WHEN: 11 a.m. Friday, Jan. 13.

BACKGROUND: Cal Poly’s STRIDE (Science through Translational Research in Diet and Exercise) center is partnering with the Food Bank Coalition of San Luis Obispo County to complete research required by a $100,000 “Hunger Free Communities” planning grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Cal Poly received $30,000 from the grant to design and carry out key data-gathering and analysis efforts: a countywide food availability survey and a hunger/food security survey of about 800 county residents. Professors and students gathered data and conducted interviews between January and November 2011.

A countywide committee of government, agriculture and social service agencies will use the remaining funds and the data gathered by Cal Poly to create a “Hunger Free Community” plan in 2012. Once the plan is completed, the county or social service agencies will be eligible to apply for USDA grants providing food and other assistance to aid local residents in need.
