer Smagala
Staff Writer

Student leaders decided last summer not to accept $3,000 from the Administration to fund an information campaign for the upcoming athletic scholarship referendum because they were worried about the ASI image.

"When you put a lot of money into a campaign, students find it hard to differentiate between an information campaign and a snow job," said Kevin Swanson, ASI president.

Students will vote Nov. 4 and 5 on whether to help fund athletic scholarships with a $4 student fee increase.

Swanson said that even if ASI received the money, he would be reasonably certain that the campaign would run unbiased. However, he said, "if we accept money from the Administration, students may feel we are being controlled by the university."

Swanson explained that the difference between accepting money from the Administration to run the campaign and using student money is that the Administration has made a public statement favoring the referendum, and ASI has not.

ASI Vice President Stan Van Vleck said, "The Administration never made a public statement on the issue. (Cal Poly) President (Warren) Baker said that he supported the task committee's recommendation for the fee increase if the students want it."

"Last spring, Michael Mendes, former ASI president, and I worked to get the money from the Administration. The money was offered in a verbal agreement to the students with 'no strings attached,'" Van Vleck said.

Swanson made the decision not to accept the money after consulting some members of his executive committee.

Solving housing disputes

Court may be the answer

By Jerry McKay
Staff Writer

Students moving into new apartments fall quarter may not think ahead to the time when they check out in spring, but it would be to their advantage to do so, according to Cal Poly Housing Director Robert Bostrom.

Tenants who believe their landlords have unfairly withheld charges from their cleaning or security deposit should challenge those charges either face-to-face or in small claims court, said Bostrom.

San Luis Obispo attorney John Ronca, Jr. said tenants are entitled to a full refund of their deposits or an itemized list of deductions either face-to-face or in small claims court, said Bostrom.

Robert Bostrom.

Tenants who believe their landlords have unfairly withheld charges either face-to-face or in small claims court, said Bostrom.

"Without Hearst Castle, this business would probably go broke. It's the tourists who spend the most money."

San Simeon business people aren't the only ones who are happy about the popularity of the castle. According to the State Department of Parks and Recreation, it is the only facility they operate that returns a significant amount of money to the state's general fund.

A guide at the monument, Denise Whaley, said that William Randolph Hearst spent about $5 million building and furnishing it. Today, the state of California estimates it would cost between $50 million and $60 million to replicate, not including the artwork, which is of incalculable value. According to Whaley, it cost about $6.3 million to operate the monument last year.

Attendance figures for 1984-1985 put the number of people who have visited Hearst Castle at 17,210,384 since its opening in 1958.
Who's fault was the failure of the summit?

Ted Castle, mathematics sophomore:

I believe Gorbachev went at it the wrong way. He expected too much. He was dreaming if he thought he could get Reagan to cancel SDI.

Adam Collazo, mathematics freshman:

I think it was Ronald Reagan's fault. He would not relent on SDI. I think if he had made some concessions on SDI he would have gotten a lot further.

Martha Crosley, child development and family studies senior:

I don't think it was anybody's fault. I don't think either side was prepared to do what they were supposed to do. I don't think our president prayed through the situation.

Brian Chamberlain, natural resources management sophomore:

I think it's both their faults. Neither one seems like they're really going to give anything up. They both expected the other side to give something up, but they refused to do so themselves.

Athletes should take drug tests

REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK
Elmer Ramos

Later this fall, teams fortunate enough to reach the NCAA championships will be subject to random drug testing. Colleges with players that test positive to drugs will face major sanctions that could cripple their athletic programs.

Drug testing is a much-needed component in the NCAA's efforts to clean up college athletics and restore integrity to an institution blatantly scarred by recent and highly-publicized misdeeds.

College athletics has been rocked by allegations of boosters paying athletes and teachers letting players slide through class. Coaches have been caught trying to lure prep athletes with promises of cash, girlfriends and BMWs.

Now the presence of drugs is threatening to corrupt college athletics even further. The combination of sports and drugs is a can of worms, and as each case arises, college athletics receives a black mark.

Let's face it. Athletes usually are a college's most visible entity — its ambassadors. When many people think of Oklahoma, they think, "Great football team. What a running attack." And a lot of people's only recollection of Georgetown is that it is the school for which Patrick Ewing played.

Simply put, the image and reputation of many schools, especially the athletic powerhouses, ride on the actions of their athletes.

Athletes also are an investment. Each year, colleges dole out millions of dollars — from tuition to alumni and booster-club donations — to support their teams. Many are not getting a worthy return.

A lot of students not on a college team have problems getting through the situation.

Each school is beginning to live in a place that does not know how to handle being a "college town."

Last weekend I was at a party that, needless to say, was broken up before it got started. This is not to say that a couple of policemen came by and asked us to turn down the music, or even warn us of their intentions. Instead, five police cars turned up and demanded that everyone leave or the occupants of the house could be charged with criminal offenses. And the scene is set weekend after weekend so that now it is not worth investing money in a friendly get-together.

It seems contradictory that when we drive downtown we see the banners welcoming Cal Poly back to school (realizing that Cal Poly is how San Luis Obispo survives), yet we choose to confine us. To be realists, in any area with a large student population allowances have to be made for this group. Cal Poly certainly has a say in the bureaucracy of this town — don't you think it is time to do something?

JULIE HORN
Health Center pleased to receive student input

Health Center pleased to receive student input

Editor — This letter is in response to John C. Zuchelli's letter (Oct. 8) concerning the Student Health Advisory Council (SHAC). I am very interested in student input concerning the facility.

The Wellness Decathlon provided a unique opportunity for Cal Poly students. Instead of students having to travel to the Health Center, a portion of the Health Center was taken to them in the University Union. The Wellness Decathlon is held twice per academic year, is much more than mere wellness education and does not "nearly close" the said vital facility.

Should Zuchelli or any other student feel disgruntled with the Health Center or its services I urge you to attend any SHAC meeting which is held every Tuesday. Likewise, should any student have compliments concerning the Health Center, or wish to find out more about SHAC and how you can become involved with the Health Center, I urge you to attend as well.

LOUIS T. ELLIS
SHAC Vice Chairman

letters to the editor

Students are not being treated fairly in SLO

Editor — Something really bad is happening in San Luis Obispo and it is time for Cal Poly to realize it. We are beginning to live in a place that does not know how to handle being a "college town."

Last weekend I was at a party that, needless to say, was broken up before it got started. This is not to say that a couple of policemen came by and asked us to turn down the music, or even warn us of their intentions. Instead, five police cars turned up and demanded that everyone leave or the occupants of the house could be charged with criminal offenses. And the scene is set weekend after weekend so that now it is not worth investing money in a friendly get-together.

It seems contradictory that when we drive downtown we see the banners welcoming Cal Poly back to school (realizing that Cal Poly is how San Luis Obispo survives), yet we choose to confine us. To be realists, in any area with a large student population allowances have to be made for this group. Cal Poly certainly has a say in the bureaucracy of this town — don't you think it is time to do something?

JULIE HORN

Health Center pleased to receive student input

Editor — This letter is in response to John C. Zuchelli's letter (Oct. 8) concerning the Student Health Advisory Council (SHAC). I am very interested in student input concerning the facility.

The Wellness Decathlon provided a unique opportunity for Cal Poly students. Instead of students having to travel to the Health Center, a portion of the Health Center was taken to them in the University Union. The Wellness Decathlon is held twice per academic year, is much more than mere wellness education and does not "nearly close" the said vital facility.

Should Zuchelli or any other student feel disgruntled with the Health Center or its services I urge you to attend any SHAC meeting which is held every Tuesday. Likewise, should any student have compliments concerning the Health Center, or wish to find out more about SHAC and how you can become involved with the Health Center, I urge you to attend as well.

LOUIS T. ELLIS
SHAC Vice Chairman

letters to the editor

Students are not being treated fairly in SLO

Editor — Something really bad is happening in San Luis Obispo and it is time for Cal Poly to realize it. We are beginning to live in a place that does not know how to handle being a "college town."

Last weekend I was at a party that, needless to say, was broken up before it got started. This is not to say that a couple of policemen came by and asked us to turn down the music, or even warn us of their intentions. Instead, five police cars turned up and demanded that everyone leave or the occupants of the house could be charged with criminal offenses. And the scene is set weekend after weekend so that now it is not worth investing money in a friendly get-together.

It seems contradictory that when we drive downtown we see the banners welcoming Cal Poly back to school (realizing that Cal Poly is how San Luis Obispo survives), yet we choose to confine us. To be realists, in any area with a large student population allowances have to be made for this group. Cal Poly certainly has a say in the bureaucracy of this town — don't you think it is time to do something?

JULIE HORN

Health Center pleased to receive student input

Editor — This letter is in response to John C. Zuchelli's letter (Oct. 8) concerning the Student Health Advisory Council (SHAC). I am very interested in student input concerning the facility.

The Wellness Decathlon provided a unique opportunity for Cal Poly students. Instead of students having to travel to the Health Center, a portion of the Health Center was taken to them in the University Union. The Wellness Decathlon is held twice per academic year, is much more than mere wellness education and does not "nearly close" the said vital facility.

Should Zuchelli or any other student feel disgruntled with the Health Center or its services I urge you to attend any SHAC meeting which is held every Tuesday. Likewise, should any student have compliments concerning the Health Center, or wish to find out more about SHAC and how you can become involved with the Health Center, I urge you to attend as well.

LOUIS T. ELLIS
SHAC Vice Chairman
House passes immigration bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed a bill Wednesday to slow the influx of illegal aliens with a carrot-and-stick program of amnesty for those with roots and penalties for employers who hire undocumented workers.

The compromise legislation, written by a conference committee, went to the Senate after the 238-173 vote.

"It isn't the Sistine Chapel, but it's not a bad paint job," said Rep. Dan Lungren, R-Calif., who played a major role in writing the bill.

The bill had been forced off the House floor late last month in an embarrassing procedural defeat that left sponsors pronouncing it dead.

But with nearly 5,000 aliens apprehended on a typical day, not to speak of those who elude U.S. Border Patrol and other authorities, sponsors resuscitated the legislation within the last week.

A determined band of legislators was bent on getting an immigration bill passed despite the rapidly approaching Nov. 4 elections and the rush to adjournment. These lawmakers led conference talks which produced a compromise version of the bill.

Bomb injures 40 in Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP) — A bomb exploded Wednesday night near the Wailing Wall in the Old City of Jerusalem, injuring about 40 people, Israeli television said.

The television report said the explosion took place near the Wailing Wall in the mostly Palestinian East Jerusalem. It said most of the injured were taken to Hadassah Hospital, and police were searching the Old City area.

Moshe Dayan, a spokesman for Magen David, the Israeli Red Cross, told The Associated Press: "There has been an explosion. Many people have been injured."

Man wins libel suit against Soviet Union

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A California businessman who won an unprecedented $450,000 libel judgment against the Soviet Union received a go-ahead Wednesday from a federal magistrate to begin seizing Soviet assets in the United States.

Attorney Gerald Kroll, representing Raphael Gregorian, said he would move within the next two weeks to attach unspecified Soviet holdings in the United States unless Soviet officials changed their minds and pay Gregorian.

"We are fine-tuning our targets," Kroll said. "We want our first effort to be a success."

He declined to say which Soviet assets would be the first on his list, but said the possibilities include bank accounts held by the Soviet Union in the United States as well as companies which they operate, including a Milwaukee, Wis., tractor factory.

Gregorian, 56, who operated a medical supply company in the Soviet Union for 14 years, was expelled in 1984 and was accused in the Soviet press of being a spy.

Gregorian took the unusual step of suing the Soviet government and its newspaper, Izvestia, for libel. His suit sought $10 million in damages and payment for medical supplies which were delivered before his expulsion.

Now Open

The Morro Rock Cafe

8 pm to 1 am

$5 cover charge / $3 from 8-9 pm

Wed. night - New Wave

Advance tickets at Boo Boo's & Morro Rock

Thurs. night - College Night - $3 with ID

Friday night - Dance to DJ music

Saturday night - IN CONCERT - Hunters & Collectors

8 pm show, tickets at the door $12.50

for Morro Information call 544-7500

corner of Marsh & Morro, SLO

VUARNETS & WAYFARERS

20% OFF

Patrini SHOES

Choose from our vast selection of dress or casual shoes at 15.88 and receive $3 off. One coupon per person per store visit. Good thru October 30, 1986.

Patrini SHOES

LEATHER SPORT BOOT reg. 19.86
The perfect boot to get you around the campus and back! Comfortable unit bottom with stylish strap and buckle. Black in women's sizes.

$3 OFF Patrini

WOMEN'S DESIGNED SHOES

Madonna Rd. at Hwy. 101 (Madonna Rd. Plaza)
Afghan leader presides over withdrawal of Soviet troops

SHINDAND, Afghanistan (AP) — Communist Party chief Najibullah threw flower petals at about 1,500 members of a Soviet tank regiment who clanked away in a dusty column yesterday on their long and well-publicized trip home.

The departure from a parched basin in this region near the Iranian frontier began the withdrawal of about 8,000 of the estimated 115,000 Soviet soldiers who help the communist government fight Moslem guerrillas.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev promised the pullout in July, during a speech in Vladivostok. Moscow has conceded that Afghan government forces are much stronger now than when it sent the first troops to Kabul in December 1979.

Western diplomats in Afghanistan say the withdrawal is insignificant, a gesture timed to ward off criticism during annual U.N. debate on the Afghan war later this year.

Soviet officials call it a symbol of Kremlin willingness to achieve a political settlement in Afghanistan. They say a complete pullout is not possible until the United States, Pakistan and other countries stop supplying political support and weapons to the Moslem guerrillas.

Publicity about the withdrawal began immediately after Gorbachev’s announcement and culminated this week in a carefully supervised visit to Afghanistan for about 100 foreign journalists, most of them from the Soviet Union and its East European allies.

The seven-day tour was arranged in Moscow by the Soviet Foreign Ministry and Afghan officials.

Visiting reporters are allowed almost no independent movement, but the visit has provided a rare glimpse of life since the 1978 communist revolution plunged government forces and Moslem rebels into a war that many observers feel neither side can win. Afghanistan normally is closed to Western journalists.

Najibullah was dressed in green fatigues for the heroes’ sendoff given the tank soldiers. He declared the occasion “a historic day for Afghanistan.”

The 38-year-old leader told the departing troops the years after the coup in April 1978 were “a difficult and black period of our revolution,” but government forces had grown stronger with the Soviets’ help.

Only Löwenbräu is brewed in the world’s great beer drinking countries. Brewed in Munich, in England, Sweden, Canada, Japan, and here in America. Only Löwenbräu, by license and authority must use Bavarian Hallertau hops and be checked for flavor and quality by the brewmasters of Löwenbräu, Munich. Only Löwenbräu gives you 600 years of Bavarian heritage in one smooth American beer.

THIS WORLD CALLS FOR LOWENBRAU.

calendar

thursday 16

* The Escape Route will hold a leadership workshop at 11 a.m. Thursday in the Craft Center Gallery. Basic communication and leadership skills will be taught.

* The Fellowship of Active Christian Thinkers (FACT) will sponsor a multi-media “Rock and Roll Seminar” at 11 a.m. and 4 and 7 p.m. Thursday in Chumash Auditorium.

friday 17

* The Rodeo Club will sponsor a fall rodeo at 6 p.m. in Collett Arena. Admission is $2 for students, children and senior citizens and $4 for the public.

* ASI Outings will sponsor the following events on Friday, Saturday and Sunday: a beginning caving seminar to Sequoia National Park, a bicycle tour in King’s Canyon National Park, dayhiking at Mineral King National Park, a breakfast bicycle ride to The Custom House, and a brunch outing at Spyglass Inn. Signups are available in the Escape Route, University Union Room 112.

Submissions contributed for consideration for publication in Calendar must be received by noon two days prior to the event.

* The Escape Route will hold a leadership workshop at 11 a.m. Thursday in the Craft Center Gallery. Basic communication and leadership skills will be taught.

* The Fellowship of Active Christian Thinkers (FACT) will sponsor a multi-media “Rock and Roll Seminar” at 11 a.m. and 4 and 7 p.m. Thursday in Chumash Auditorium.

friday 17
Longer life-spans will result in higher costs to society

America is getting older, not just as a nation but as a population. With birth rates dropping and life expectancy increasing, the number of elderly in the nation will be rising dramatically in the near future.

Growing old is a frightening prospect for many people, and their fears are not irrational. As the percentage of people over 65 increases, so will the costs to society of supporting this percentage.

According to the Population Reference Bureau's 1986 World Population Data Sheet, 12 percent of the U.S. population is now over 65. The current rate of population growth is 0.7 percent, and children born today can be expected to live 75 years on the average.

Sociology professor Harold Kerbo said a major result of this increased elderly population will be higher medical and Social Security expenses. But further funding increases may be difficult to handle. The Social Security System is already the second largest budget item in the nation, behind only the military.

"I'm of the baby boom generation," Kerbo said. "I'm in my 30s, and I'll be retiring in 2020 or something like that. At that point there will be so many of the baby boom generation retiring that it's going to be a drastic strain on the Social Security system if something isn't done."

By the time this happens, several changes will occur to help society adjust to the increased costs. For example, the retirement age will be raised to 70 or more to slow down the retirement boom, Kerbo predicted.

The Social Security Administration will have to drain more money from the non-retired working population to compensate for the needs of the elderly, Kerbo said. Currently, three workers pay for every two workers. This ratio will drop to two to one, he said. "They'll have to take much more money from these two workers."

Social Security will continue to grow because the elderly are becoming a very strong political force. Kerbo said. Older people simply have a higher percentage of voter turnout in relation to the rest of the population. Their numbers are seen as an asset by politicians, who may be giving the elderly a larger ear.

Their political influence has been used to get what they need: a stronger social care system. As a political group, the elderly have been able to not only prevent cutbacks in the Social Security budget, but to expand it. As a result, the elderly are now the only category of people in which the poverty level has actually been decreasing, Kerbo said. Only 15 years ago the situation was reversed and the elderly had one of the highest rates of poverty in the nation.

Retired in society

As people retire, they take with them a desire for relaxation and an easier way of life. Unfortunately, this only compounds the health care problem. "Retirement has really not helped people," Kerbo said. "Their health deteriorates usually after they retire."

John Hampton, a biological sciences professor who teaches a class on aging, agreed. He noted a "bump" in the death rate shortly after retirement. The cause, he said, is a lack of opportunities to contribute to society after retirement, which leads to physical and mental debilitation. "People who are mentally active live longer," he added.

Kerbo said the medical system is the primary cause of the increase in the percentage of elderly in society because medicine is allowing people to live much longer. As a result, society must change the way that it looks at old people. It is better both for society and the elderly if they have a chance to be more productive, he said.

Philosophy professor Laurence Houlgate said older people simply need to be allowed the chance to contribute. As opportunities for self worth, these chances are very important. "I'd object to the idea that the only use a person has is economic," he said. "The notion of the usefulness of a person goes far beyond their economic contribution. Just by being a good grandmother, for example — that, to me, is probably an even better contribution to society."

According to Ann Morgan, a psychologist and human development professor, some rather drastic changes will have to take place before the elderly can be seen as legitimate contributors to society. She said society ignores things that primarily affect older people. "I'm convinced we discriminate against the elderly," she said.

Quality of life may suffer as result of prolonging life

Before more research dollars are funneled into prolonging life for the elderly, society needs to consider questions about whether science and medicine should tamper with the processes that control death and lifespan, whatever they may be.

The 1986 World Population Data Sheet says that medicine is simply another belief system, said Virginia McCoy of the First Church of Christ, Scientist in San Luis Obispo. Some people believe in the power of God to heal. Others believe in the power of medicine. Christian Scientists believe that spiritual means and mental and moral change will heal the body.

Laurence Houlgate, a Cal Poly philosophy professor, said that extending life often means prolonging suffering. He said society has to come to terms with the fact that in prolonging the lifespans of the elderly, not much is done to deal with the quality of their lives. They may still go on to live a life of neglect and psychological and physical pain.

"Are we supposed to place such a high value on the preservation of life that it is worth more to us to preserve life than the quality of the life itself?"

The natural law viewpoint is that man is never supposed to directly intend anyone's death; one of the primary values that man is supposed to promote in the world is the preservation of human life. Based on this, medicine is doing the right thing.

Natural law is a set of moral standards prescribed by the philosopher Plato about 2,400 years ago, which is still the foundation for much ethical thought today.

Extraordinary means may be withdrawn if it is felt that the quality of the person's life is going to suffer in the long run. Examples of this are a respirator or a heart-lung machine.

Ordinary means may not be withdrawn under any circumstances. An example of ordinary means would be by continually pumping up and down on their chest," said Houlgate. "There's no technology in that at all. Well, after a while my arms are going to give out and I'm not going to be able to do it. But I'm not to blame if I stop."

On the other hand, there is nothing in natural law that obligates science to prolong human life. But in prolonging life, society is obligated morally to guarantee a reasonable quality of life, Houlgate said.

C.A. Lundy, in his book "The Life Entity," describes life as "that which we call intellect... and thus brings to the brain the understanding that enables the eye to see, the ear to hear, the tongue to taste, the mind to reason and proclaim its conclusions. It is these things that could, perhaps, be described as amounting to a reasonable quality of life."
AGING

From page 5
Morgan pointed to the medical field as an example of this discrimination. She said the emphasis is in the wrong place, in that medical research dollars are being diverted from the elderly. Society sees the diseases of the elderly as unimportant because their life is near its end anyway. Diseases such as AIDS are seen as more pressing to society as a whole, she said. But if diseases affecting the elderly could be cured through more research, a great resource of elderly people could return to society as productive members, and the health care costs for the elderly would be dramatically reduced.

Although those over 65 represent 12 percent of the population, one third of the $387 billion spent on health care in 1984 went to their group, according to an article in the October issue of Omni magazine. By the year 2000, 2 million people will be in nursing homes, up from 1.2 million in 1980, and $200 billion will be spent on health care for the aged.

"I'm saying we don't need more nursing homes," said Morgan. "We need more research to eliminate the diseases that are putting people in nursing homes." Kerbo, however, said: "The ones that are the most important diseases right now, with the exception of AIDS, are the diseases that are affecting the elderly more than anybody else. The money is where it should be."

Very soon, society will have to deal with the changes that an enlarged retired population will bring. This will have to include a close look at the role of the elderly and an examination of society's duty toward the group that will perhaps have the most potential for change in the near future.

MEDICINE

From page 5
Elaine Holder, a psychology professor who teaches a class on the psychology of death, said, "The big question becomes 'When do you draw the line?' When do you say it's time to quit?" She said this point is reached when the quality of life is lost and the search for continued life should end, he said.

"Medicine has a duty to look at the changes that an enlarged retired population will bring. This will have to include a close look at the role of the elderly and an examination of society's duty toward the group that will perhaps have the most potential for change in the near future.

Professors recite protest poetry

By Julie A. Williams

Seven Cal Poly professors from the English and foreign language departments read their own poetry in honor of World Poetry Day in front of a packed Chumash Auditorium Wednesday.

"Poetry of Protest" was the theme of the forum, the idea being that poetry is often the conscience of the people, said Gordon Curzon, an English professor and chairman of the event.

"Poetry has been addressed to various wrongs," Curzon said. There have been poems regarding the women's movement, civil rights, religious efforts and the anti-war movement, he said, adding, "Poetry has been used to express the deepest of feelings and grievances."

Many of the poems concerned AIDS victims, the Central American situation, and one was about a professor's mother. Also, several poems were written and read in Spanish, to emphasize the worldwide appeal of poetry.

Bill Estes, head of the foreign language department, said, "Writing in Spanish is probably the most profound protest of all. I consider myself a Chicano poet, even though I'm not Chicano."

As people sat in the aisles against the wall, the first speaker, Alurista, said language can't survive without society and society can't survive without language. Alurista is the pen name of a foreign language department instructor; it is how he wishes to be known.

English professor Angela Estes said she believes that all poems are poems of protest, and "every poem about one's mother is a protest poem, even a love poem."

Professor Gloria Trevino of the foreign language department wrote a poem about a young Latino man who was dying of AIDS. "The man is full of solitude and anger at the Latino society which refuses to accept people that are different," she said.

As the speakers sat in the front row, intensely listening with tilted heads and crossed arms, Sauny Dills, English professor and graduate student said, "Almost all poetry is a protest against silence."

Herman Castillo of the foreign language department and Waine Pounds of the English department also gave readings in Spanish. "I wanted to get people to think," said Curzon, who is the editor of the California State Poetry Society magazine and creator of the World Poetry Day theme.

In addition to the fight for human rights, Amnesty International and the anti-apartheid movement have been subjects of poetry of protest.

SDI used as campaign tool

Baltimore (AP) — President Reagan appealed to a Republican crowd on Wednesday not to allow congressional opponents of his "Star Wars" defense agenda to "chop up America's meat-axe and chop up America's meat-axe and chop up America's meat-axe". Reagan said that the Strategic Defense Initiative, which is exactly what Mr. Gorbachev is hoping the Congress won't do."

CAREERS FOR ENGINEERS

(IE, EE, EL, ME)

Proctor & Gamble Manufacturing is coming to Cal Poly from Modesto, CA to conduct a presentation on Technical Management careers for engineers. The presentation is at 7 PM on Thursday, October 16th in the Staff Dining Room C.

Representatives will also be on campus November 12th for interviews.
For most students, the State Academic Senate may sound like a distant political body. In fact, Cal Poly has its own academic senate and three faculty members who serve as senators on the State Academic Senate. Although State Academic Senate meetings are held off campus, decisions reached by the senate can have direct impact on faculty and staff on this campus.

Each CSU may have a campus academic senate which is composed of faculty representatives from each school and from other campus organizations. The local senate sends opinions and resolutions through the senators who serve on the campus academic senate.

The Senators

Joe Weatherby, a political science professor who was a state senator in the late 1970s and early 1980s, took a break because he said at Cal Poly there is an unofficial policy not to run for more than two consecutive terms. Now he is back heading the constituency committee and is also running for faculty trustee — the only faculty member to serve on the Board of Trustees. He has in the past chaired the faculty affairs committee, was secretary of the state senate, served on the state executive committee and chaired the committee to rewrite the state senate's constitution.

"I think you have to feel you have something to offer, in the sense that you have some ideas of how to make things better," he said.

The newest senator on the block, political science professor Reg Gooden, chaired the campus senate for the 1984-85 term. He said he was drawn into serving on the state senate. "It was one of those times when I was interested in the issues and as a result of serving as chair of the local senate, it was just a propitious time," he said. He began his term September 1985, and like all senators, will serve a three-year term.

Being a state senator takes time, so elected senators are granted release time. The state buys the equivalent of one course from each senator so they do not have to cut corners in either their teaching or in their preparation for the senate meetings. Gooden said he thinks state senators may be better prepared than their colleagues at the local level because of the release time.

The Issues

Kersten, Gooden and Weatherby are hoping to clarify certain issues and procedures within the state senate this academic year. Each campus has its own targeted issues, some of which can lead to volatile discussions within the senate. The state senate decides upon blanket rules and procedures, but many issues are referred back to individual campus for appropriate interpretation according to the student make-up and program structure.

A very touchy issue is the one of separating rank from salary. Currently, when a professional from industry is hired to teach at a university, he enters under the rank of assistant professor and assumes the corresponding salary. Gooden said the problem now is that in some fields such as computer science and engineering, industry can offer considerably more money.

"Now the university is up against the situation if they can't hire somebody at the salary the market is offering or the temptation is to bring him in at a professor," he said. Such a person would not have the other qualifications to be a professor such as the research record, publications or the teaching experience. A solution to the problem could be to hire an expert from outside to teach as an assistant professor but give him professor's salary.

The faculty is very uncomfortable with this," Gooden said. "On one level they want to discuss it objectively, but the Board of Trustees has made it an item for bargaining. It makes for a very frustrating and awkward problem. Should the market determine the salary? And don't you run the risk of having the market determine the curriculum?"

He added that if salary were to be determined by the market, there would be a conflict between departments as an engineer could command a higher salary in industry than could a historian. "We're under tremendous pressure (to decide this issue) because the market does dictate," but on the other hand you don't want to say that the market should set the values for society.

The issue of what constitutes an item for collective bargaining is one that needs to be clarified. Gooden said when the faculty organized and selected a representative unit, the California Faculty Association, it began using the CFA to bargain with the Board of Trustees in matters of employment condition and salary.

The legislation that allowed the CFA to perform this function allows for the academic senate to have jurisdiction over some issues that are not subject to bargaining. But there exists a gray area between what is and is not appropriate to put on the bargaining table.

One issue that falls into the undefined area is the basis for faculty promotion. Gooden said this is a very important issue that will resolve because in bargaining one side will sometimes make a rather inappropriate offer just to get the other side to start talking. He said promotion of faculty is faculty business but it is not appropriate to put on the bargaining table.

The issue of what constitutes an item for collective bargaining is another issue with which to contend. The master plan for higher education in the state is being reviewed by a specially appointed commission to which various organizations will voice their recommendations and concerns. The master plan originally appointed University of California campuses to be the premiere research facility among colleges in the state. Kersten said CSU faculty are only authorized under the master plan to engage in research if it is instructionally-related. There is some movement afoot to allow or require research from CSU faculty.

"This causes some concern because some faculty, although there is some division on this, feel an emphasis on research without extra funding will come at the expense of instruction."
A. Senate drops idea of AIMS resolution

By Pamela Varma

The Academic Senate executive committee, which met Tuesday put on the back burner a resolution that asked that instructional funds not be used to pay for the Administrative Information Management System (AIMS). Cal Poly President Warren Baker had expressed concerns with the original resolution because he said there were some misstatements of fact in regards to other possible sources of funding for AIMS. Frank Lebens, director of operations, and Jim Landreth, director of business affairs, spoke to the committee on Baker's behalf and explained that the various funds in question actually were earmarked for other uses. As a result of this discussion, the senate agreed to drop the resolution.

The Academic Senate had previously passed a resolution in favor of AIMS.

The executive committee also:

☐ Agreed to move to a first reading at the next full Academic Senate meeting a resolution to change the term "option" in a major to "concentration" and to clearly define it. The resolution also calls for the senate to study and resolve before the next academic calendar cycle whether or not concentrations should be required and if a student outside the major may have access to a concentration.

☐ Agreed to move to the consent agenda for the next full Academic Senate meeting a resolution supporting all efforts by university groups in their promotions for appreciation and understanding of the U.S. Constitution.

Supporters express worry at Bird fund-raising event

LOSA LEGAN (AP) — A fund-raising event for embattled California Chief Justice Rose Bird took on a somber atmosphere as liberals predicted dire consequences if a campaign against her succeeds.

"If she loses as bad as some of the polls indicate, it would be very bad for our positions, for progressive causes," Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, told about 60 people gathered in Washington on Tuesday night.

"It gets to be no fun losing again and again," she said.

The Los Angeles Times reported in Wednesday's editions that "professional Democrats are all backing away from her."

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader told Bird's supporters at the event that "professional Democrats are all backing away from her."

"You never advance when you're backing away," he said.

But a handful of California Democratic lawmakers agreed to be named on a list of supporters handed out at the fund-raiser. They included Reps. Howard L. Berman of Panorama City, George Brown Jr. of Riverside, Barbara Bexon of Greenbrae and Mel Levine of Santa Monica.

"Opponents of her failure to uphold a single death penalty during her nine years on the bench."

"You never advance when you're backing away," he said.

But a handful of California Democratic lawmakers agreed to be named on a list of supporters handed out at the fund-raiser. They included Reps. Howard L. Berman of Panorama City, George Brown Jr. of Riverside, Barbara Bexon of Greenbrae and Mel Levine of Santa Monica.

"You never advance when you're backing away," he said.

But a handful of California Democratic lawmakers agreed to be named on a list of supporters handed out at the fund-raiser. They included Reps. Howard L. Berman of Panorama City, George Brown Jr. of Riverside, Barbara Bexon of Greenbrae and Mel Levine of Santa Monica.

"You never advance when you're backing away," he said.

But a handful of California Democratic lawmakers agreed to be named on a list of supporters handed out at the fund-raiser. They included Reps. Howard L. Berman of Panorama City, George Brown Jr. of Riverside, Barbara Bexon of Greenbrae and Mel Levine of Santa Monica.

"You never advance when you're backing away," he said.

But a handful of California Democratic lawmakers agreed to be named on a list of supporters handed out at the fund-raiser. They included Reps. Howard L. Berman of Panorama City, George Brown Jr. of Riverside, Barbara Bexon of Greenbrae and Mel Levine of Santa Monica.

"You never advance when you're backing away," he said.

But a handful of California Democratic lawmakers agreed to be named on a list of supporters handed out at the fund-raiser. They included Reps. Howard L. Berman of Panorama City, George Brown Jr. of Riverside, Barbara Bexon of Greenbrae and Mel Levine of Santa Monica.

"You never advance when you're backing away," he said.

But a handful of California Democratic lawmakers agreed to be named on a list of supporters handed out at the fund-raiser. They included Reps. Howard L. Berman of Panorama City, George Brown Jr. of Riverside, Barbara Bexon of Greenbrae and Mel Levine of Santa Monica.

"You never advance when you're backing away," he said.

But a handful of California Democratic lawmakers agreed to be named on a list of supporters handed out at the fund-raiser. They included Reps. Howard L. Berman of Panorama City, George Brown Jr. of Riverside, Barbara Bexon of Greenbrae and Mel Levine of Santa Monica.
Mustangs dealt blow by UCSB

By Tim Robinson

In standings it's just another number added to the right-hand side of the win-loss column, but when it comes at the hands of your rivals in front of a home crowd, and in the decisive manner in which UC Santa Barbara beat the Cal Poly women's volleyball team, it's anything but just another loss.

'We beat ourselves with dumb, careless mistakes; we gave them all their points'

— Carol Tschasar

The final score of 15-11, 15-11, 15-6 clearly reflects the manner in which the Gauchos, ranked No. 10 in the nation, dismantled the No. 11 ranked Mustangs. The Mustangs did manage to make the first two games close, but by the third game they were rendered defenseless to UCSB's obvious offensive superiority.

'These girls had 93 digs compared to only 74 for the Mustangs, gave up no easy points. Little seemed to work against a very Scrooge-like defense, which required the Mustangs to pay dearly in work and hustle for each point. This probably ended all late comeback hopes, such as the one that occurred two weeks ago at UCSB, when the Mustangs rebounded to win the last three games to take the match. Also, the UCSB defense all but neutralized Carol Tschasar, who had only four kills for the match. Tschasar, who along with Charolette Mitchel of UCSB was one of the two All-American candidates playing in the match, was held far short of her usual double-digit output in kills and blocks. Tschasar accounted for only three blocks.

'These girls beat themselves with dumb, careless mistakes; we gave them all their points,' said Tschasar, who also added that the team's passing had much to be desired.

The Mustangs did beat themselves, which was so evident early in the third game when a ball dropped in the middle of...
Chris Hinshaw to compete in Ironman for fifth time
Cal Poly's resident triathlete to run in premier test of endurance on Saturday

BY ELMER RAMOS, Staff Writer

Hinshaw, a 22-year-old Cal Poly senior, was the runner-up in last year's Ironman, but he posted the sixth-fastest time in the triathlon's history. Perhaps just as satisfying is that his early pace was so blistering that Tinley had to post the fastest time in Ironman history to catch him.

But when the gun goes off early Saturday morning to signal the start of this year's race, Hinshaw will have his sights set on victory. He has little doubt that a win in the Ironman, Jennifer outshined her brother. While Chris struggled to become the 140th man to finish, Jennifer was the ninth woman across the line.

Undaunted, Chris came back the next year and broke into the top-20 with a 14th place finish. He improved steadily, crossing the finish line in eighth place the next year and second place last year.

Jennifer's finish was sixth in 1984, and she has since quit triathlons. But she and the rest of the six-member family will be in Hawaii to give Chris moral support.

"I can't tell you how nervous I get," Hinshaw said. "Finals week is a big joke in comparison."

Unlike shorter triathlons, which pack an immense amount of intensity into two or three hours, the 26.2-mile run. Hinshaw said he has done everything he can possibly do to prepare for his fifth assault on the Ironman.

"I feel good," Hinshaw said last week before leaving for Hawaii, site of the event that features a 2.4-mile swim, a 112-mile bike ride and a 26.2-mile run.

"I think we all expect him to do five years ago."

He was introduced to triathlon when he saw the Ironman on television in 1981. A couple of months later, he and his older sister, Jennifer, began training. Their goal: to win the Ironman.

In 1982, the pair's first attempt at the Ironman, Jennifer outshined her brother. While Chris struggled to become the 140th man to finish, Jennifer was the ninth woman across the line.

The approaching footsteps belonged to Scott Tinley, a three-time runner-up in the Ironman who had come from 16 minutes behind to catch Hinshaw. Several miles later, as Tinley pulled away and disappeared into the horizon dimmed by the setting sun, Hinshaw knew he would have to settle for second place.

Hinshaw said he has done everything he can possibly do to prepare for his fifth assault on the Ironman. For the past few months, his life has revolved around a training regimen designed to bring him to his physical and mental peak in time for the race.

The daily routine would be punishing to a lesser athlete. Seemingly endless hours swimming in a pool, riding along Highway 1 and running in Poly Canyon bring him to an astonishing weekly total: 25,000 yards swimming, 300 miles biking and 50 miles running.

"It gets extremely boring doing the same thing day after day," he said. "And I don't lead a real good social life."

But a good social life is something Hinshaw is willing to sacrifice in order to achieve what he set out to do five years ago.

The daily routine would be punishing to a lesser athlete. Seemingly endless hours swimming in a pool, riding along Highway 1 and running in Poly Canyon bring him to an astonishing weekly total: 25,000 yards swimming, 300 miles biking and 50 miles running.

"It gets extremely boring doing the same thing day after day," he said. "And I don't lead a real good social life."

But a good social life is something Hinshaw is willing to sacrifice in order to achieve what he set out to do five years ago.

He was introduced to triathlon when he saw the Ironman on television in 1981. A couple of months later, he and his older sister, Jennifer, began training. Their goal: to win the Ironman.

In 1982, the pair's first attempt at the Ironman, Jennifer outshined her brother. While Chris struggled to become the 140th man to finish, Jennifer was the ninth woman across the line.

Undaunted, Chris came back the next year and broke into the top-20 with a 14th place finish. He improved steadily, crossing the finish line in eighth place the next year and second place last year.

Jennifer's finish was sixth in 1984, and she has since quit triathlons. But she and the rest of the six-member family will be in Hawaii to give Chris moral support.

"I can't tell you how nervous I get," Hinshaw said. "Finals week is a big joke in comparison."

Unlike shorter triathlons, which pack an immense amount of intensity into two or three hours, the Ironman, page 11

Hinshaw to compete in the bicycle portion of a local triathlon. Photo courtesy of Telegram-Tribune three Cal Poly defenders. The Mustangs, who used freshmen Dana Davis and Barri Johnson in place of the injured Smith, never seemed to act as a cohesive unit.

VOLLEYBALL

From page 9

"Sana Barbara's a smart team — they knew what to expect. They're experienced and they knew we were going to two people — Vera and Carol," Wilton said.

The Mustangs will face No. 1 ranked San Diego State this weekend, but Smith is expected back in the line-up, although maybe not 100 percent.

The Aztecs beat Cal Poly earlier this year in San Diego, 15-10, 15-10, 9-15, 15-4. In that game, the Aztecs had 65 kills for a percentage of .331. Middle blocker Kris Morton led her team in the win with 19 kills.
Mets win league pennant

HOUSTON (AP) — Ray Knight drove in a three-run 16th inning Wednesday and the New York Mets survived one last New York will open the World Series at home Saturday against the Astros' first baseman Glenn Davis to score the final run.

IRONMAN

From page 10

Ironman stretches the anguish over nine hours. Much of the challenge lies in maintaining mental stability while the body reaches its threshold.

"You feel like you're dying sometimes," Hinshaw said. "You have to convince yourself to stay in the race."

A lot of that convincing must come during the run, he said. The competition is a 26.2-mile highway flanked by black, smoldering lava fields, which intensify the sun's efforts and boost the temperature over 100 degrees. The humidity and steady headwinds add to the torment.

And the presence of Tinley and four-time champion Dave Scott will give Hinshaw even more to think about.

Still, he is confident and ready. He plans to quit triathlons in a couple of years and does not think about doing without having once claimed the title of Ironman Champion. "I don't see the purpose of going out a loser," he said.

SCOREBOARD

Women's volleyball

PCAA Standings Overall Records

Team          W   L   PA  RW
San Diego State   17  1  964
San Jose State    14  1  933
Hawaii           16  2  889
Pacific          16  3  842
Santa Barbara    15  6  714
Cal Poly          9  9  544
Long Beach       8  10  444
Irving          15  18  318
Fullerton        6  16  273
Fresno          14  22  922

Clasified

Campus Clubs

ACAR CLUB MEETING Thur nite at 6 II PM in Student Union Room 113. Free from OMG speaking on Sales Engr. Come to RM110 R 50 All Students.

ALL JEWISH STUDENTS

"FREE FOOD""FREE DRINKS"

HALLOWEEN PARTY

with a unique SLO senior citizen. Through the Adopt-a-Grandparent program or a weekly visit you could change a person's life! For more info on mg 10 14. Call Kathy at 519-760.

SHPE

SOCIETY OF HISPANIC PROFESSIONAL ENGINEERS

WELCOME ONE AND ALL TO THE 2ND MTG. 6pm Thursday M.E. P. BLDG.

SIGMA IOTA EPILOG MEETING ON Oct 20 7PM for current members. Please plan to attend For More info call Ms. Greene, how 'bout a poly relationship available.

Volunteer Tutors

are needed to work with teens 7-12 grades in basic subjects. See your own schedule. For more info call SCS 546-2441.

Announcements

DID YOU FORGET SOMETHING? POLY PHASE has Final Paybacks OCT 16 11 to 17U UU247.

EIT REVIEW

5 SESSIONS-COME TO ONE, TWO, OR ALL FIVE

Thurs Oct 9 Strength of Materials 10am-

Thurs Oct 16 Fluid Mechanics 10am-

Thur Oct17 Thermodynamics 10am-

Thurs Oct23 Electrical Circuits 10am-same level sessions held R315 113 760.

FALL RODEO

Oct 17th 6pm 18pm

Tickets at UU or Gate Happy Hr Cal Poly Farm 2 for $1.00.

Happy Hr Cal Poly

2 for $1.00.

Come early and enjoy tropical fruits, 1 gallon plants. FRIDAY 5:30 pm at Poly Plant and Floral on the hill at the Horticulture Dept.

HEALTH CARD STICKERS

AVAILABLE AT HEALTH CENTER CASHIER.

Campus Motorcross

RACE YOUR MOTORCYCLE WITH THE PNCU PEGGIMEMBER RC DO RACE AVAILABLE AT THE EVENT SPECTATORS WELCOME SUN 1000 1200 NO ENTRY FEE SHALL QUALIFY FOR THE PEGGİMEMBER RC.

Join U.S. Army and get superior results. Save hours of research time. SR PROJECT-TERM PAPER-SPEECH-THESIS IN THE Material World

THE ANSWER BOX 541-3001.

Tickets at UU or Gate Oct 17th 6pm 18th 1pm

All sessions lead by professors Sessions held R315 113 760.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

SPIRIT IN THE MATERIAL World Yosime Dance 8-10 OCT 1 $1 with Hall Card $1.50 without hall card

THE ANSWERY BOX 541-3001.

WANTED-Hard working-career minded students who aren't afraid to take risks. Add "like" to your resume & experience an education that can't be found in a classroom. Windstream. Mt biking/caving/backpacking & more. For more details come to the Escape Route downstairs in the UU. ASI OUTINGS "Once in a lifetime..."

WANTED:

Coordination for the TOM BRADLEY RUN FOR POLICEMAN An Exciting.Challenging.One Day Experience

Come to the CountDown Meeting Tonight at 7pm in the Lafayette Temple 1350 Monterey St

For further information contact Greg or Wes Kennedy at Democratic Headquarters 541-2476 (References given to prospective employers.)

30% REBATE

When you buy 3 or more of cut roses, tropical plants, 1 gallon plants. This Saturday only 7pm at Poly Plant and Floral on the hill at the Horticulture Unit

El Corral Bookstore Now Stock Exam File

Tues Oct 14 Dynamics

Thurs Oct 16 Fluid Mechanics

Thurs Oct23 Electrical Circuits

Courses: Chem, Physics, Calculus.

El Corral Bookstore Now Stock Exam File

Tues Oct14 Dynamics

Thurs Oct16 Fluid Mechanics

Tues Oct23 Electrical Circuits

Tickets on sale now! Stu Adv $11.50

Wed Oct 22!!! Main Gym 8:30pm

SPECTATORS WELCOME.SUNDAY 10-19

RACE YOUR MOTORCYLE WITH THE PNCU PEGGIMEMBER RC DO RACE AVAILABLE AT THE EVENT SPECTATORS WELCOME SUN 1000 1200 NO ENTRY FEE SHALL QUALIFY FOR THE PEGGİMEMBER RC.

FREE SEX

INFORMATION

Consultation on contraception and relationships available. Sexuality Peer Educators are here for you MWTh 10am to 2pm. Appointments at Health Center. Love carefully!

25 DRIVERS NEEDED

EARN UP TO $1800 PER HOUR WAGES, TIPS, AND COMMISSION MUST HAVE OWN CAR AND INSURANCE.APPLY IN PERSON AFTER 7PM 775 FOOTBALL. 415-820-2094 9th Ln 8200 EL CAMINO ATHLETIC.

ALL THE BEST USED OFFICE FURNITURE

Desks From 39.95. 4420 Broad, BLVD SLO, 2084 9th LO

Cassette Stereo, AM radio good condition $60.00

Cassette Recorder, AM/FM $5.00

Cassette Player, AM/FM $5.00

Phillips Cassette Player, AM/FM $5.00

9U220. Air 1 st class accommodations only $95.00. Call 543-4424.

Rental information included.

OWN ROOM IN HOUSE

ROOM IN NICE, LARGE HOME FOR $250/MONTH FIRST/LAST/DIST 350, Dep. PETS OK, KARA OR TANYA 546-8302 or 544-9075. FEMALE PREFER. BUT MALE OK. FURN. WASH/DRYER/HOTPLACE MICRO/BOIL/RIDGEYARD. & FUN ROOMMATES.

KENT MAZZIA, 546-4640.

Room available in 2br 11/2 mobile home in SLO agenos 4mi from Poly. WD, dw, mw. Pifer M/F in Eng. or Technical major. Non-Smoker. $300.00 $300.00. Utilities incl. Linda 544-7675 after 9:30 anyday.

SEARCHING FOR MALE ROOMMATE TO SHARE 9 NICES. 3716 OF SPACE $600/MONTH.

Homes for Sale

BUYING A HOUSE?

For a free list of all the affordable houses and condos for sale in SLO including condos. Condo, poly. dollar poly. Call Steve Nelson Fic 543-6370. Leave message.

Crawley (40) dbr-white 2800 1 120 total upgraded washer/dryer/new carpeting in all rooms except porch semi-new corner of e 47 th and s 6th. For app. 543-2766.

THROWING AWAY RENT & DON'T INVEST! buy or buymondido.Call for list of SLO homes. Kent Mazza, 544-5771.
There's no substitute for the FINEST of submarine sandwiches.

OSOS STREET SUB S
(across from Woodstock's)

2 FREE DRINKS w/ ANY SIZE SANDWICH
(limit: one coupon per sandwich)

OUPOUN 1060 Osos St. 541-0955

OSOS STREET SUB S

50¢ OFF ANY SIZE SANDWICH
(limit: one coupon per sandwich)

OUPOUN 1060 Osos St. 541-0955

The finance committee was directly responsible for the decision, but it is also a business, and it was important to solicit student opinion. From page 1 they were told whether or not there were any conditions attached to the original deposit because of damage done by the first tenant. "The graduate is probably in New York," he added jokingly.

ASSOCIATION OF STUDENTS

From page 1 the students have less of an opportunity to become informed, said Higgins. The newsletter, and information booklets, and newspaper ads, like all communications, are designed to inform students. The printing of ballots, a pro/con statement and the hiring of the League of Women Voters to oversee the election, said Higgins, are all designed to increase the number of students who vote. The cost of running the election costs, which include the printing of ballots, the pro/con statement and the hiring of the League of Women Voters to oversee the election, said Higgins, are all designed to increase the number of students who vote. The cost of running the election is estimated at $800.

ASOCIATION OF STUDENTS

from deposits is a good idea. If there is a lease, students should ask under what conditions one may be released from the contract. He said prospective renters might also find out about sub-leasing.

Bostrom added it is a good idea to talk to some of the current tenants to ask them how the landlord deals with noise and repairs. But dealing with former tenants rather than the landlord can also lead to problems, Bostrom said. He pointed this scenario: a student who needs housing knows a student who is moving because he is graduating. He gives the graduate the deposit and moves in. Later, when he moves out, the landlord withholds money from the original deposit because of damage done by the first tenant. "The graduate is probably in New York," he added jokingly.

Board allows more sewage in Russian River

SACRAMENTO (AP) - The State Water Resources Control Board has agreed to increase Santa Rosa's discharge of treated sewage into the Russian River.

The 3-2 vote came on Tuesday, despite pleas from opponents of the plan to increase sewage discharge into the river. The 3-2 vote came on Tuesday, despite pleas from opponents of the plan to increase sewage discharge into the river. The interim plan will allow Santa Rosa to discharge up to 5 percent of the river's flow between Oct. 1 and May 14. Currently, the limit is 1 percent.

The new rule is tied to a requirement that Santa Rosa use advanced wastewater treatment methods on its wastewater. Ben Kor, executive officer of the North Coast Regional Water Quality Control Board, said advanced wastewater treatment already has been implemented by Santa Rosa.

River residents insisted that Santa Rosa's system needs further improvement before discharging increased amounts of wastewater into the river. "We need your help," Sonoma County Supervisor Ernie Carpenter told the state board. "We in the Russian River have no confidence that the proposed solution will not be used to accommodate the burgeoning industry of growth," she said. According to Adelman, the interim standards could be in effect for years and allow Santa Rosa to delay finding a long-term solution to its wastewater problem.