Cultural differences brought on apartheid

By Jane Gumerlock
Staff Writer

The problems that have resulted from apartheid began as social and cultural differences between native South Africans and European immigrants, a black South African exile said Thursday. The conflict began with differing ideas about man and nature.

Anthony Ngubo, a professor and author, spoke to an audience about the impact of apartheid on black and white South Africans. As more and more Europeans came to South Africa, restrictions were imposed on the natives, said. They were sent to reservations and they began to be taxed — two ideas which were foreign to their way of living. Because of this, and the fact that men had to leave their families to work, the family structure was torn apart and the illegitimacy rate skyrocketed.

"No society can remain healthy if the foundation of the family is undermined," Ngubo said.

In 1948, when apartheid became law, the customs against blacks which had been practised for so long simply became legal. This was done in the name of preserving western Christian culture under the prime minister at that time, he said.

Perhaps the most far-reaching ill effect is lack of education for black South Africans, said Ngubo. Occupations are based on race, and if the government refuses to employ black engineers, there is no point in teaching them math in school. Ngubo said most of the teachers have no better than a seventh grade education. Because of this, children don't learn anything. The children who are fortunate enough to continue their education must constantly pay for it.

ASI works to create improved Tipsy Taxi

By Sandra Coffey
Staff Writer

Although the Tipsy Taxi program hasn't been available since the end of January, negotiations have been taking place to bring free taxi rides back to students.

Franklin Burris, chairman of the Tipsy Taxi program, said plans for the new service, hoped to be operating by spring, will require changes in the pilot program affecting funding and availability.

The pilot program offered free taxi rides to students who were too intoxicated to drive themselves home. The program was used 233 times and benefited approximately 350 students in the two-and-a-half-month period it was offered.

The program was funded almost entirely by ASI with the help of the Intra-Fraternity Council, which donated about one-sixth of the program costs.

Burris explained that negotiations for a three-way funding of the new program are taking place with the Beer and Wine Wholesalers Association and one-third from local bars and fraternities and sororities.

Burris said the new service is modeled after 23 similar programs in California sponsored by the Beer and Wine Wholesalers Association. However, the Cal Poly program will be one of few offered year-round. Most programs are offered only during the holidays, Burris said.

The service will be extended to all San Luis Obispo residents, not just Cal Poly students as it was in the past.

However, Burris explained, taxis will not cater to people needing rides out of San Luis Obispo city limits. "If we expand the service to all San Luis Obispo residents, not just Cal Poly students as it was in the past," Burris said.

Americans must think to keep their freedom

Editor — I am writing in response to a letter by Robert Gutierrez which appeared Feb. 12. Gutierrez called for an end to "Reagan bashing" because the president is not responsible for the country's condition. The American people are. I think Gutierrez should reconsider his position.

The president's mandate from the people was but the beginning of a long journey through the center of the public view. The support of the American people is something that must be earned; a man is only entitled to a certain amount of respect by virtue of being president.

We, as free Americans, must always question authority in order to keep our freedom. We all must be allowed to express our true thoughts in written, as well as spoken form. We must not blindly follow anyone, for this attitude leads to serious consequences.

Our patriotism belongs to the country — not to any one person, and not even if that person is the president. It's time people take action to correct past mistakes and direct the future of this country in a more responsible manner. We can only accomplish this by becoming aware of the problems this country has — we can't get anywhere by pretending these problems don't exist.

It's the real Ronald Reagan who runs this country, not his image of the American hero. Americans are quickly try to dissuade me from answering yes. Some veterans feel they're worse off still being alive than the 47,000 Americans killed in the jungles of Vietnam and Cambodia, and that they'd run to Canada before going through that again.

Yet, somehow, I'm curious — curious why I wasn't born 25 years earlier; curious about how I can show my gratitude to the country I love and to those who died.

It's like the helpless feeling one gets when a loved one dies — wanting to do something for the person with so many opportunities. For now, the fight for peace remains somewhat peaceful, and all the insane will hope it remains so.

Perhaps if there were another draft everyone could refuse to go. Who would be left to fight the war? But that isn't likely to happen. Someone will always want to fight. As inhumane as war is, it's sometimes necessary to ensure a peaceful future.

Should the country ask me to fight to help create peace down the line, I feel I could do more good in the United States than in the forests of Canada.

Floyd Jones is Insight editor.

I'm no Reagan basher, but I can easily understand how the actions of any of our elected officials can, and ought to be, subject to criticism.

Reader finds irony in Poly's design problems

Editor — I just wanted to complement Ken Miller and the Daily for that good article "Call Poly suffering from design problems" (Feb. 19). It is such an irony that a university with one of the best schools of architecture in the nation is itself having an architectural identity crisis.

APARTHEID

"Within education there is a war going on, not in their minds, but for their physical existence," Ngubo said.

Whites are also affected by apartheid, said Ngubo. "It has instilled in the community that whites are exempt from normal moral constraints."

According to Ngubo, the philosophy of apartheid has created a mental set that whites need not be moral. Whites are also worshipping legalism, he said. "They have surrendered their basic fundamental rights to the government. It has become what is right, what is legal."

Although petty apartheid laws have been removed, the more repressive concepts of apartheid are still enforced. The master-servant relationships are still flagrant, and whites and blacks are still potential enemies. The only relationship the government fears is the whites and blacks who become friends, Ngubo said.

The United States needs to use its muscle to exert influence against the South African government, Ngubo said. He suggested devoting energy to bringing black South Africans to the United States to learn for a year, and returning again to South Africa to spread their new ideas.

Poly wins CCAA, will host tourney

By Elmer Ramos

Call it deja vu, call it an instant replay or call it a quirk of fate. But whatever label it is given, it will go down in Cal Poly basketball history as the greatest exhibition of clutch shooting in a 24-hour span.

With the Mustangs down by four points and seven seconds left against Cal State Northridge Saturday night, Poly’s Mark Otta nailed an off-balance three-pointer from 21 feet out and then a free throw to clinch a 68-67 victory and a second straight California Collegiate Athletic Association championship for the Mustangs.

Just 24 hours earlier, Otta overcame a defender to bury an 18-footer in the final seconds against Cal State Los Angeles, giving Poly a 52-51 triumph. “I don’t think I’ve ever hit a bigger basket in my life,” Otta said of Saturday’s three-pointer.

After leading most of the game, Northridge used a trio of three-pointers by Jimmy Daniels to fight back and take the lead. The Matadors’ Pat Bolden then sank two free throws with 14 seconds left to put Northridge ahead 67-64.

As Poly came back down the floor, Otta positioned himself about 21 feet from the basket, knowing anything less than a three-pointer would be useless. When he received the pass, Daniels stood between him and the hoop.

“I jumped to shoot but I had to double pump to avoid him (Daniels),” said Otta. “He pushed me off balance and I just let the ball go. It was a prayer.”

The ball soared high into the lights before descending almost straight down into the net. Daniels was whistled for the foul, sending Otta to the line with a chance to put Poly ahead.

The rules, which state that teams can play only 27 games, were exceeded by Los Angeles in its 28th game against the Lady Mustangs on Thursday.

If the Golden Eagles weren’t disqualified, or if a possible appeal reverses the decision, the Lady Mustangs and Chapman would have had to draw lots to see which team would go to the tournament.

Saturday the Lady Mustangs couldn’t hold the game together, shooting an embarrassing 24 percent from the floor. Head coach Jill Orrock was upset with her team’s performance.

“They shot 24 percent for the game. You can’t do that and win,” she said.

The second highest scorer on the season, Julie Jordan, who was zero for eight on Thursday night and one for nine in Saturday night’s game, has shot 13 percent in shooting from the floor in her last three games.

Leading scorer Sherrie Atteberry, who averages more than 20 points per game, has fouled out in her last three contests.

Poly nails Riverside and Pomona

By Matt Weiser

The Mustang rackmen trampled the Highlanders of UC Riverside Saturday, picking up an easy 8-1 victory in their first conference contest of the year.

Cal Poly took five of six in singles play and swept the doubles against 11th-ranked Riverside. Only in the number one singles spot was Riverside able to turn its catch-up game around for a win.

In Cal Poly's number one spot for the first time was junior Jim Ault, and the outcome seemed obvious as he climbed on top of Riverside's Otis Alimón with a 5-1 lead in the first set.

But Alimón came scrambling back after apparent early immobility to take the set 7-5. The dramatic turnaround did a job on Ault's composure, and Alimón took full advantage by winning the match with a 6-0 shutout in the second set.

"It got windy and then I couldn't hold serve," said Ault. "He was hitting really good returns. The ball just always seemed to bounce his way."

A close match-up materialized between Cal Poly's Dale Minney and Tim Beis in the third spot on the ladder. Lengthy duels from the baseline and the net stretched into a three-set contest. Minney had the serving advantage and fewer unforced errors, coming out on top in the end, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

Rodney Gabuya had a close first-set battle with Riverside's John Houck. The set ended in a tiebreaker, and Gabuya was weakened by a low first-serve percentage, but was strong at the net. Houck had a bigger serve, but a lot of unforced errors appeared in his ground strokes.

"After I started hitting out more, I started to handle the match," said Gabuya. "I really attacked his backhand from the baseline and then he cracked." Gabuya took the match in two sets, 7-6, 6-3.

On Sunday the Mustangs faced unranked Cal Poly Pomona and dominated for another 8-1 win.

The highlight of the match was a duel between Ault and Pomona's Chico Bonner. Ault, playing in the second spot this time for Poly, had to rely largely on his second serve early in the first set. But he got his first serve back late in the set and won three straight games to take it 7-5.

Both Ault and Bonner were able to win key points under pressure, and both were all over the court. But Bonner won the match at the net in the end, 7-5, 7-5, 7-5.

The wins over Riverside and Pomona put Poly at 4-4 overall and 2-0 in conference play.
WOMEN

From page 4 performance, saying that she knew she didn't play up to her potential. "I tried, but my shots weren't making it," Jorgensen said that her team wasn't consistent. "It seems like we were in it and then we were in trouble," Orrock said the Lady Mustangs lost the game in the last five minutes. "They killed us," she said. "We panicked." Orrock also said that her team threw the ball away too often and gave Northridge the chances it needed.

On Thursday night, the Lady Mustangs fared much better against Cal State Los Angeles, beating the Golden Eagles 58-53. The leading scorer, Janet Atteberry, had the Mustangs' first 12 points and the 15 out of the first 17, with the other two points being scored by Atteberry. Jorgensen scored a game and season-high 27 points to lead the Mustangs to a much-needed win. Barlow fouled out of the game without scoring any points. Freshman Nancy Comstock started the game at center, replacing Atteberry, who sat out the first 11 minutes of the game for disciplinary reasons.

Freshman Jennifer Faler came off the bench to replace Kim Lackore and handled the ball well, scoring eight points for the Mustangs — her highest total this season.

Seniors Atteberry, Jorgensen and Lackore will get another chance to play when Cal Poly hosts the CCAA tournament this weekend.

MEN

From page 4 The conference coaches picked the Mustangs, who lost three starters and the head coach from last season's squad, to finish sixth. Poly recaptured by losing three of its first five contests. But then the Mustangs won eight of their next nine games — the one loss was by two points — to prove the doubters wrong.

"Tonight was indicative of what this whole team can do," said Beason, who replaced longtime coach Ernie Wheeler before the season. "We have to realize that now we have greater opportunities and we have to work to take advantage of them."

KING

King's life and speculation about his assassination.

The lecture presented arguments supporting the theory that Ray was unable to have acted alone because he was incapable of the expert planning it took for the assassination to be successful. It was also noted Ray had been convicted many times for armed robbery; he had never killed anyone. Cohen explained that all of Ray's crimes were done for money, and because Ray was not known to have strong prejudices against King or blacks, he had no motive.

Cohen suggested that Ray must have been paid to kill King. He expressed belief that Ray's brother was involved in the assassination and the pay-off had come from the FBI. He explained the FBI was out to ruin King because King had criticized the bureau and there was racism on the bureau. "He was public enemy number one to the FBI," Cohen said.

He said after studying FBI files he found that the FBI spent twice as much time against civil rights and the peace movement than on organized crime. Cohen spoke of how the FBI bugged King's home, had scandalous articles written about him and tried to break up King's marriage. He said all of these orders came directly from the desk of J. Edgar Hoover. "King was haunted by the white and not-so-friendly ghost Edgar Hoover. But they could not threaten him into silence."

Cohen said the reason this information has taken so long to be publicized is because the FBI was in charge of the investigation of King's assassination.

"The FBI spent millions to find Ray but spent nothing to find out who was behind him," he said.

Cohen played an excerpt from a King speech in which King said, "I could never again raise my voice against the violence of the oppressed in the ghettos without having first spoken clearly to the greatest purveyor of violence in the world today: my own government."

Cohen said that although he has never been threatened by the FBI, some agents have shown up at his lectures. "In some countries, I wouldn't be allowed to do this; here they just spy on me."
