SLO boasts 1st U.S. motel
San Luis Obispo landmark caused ‘motel’ to be coined

By Kristie Kuechler
Staff Writer

San Luis Obispo is the home of the first motel in the world. The Milestone Motel, now called the Motel Motor Hotel, opened off Highway 101 at the Monterey exit.

“The motel plan eliminates a long walk through dark streets in a strange town between a garage and a hotel,” read a 1926 article from the Los Angeles Times. In 1926 no one knew what the word meant, so newspapers ran a definition explaining to people what a motel was.

The word was entered into the dictionary in 1930, 25 years after the Milestone Motel coined the word.

Arthur S. Heineman was the Pasadena architect who started the idea of roadside lodgings with his design for the Milestone Motel. The sign that hung next to the inn read, "Milestone Motor Hotel," but it was too long to fit on the sign to Heineman combined motor and hotel and came up with motel.

Polls show Bork opposition
Republicans claim surveys may contain misleading wordings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Public opinion polls that show growing opposition to Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork touched off heated remarks Monday from Bork's Senate confirmation hearings and at the White House.

A Republican member of the Senate Judiciary Committee said some pollsters have been "utterly detestable" in framing questions designed to undermine President Reagan's court nominations. And Reagan spokesman Martin Fitzwater accused Democrats of trying to turn the Bork nomination into a partisan "interest-led public referendum."

Senate Democrats said they had nothing to do with the polls and would make up their minds based on Bork's qualifications.

As the third week of hearings began, meanwhile, testimony continued to reflect deep divisions over Bork among scholars, lawyers and public officials.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden, D-Del, said he hoped the panel could conclude its work and vote on the nomination by the middle of next week.

Among witnesses testifying Monday:

"When there's a dispute between the president and Congress, where Judge Bork is concerned, the president is always right and Congress should always be deprived of the power to challenge him in court, even in matters of deep institutional conflict," Eagleton said.

Griffin B. Bell, a former U.S. attorney general under President Carter, said he supports Bork to succeed retired Justice Lewis F. Powell.

"Bork "is a conservative. But he's principled and rational."

But said: "I don't think he'll wear anyone's collar. He's smart."

Foundation receives accounting update

A local accounting firm was chosen to handle the annual audit of the Cal Poly Foundation's finances and presented its findings at a meeting Friday.

Eight of the 10 board members were present to accept the 1986-87 audit report from the Glenn, Burdette, Phillips and Cooper Corporation of San Luis Obispo. According to board members, the firm was selected because it offered the best service for the cost.

The Foundation has changed accounting firms every few years. "It is wise to consider a change in audit firms every four to five years to minimize the chance that one may become too familiar with the operations, and not pay enough attention to the inventory system," said Al Amoral, executive director of the board since 1971.

Although many of the Foundation's commercial operations include: El Corral Bookstore, Vista Grande Restaurant and University Graphic Systems. According to Amoral, the Foundation has made substantial long-term investments in equity market stocks. Some of these stocks include: McDonalds, K mart, Maytag and Hein.

Although many of the Foundation's stocks have reached high profit margins, some of the investments are not popular with the campus community. Public concern over the racially segregated South Africa has led to the state's 3-year-old divestiture law. This law, signed by Gov. Deukmejian, requires that the state's three major public pension funds connected with South Africa be sold by Jan. 1, 1988.

The dejection continues

Editor:

For the last two years, I have attended Cal Poly. Unfortunately, the school isn't run as well as I heard. What I don't understand is why general education classes are so hard to get.

Well, I finally realized why it is so hard. For the past three quarters, I have been keeping tabs on the class scheduling by the administration. It appears that every class (e.g. Phil 331, Phil 335, Eng 122, Eng 121, Hist 315 and many others) is in high demand by all students of Cal Poly. These classes seem to be scheduled to a room of small capacity, while other classes such as FDSC 150 and IT 150 are given rooms with more than 15,000 square feet, but only 45, but only attract 20-25.

I am not only saying this because I hear of the problem. I am a victim of this problem and hope to see a change. Soon! With more than 17,000 students at Cal Poly, I honestly believe that you can get enough support and information from all. It all takes the initiative to check if there is a problem. And I can only answer that question.

In my opinion, it appears that the administration, or whoever is in charge of scheduling classes, is so concerned about just getting it done or does not know the importance of this. But people involved somehow seem to be worried. They make sure that the fees for tuition come in on time or that parking tickets are given out on time. With all of these, I feel compelled to try.

I think about it, and I suppose that's a first step.

Children's Center in need

Editor:

I would like to thank you for diaries that teachers and the parents, students and staff letter for the general education of your Sept. 24, 1987 issue. A few facts con­cerning the new Children's Center's legitimacy issue.

Today's social trends reveal dual career households, a drastic increase of single parent families, and 70 percent of women with young children employed outside of the home. Moreover, these nuclear families of the 80's are relying more on institutions (preschools) to aid in the up­bringing of their offspring. Around 300 children here and numerous others at local preschools (Zion, SW Christian, Johnson Avenue, Village, etc.) demonstrate San Luis Obispo is in transition. The large number of parent-students, combined with the fact that this campus offers the least amount of space for children than any other CSU campus, both give Cal Poly in center for change.

"It's disturbing to hear the ASI department's question of the new Children's Center being a sound investment of student dollars, not only will students benefit by profit and experience, but we all agree on the impor­tance of parents having the chance to gain a higher educa­tion level to more effectively raise our next generation." — Katherine D. Just as important a task for society.

What comes down to is that we all need to become more altruistic. I want to be a journalist so I can make a difference in this world. If you spent your time reading this instead of downsing a beer or watching "Three's Company," then there is hope for you, too. I'm not sure what the best recourse is to save the world, but I think it's worth doing. We can't just sit back and let the country be run by politicians. We need to take an active part; not just being critics of the government, or students, or anyone.

As for the generation that wants to call in un­covering, show us how to care. Set an example. Realize that you helped create the environment that we grew up in, and don't count yourselves out. We do care, and I know we can remember anything in the '60s. If our protest seems insincere to you, then get out there and show us how to do it right. If you blame our constant message is distrust toward the Russians. We have the same potential, maybe even more in light of what we face, to change the world. If only we could work together instead of blaming one another. I'm all for peace, and saving the en­vironment, and solving our social problems, and so are most of the same individuals I know.

So let's do it!

Tax money returned

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than four-fifths of the windfall which states could have gained because of federal tax reform has gone back to the taxpayers, according to a national survey released Monday. Twenty-two states made major changes in their tax codes after Congress approved a sweeping federal tax measure last year, and another nine states were reviewing their tax systems, the National Governors' Association said.

"1987 has been a landmark year for changes in state tax systems," said governors' association executive director Raymond C. Schepach. The survey, also said state spending growth rose by a modest 6.3 percent in fiscal 1987.

Schroeder won't run

DENVER (AP) — A tearful Rep. Patricia Schroeder announced Monday she will not enter the race for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination, saying, "I could not figure out how to run and not be separated from those I served." Schroeder, a veteran of 15 years in Congress, had spent nearly four months testing her potential political and financial support, and her announcement stunned supporters who gathered at noon in the outdoor Greek Theater in Denver's Civic Center Park. "I learned a lot about America and I learned a lot about Pat Schroeder (this summer). That's why I will not be a candidate for president. I could not figure out how to run," she said.

Ledeen: U.S. in error

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States ignored a chance to talk directly to a high Iranian official in fall 1985 about improving relations between the two nations, and instead strengthened radical elements of the Iranian government through swaps of arms for hostages, according to Iran-Contra testimony released today.

Michael Ledeen, a former U.S. consultant on terrorism who was involved in early discussions about the Iran arms sales, said the Iranian official "believed it possible to, in essence, change the nature of the Iranian regime through peaceful, parliamentary methods."

Ledeen said the official believed the changes could lead to Iran's abandonment of terrorism and to better relations with the West.

Kim forms new party

SOUTH KOREA (AP) — Former Prime Minister Kim Jong-pil said Monday he was forming a new political party as a first step toward becoming a presidential candidate in elections this year.

Kim's candidacy could damage other presidential hopefuls, especially governing Democratic Justice Party candidate Roh Tae-woo, by siphoning off middle-class and business support, political observers have said. His candidacy also could damage the hopes of opposition party candidates, added the observers, who spoke on the condition of not being identified.

Rosen told journalists covering the conference that the new Soviet report would contain the latest data on the environmental consequences of the April 26, 1986 accident, the world's worst nuclear plant disaster. Moscow said the accident at the plant killed 31 people.

Nuclear study given

AUSTRIA (AP) — The Soviet Union will present a detailed report on the Chernobyl nuclear plant accident during the one-week International Conference on Nuclear Power Performance and Safety which began Monday.

Morris Rosen, director of the security department of the International Atomic Energy Agency, said the study to be presented Wednesday will be "more informative than earlier reports."

Transients hit Venice

SANTA MONICA (AP) — A dwindling band of transients who decided to carry the message of their plight to affluent sections of Southern California decided Monday to skip Malibu celebrity digs and head south to Venice.

During the 18-mile march the group had a one-night stopover in the shadow of Beverly Hills mansions during the weekend. The Beverly Hills mayor greeted the 40 transients with doughnuts and coffee.

They also plan march to Malibu and Westwood.

Committee helps pre-med students
By Diane Wright

A committee designed to help advise students interested in pursuing a career in medicine will be holding an orientation meeting next week.

Harry Fierstine, associate dean of the School of Science and Mathematics, is the chairman of the Health Professions Committee and will preside at the meeting, which will be held Tuesday, Oct. 6.

"We are serving people in all majors," said Fierstine. He said students do not have to be science majors in order to be admitted to medical schools, provided they meet medical school requirements while attending Cal Poly.

Fierstine said medical schools like to see applicants that are liberal arts majors because of the "human skills" they have learned.

CLASS ENCOUNTERS

"No, I've never lost a term paper because of disk error. But then, I've always used Sony."

When it's three o'clock in the morning and you're nearly done with your term paper, the last thing you want to see on the screen is "fatal disk error."

That's why so many people insist on Sony floppy diskettes.

Another reason Sony floppies are so popular on campus is their relentless reliability. And that goes for our 5.25" floppy, too. After all, when it comes to magnetic media, nobody's ahead of Sony. We're a world leader in audio, video and computer magnetic media.

The thing to remember about magnetic media in computers is that almost any input error can be corrected, but lost data is forever. So, instead of learning your lesson the hard way, trust the diskettes that set the standard for the others to follow.

Use the Sony. THE ONE AND ONLY.

Kaminski, a junior biology major. “Our landlord increased our rent by 20 percent and only gave us one month’s notice. There were five of us living together and since none of us could afford the increase, we were forced to move out. “Since Cal Poly is talking about increasing the enrollment size and the City Council is basically sticking to a no-growth policy, I can see the potential for bigger housing problems in the future,” Kaminski said. “If Cal Poly’s size increases, the housing crunch will get worse as it becomes more lucrative for landlords to jack up the price of rent.”
But tenant landlord problems have greatly decreased from a few years ago, Guyre-Powell said. “Up until very recently the demand for housing far outstripped the supply,” she said. “Students would sign a lease for an apartment that was in very poor condition out of sheer desperation.”
“I usually don’t have any more problems with renting to college students than I have renting to families,” said Frank Yost of Yost Properties. “The only real trouble I have is renting to WOW (Women of the West) members. The WOW leaders invite their groups over for parties all the time and the neighbors go crazy. In that case just telling them that they’re causing a problem is usually enough for them to stop.”
“The responsibilities of a landlord to the tenant are clearly defined by the state of California,” said Yost. “When there is a problem, I fix it. If a dispute does arise, I tell them to go to the Human Relations Commission.”
Another valuable resource for students with rental problems is a service offered through ASI where students sign up for a free 20-minute legal consultation with a lawyer to discuss their rights and responsibilities as tenants. The program is already booked through the beginning of October.

“...The turist toward the board has dissipated since last year,” said Lerk Carter, dean of the School of Agriculture. "The more the student knows about the board’s action, the better it is.”
In other meeting happenings, the Foundation elected Malcolm Wilson, vice president of Academic Affairs, to the board.
The Swanton-Pacific Ranch project was also discussed. The ocean-front property located about 20 miles north of Santa Cruz was leased by the Foundation more than a year ago.
The land is primarily used by agriculture, forestry and animal science students, but is open to other majors. The project is considered an extension of school laboratory space with students living and working on the ranch to complete internship programs. Some of these programs include: surveying, corral construction, pasture water development and cattle breeding.
A request for a used pickup to help transport students and carry supplies along with a mobile home for the ranch manager were some of the requests made for the ranch project.

'Haunted house' has uncertain past

By Coleen Bondy

High up above the city of San Luis Obispo rests an old brick building that many Cal Poly students are familiar with, and may have actually visited once or twice on a dark night with a full moon.

Called an abandoned asylum, a haunted house, but actually an old juvenile detention center, Sunny Acres is a source of controversy in San Luis Obispo.

The building, located on a hill behind General Hospital, was built in 1932 as an orphanage and was converted in the 1930s to a juvenile detention center. In 1975 the building was declared to be unsound and was boarded up. It is now walking distance from a modern probation center.

Since then it has been used by vagrants as a place to sleep, satanical worshippers as a place to perform sacrifices and teenagers as a place to party.

The building is a large, schoolhouse-looking structure that seems to be in good condition from the outside. The inside has been somewhat mutilated by vandals. There are satanical drawings on the walls, and one can easily imagine what it must have been like to spend some time in one of the tiny, barren cells upstairs. A peaceful but lonely feeling is evoked from the place by day, but an altogether eerie feeling is provoked at night.

The county-owned building was supposed to be torn down last summer, but the county did not receive bids for the work. The photos by bricks alone would be worth the cost of tearing it down, but that incentive still did not attract bids.

The county recently put heavy steel mesh over the windows downstairs and upstairs, and cut down a tree that gave access to an upstairs window, in hopes of keeping trespassers out. The building is nearly impenetrable now.

The San Luis Obispo County Archaeological Society wants to save the building, to turn it into a museum displaying information about the Chumash Indians. They believe that this county is lacking in natural history museums.

Chief of Probation Don King believes that it would cost more to restore the building than it would cost to build a completely new one, but he is aware that some locals would like to save Sunny Acres as a historical landmark.

Crime Prevention Coordinator Steve Seybold said that although there have been a few incidents of vandalism and trespassing, the police are not constantly being called up there. Yet he said any abandoned building is a potential problem for the community.

The final decision of Sunny Acres fate will rest with developers. The county agreed to spend $15,000 to hire a consultant to help decide what to do with the land. They have decided to lease the land to a developer, who will then make any decisions about what should be done with it.

The former Iranian officer executed

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The former right-hand man of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's chosen successor was executed by a firing squad at dawn on Monday in a Tehran prison.

Mehdi Hashemi, charged with treason, died a victim of the power struggle in Iran's divided hierarchy. His execution indicates that "pragmatists" leaders who want to end Iran's isolation have gained the upper hand.

Tehran Radio, monitored in Nicosia, reported in a terse announcement that Hashemi was shot at 6 a.m.

Until his arrest last October on the orders of the powerful Parliament speaker, Hashemi Rafsanjani, Hashemi was the chief lieutenant of Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri, 55.

Montazeri is Rafsanjani's political rival. Khomeini, Iran's leader and revolutionary patriarch, chose Montazeri as his successor two years ago.

Hashemi's associates leaked word that Rafsanjani was deposing the United States to trade weapons for hostages held by Iranian-backed Shiite Muslims exhuming in Lebanon. The disclosure acutely embarrassed Rafsanjani.

Montazeri also led the Department of Islamic Liberation Movements, which directs Shiite militancy in Lebanon and in Persian Gulf Arab countries. He was believed to be involved in the kidnapping of foreigners held hostage in Lebanon.

Hashemi, a low-ranking general, was sentenced by an Islamic religious court after a three-day trial in August. He had appeared on state-run Iran Televisi growth and charging to confused including murder, kidnapping, assassinating weapons and plotting to overthrow the government.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, also monitored in Nicosia, reported Aug. 15 that the unidentified prosecutor in Hashemi's trial branded him a "corrupt of the earth who wages war on God." "That is the gravest crime under Islamic law," or Sharia.

His execution, despite Montazeri's intervention with Khomeini, was seen as boosting the standing of Rafsanjani. The speaker is the most powerful figure in Iran after the 87-year-old Khomeini.

The left-leaning Rafsanjani needs a faction that wants to end Iran's isolation. Its power struggle with radicals led by Prime Minister Hussein Musavi has intensified in recent months, and the position of Montazeri, another radical, apparently has weakened.

In 1973, six years before Khomeini's revolution toppled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, Montazeri was convicted of slandering a pro-shah religious figure, Ayatollah Shamsabadi.

He was sentenced to life in prison and freed in 1979 when the shah was overthrown.

But revolutionary authorities charged after his arrest last year that he had collaborated with SAVAK, the shah's secret police. Hashemi's brother Hadi is Montazeri's sole survivor of the revolution, Hashemi rose rapidly in the new regime.

His downfall began in October 1986 when his men kidnapped a Syrian diplomat in Tehran. Syria is Iran's key Arab ally, and the abduction embarrassed Rafsanjani.

After Hashemi was arrested, apparently with Khomeini's approval, his supporters leaked details of a clandestine meeting between Robert MacFarlane, President Reagan's former national security adviser, to the Beirut weekly Ash-Shara.

Four days later Rafsanjani, under pressure in Parliament, had to disclose the contacts with "the Great Satan," Iran's term for the United States.

Soon after, Hashemi was shown on Iranian television, which is run by Rafsanjani's younger brother Mohammed, confessing to seeking to overthrow Khomeini.

The government said he built up caches of weapons, along with cyanide and booby-trapped pens, that was the secret police, model airplanes, to assassinate opponents.

Montazeri's humiliation appeared complete less than a year later he has been reimposed to some degree of the press refers to him the "first leader of the Islamic Revolution."

His downfall began in October 1986 when his men kidnapped a Syrian diplomat in Tehran. Syria is Iran's key Arab ally, and the abduction embarrassed Rafsanjani.

After Hashemi was arrested, apparently with Khomeini's approval, his supporters leaked details of a clandestine meeting between Robert MacFarlane, President Reagan's former national security adviser, to the Beirut weekly Ash-Shara.

Four days later Rafsanjani, under pressure in Parliament, had to disclose the contacts with "the Great Satan," Iran's term for the United States.

Soon after, Hashemi was shown on Iranian television, which is run by Rafsanjani's younger brother Mohammed, confessing to seeking to overthrow Khomeini.

The government said he built up caches of weapons, along with cyanide and booby-trapped pens, that was the secret police, model airplanes, to assassinate opponents. A painful back injury has failed to spoil Claudia Hemmersbach's senior season

By Kristine J. Abbey
staff Writer

Not too long ago Cal Poly volleyball coach Mike Wilton thought he would have to start the 1987 volleyball season without veteran setter Claudia Hemmersbach, who was suffering from lingering back pain. But Hemmersbach did start the season and Wilton said she has been playing at the top of her game in spite of still experiencing some discomfort.

Hemmersbach, a senior, ruptured two disks in her back while practicing her jump serve in her sophomore year. She fought pain through last season but never missed a game.

"I'm seeing her move around the court as well as she has in her four-year career," said Wilton. "At first it was very iffy; in fact, we were pretty certain that she wasn't going to play. But as she started to try to work out she started to see that she could play."

"She didn't touch a volleyball from the end of last season until Aug. 13, and the setting position really demands a lot of practice, but she's setting as fine as ever."

Hemmersbach, however, said she is not playing without pain. She is taking painkillers and doing some strengthening exercises she learned during the offseason at a back school in Los Angeles.

"At the back school I relearned how to do everything — sit, walk, run and supposedly play volleyball — with my back in a neutral position," she said.

When the back is in a neutral position, the spine is in a straight line from the shoulders to the hips. Hemmersbach was advised to use muscles other than her back muscles to move with. Her doctor said she could play volleyball without pain or further injury by using this method, but Hemmersbach said the game is just too spontaneous to keep the neutral position.

Although Hemmersbach said the pain in her back is worse than it was at the beginning of last season, she has set high personal goals for her final season. She said she'd definitely like to make the all-league team and maybe even become an all-American.

As for the Lady Mustangs, Hemmersbach said they are See INJURY, page 11

Cal Poly hires new swimming coach

Richard Firman has been chosen to coach the Cal Poly men's and women's swim teams.

Firman, who coached swimming and diving at Concord High School last spring, replaces Bob Madrigal, who is pursuing graduate studies at the University of Oregon.

Firman received his bachelor's degree in psychology from Cal State Bakersfield in 1986 and his teaching credential from National University in Oakland.

Last year he was the head of a research team for United States Swimming Inc., working at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs. He also has served as a coach at Cal State Bakersfield, Northgate High School and for the Walnut Creek Aquabears.

INTERNSHIPS IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

Merrill Schwartz from the Washington Center will be on campus October 2 to discuss the Center's symposia and internship opportunities in Washington, D.C. Plan to attend one of the meetings held from 11-12 and 12-1 in Ag. 241.

The internship program is an exciting way for Cal Poly students from all majors to obtain valuable work experience and credits during Fall, Winter, Spring, or Summer Quarters. Internship placements, which correspond to your career aspirations are with over 1,000 federal and private agencies.

Ten returning starters look to improve on second-place finish

By Julie Williams
Staff Writer

If last year's performance by the Cal Poly men's soccer team is any indication of how things will go for the Mustangs this year, it promises to be a rewarding season.

With all but one starter returning from the 1986 team, the Mustangs are an experienced squad and feel ready to improve on last year's second-place finish in the California Collegiate Athletic Association.

Last year's schedule was a tough one and head coach Wolfgang Gartner said some bad breaks made it even tougher. The Mustangs finished 13-8 overall and 7-3 in the CCAA.

"Playingwise, we're better than we were last year," said Gartner, "and if things start to go our way, I think we will be very successful."

After tying Division 1 Stanford last Friday, the Mustangs' record is 2-3-1. One loss was to UC Santa Barbara, which recently fell to Stanford, 5-0. Another defeat was to Division I San Diego State and the third was to Humboldt State.

Gartner said the loss to Humboldt was particularly tough because it came at the end of a road trip and the Mustangs had expected to do well.

"They put one in the goal early, and although we had many chances, we just couldn't do the same," he said. "It had been a long trip and we were tired both physically and emotionally."

While on the road, the Mustangs also faced St. Mary's and Chico State. Gartner said the 3-1 win over Chico was his team's...

somewhat inexperienced compared with teams he has played with in previous years.

"It was fun when I came," she said. "There were a lot of experienced seniors. Now there are not too many older players for the younger ones to look up to. I'd like to see the playoffs and really play well and give the seniors winning and losing. If we play well we're going to win. It's when we're not focused and have the attention on us that we lose.

As team captain, Hemmert muscle a lot of stock in the mental aspect of the game and feels she has a leadership role on the team.

"Games are won when team members prepare for the games by deciding ahead of time how they will play," she said. "This kind of preparation comes with maturity. I think they look up to me because I've been around and know what's going on, plus being a senior is a kind of leader role. They look to me because I'm giving them the set.

After Grady Hall, Hemmert's first ambition is to finish school. She is a physical education major and plans to teach after graduation. She would love to teach in the area someday have a family.

From Redondo Beach, Hemmert was recruited out of high school by several large schools in Southern California, Pacific and Pepperdine but because of the scholarship she was offered, she liked the area and the team.

With or without back trouble, Hemmert's intensity remains undiminished. Although she said the pain gets worse every game, she intends to finish the season as strongly as she started it.

JANUARY 24TH 1988
San Francisco (AP) — A Superior Court judge Monday blocked the first California mountain lion hunt in 16 years after agreeing the state failed to adequately study the effects of the hunt.

Judge Lucy Kelly McCabe returned the case for further analysis by the state Fish and Game Commission, which approved the hunt for 190 mountain lions in a wide area of Northern- and Central California starting Oct. 10.

The ruling makes it unlikely that the hunt will begin as scheduled unless the state gets a moratorium.

Marilynn Bonin, spokeswoman for Gov. George Deukmejian's Department of Fish and Game, which backs the hunting plan, said no decision has been made on an appeal. She said the commission could consider the issue in a telephone conference Tuesday or a meeting Friday in Long Beach.

The ruling was praised by the Mountain Lion Coalition, whose members include the Sierra Club, Defenders of Wildlife Fund for Animals, the Wildlife Conservancy and the Animal Protection Institute.

The state commission did "what we thought was very poor research, and ignored our concerns about the impacts of this hunt," said coalition spokesman Bill Yantes. "This was nothing more than a commercialized trophy hunt."

National Rifle Association spokesman David Marshall contended opponents of the hunt have offered no credible evidence that the mountain lion population would be threatened.

"If any species is endangered or threatened, usually the sportsmen are the first ones to intervene," Marshall said in an interview. Noting that the state's game management program is funded by hunting and fishing license fees, he said opponents "want to control the agenda but not pay the freight."

The 79-day hunting season would be the first since 1971, when hunting of mountain lions — rewarded by a bounty only a few years earlier — was banned by the Legislature. A bill to extend the moratorium was vetoed by Gov. George Deukmejian in 1985, and attempts to reintroduce it were killed in an Assembly committee this year.

Hunting was not allowed, however, until a hunting season was approved by the Fish and Game Commission. The commission acted this April after the department reported the statewide mountain lion population had grown to 5,200 and would not be threatened by the killing of 190 lions.

Four hunting zones were established north of the Tehachapis, with the San Francisco Bay area excluded. Marshall said the 190 permits, at $75 each, had been drawn from more than 4,000 applicants.

The groups that filed suit contended the state failed to conduct a proper study of the impact of the hunt, not only on mountain lions but also on prey and habitat.

"Without ... that analysis, which includes such factors as the recent forest fires and destruction of habitat, the court has no evidence to infer that they've done their job" in protecting natural resources, said Michael Remy of Sacramento, a lawyer for the opposition groups.

THE RULED: The ruling makes it unlikely the hunt will begin as scheduled unless the state gets a moratorium.

Notables

Michael S. Frimmel, James Alder-Cruz and Kathleen Lazio were named as students of the year by Disabled Students Unlimited, a student-run organization at Cal Poly.

A new director of the Cal Poly Center for the Arts has been appointed. Ron S. Regier, executive director of The Commons in Columbus, will begin his duties on Oct. 1.

Cal Poly's Society of Black Engineers and Scientists was awarded the title of outstanding chapter in the 13-state western region of the student-run National Society of Black Engineers.

Cal Poly's Civil Engineering students were awarded the title of outstanding student chapter for the Los Angeles region by the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Cal Poly senior Matthew Allison studied genetic transposition of DNA in mice for 10 weeks this summer as part of the U.S. Department of Energy's Student Research Participation Program. He was one of 112 participants nationwide.

Three teachers from Cal Poly, Boyd Johnson of the Mathematics Department, Craig Russell, of the Music department and Calvin Willert, of the Social Sciences Department, were named as distinguished professors for the 1986-87 year. Each received $1,000 for the honor.

Ronald S. Mullisen, a mechanical engineering professor, has been chosen to receive the 1987 TRW Excellence in Teaching Award and the $4,000 check that goes with it.

Thanks to another major gift from the Hewlett-Packard Co., Cal Poly engineering students this fall will learn the basics of computer-aided design in a new engineering technology department laboratory.

During the general session of the annual Fall Conference on campus, the outstanding senior of the student chapter of Cal Poly's support staff were honored as the university's outstanding student employees. The people honored were Lee Brown of the Graphic Communication Department, Gary Ketchum of the University Farm and Frances Morgan of the Biological Sciences Department.

A Cal Poly senior is being honored as the nation's top university student in agricultural engineering, Katherine S. Peterson, has been selected as the Student Agricultural Engineer of the Year by the American Society of Agricultural Engineers.
