No solutions in sight for SLO’s homeless, only problems

California houses 10.9 percent of the nation’s homeless. There are 3 million homeless nationwide. At any time there are from 35 to 100 homeless in San Luis Obispo.

By Heidi Linkenbach

The homeless in San Luis Obispo have a problem and it’s not just that they have nowhere to live. The problem is that without permanent addresses, it is impossible to qualify for welfare, food stamps or subsidized housing grants.

Furthermore, children living with parents at a non-permanent address are unable to enroll in school.

There are some of the reasons that the city of San Luis Obispo agreed to shelter the homeless at a City Council meeting Thursday. The council also called on the council’s finance committee to pitch in, and asked the Board of Supervisors for a joint public meeting to find some solutions to the homeless problem.

The $10,000 will be given out to groups which house the homeless such as People’s Shelter, Zedakah and the Salvation Army.

At any time, there are from 35 to 100 homeless people citywide, said Hank Alberts, interim chairman of the San Luis Obispo County American Civil Liberties Union. The ACLU is a group of citizens organized to protect individuals whose civil liberties are being violated. In the case of the homeless, this includes the freedoms lost when they can’t get a job, receive an education or exercise basic rights, such as voting.

Robert McGinn, president of the San Luis Obispo Ministerial Association, contends that since the problem is countywide, the solution must be countywide. "We have the obligation to welcome the stranger into our midst," he said. His group helps the homeless by supplying food and temporary shelter. They are also beginning a program where each church in the city will shelter the homeless for one month. The Seventh-Day Adventist church will be the first to shelter the homeless, beginning in November.

The Zadakah House, another organization committed to helping the homeless, is really a bus, equipped with eight bunks, which picks up transients at Mitchell Park and drives them to the Atascadero State Park campground, where they can sleep peacefully and legally.

"We are not a rehab center," said Alberts. See HOMELESS, back pag

Scouts get together

New national organization exclusively forms at Poly and is looking for members for student and faculty Eagle Scouts

By Diane Wright

Students and faculty who are Eagle Scouts are being asked to join a national Eagle Scout chapter being formed at Cal Poly.

Tom Lebens, an electronic engineering major, is on a steering committee of the national organization and is trying to locate Eagle Scouts on campus.

Richard H. Schmidt, scout executive for the Santa Lucia Area Council of Boy Scouts of America said, "Our main purpose is to make the flame of scouting rekindle in people who have let it die over the years."

Schmidt said only 1 to 2 percent of all Boy Scouts nationwide attain the rank of Eagle Scout. The council’s list of Eagle Scouts in San Luis Obispo County contains more than 200 names and ranges from a man who earned the rank in 1925 to 20-year-old Cal Poly students.

About 25 Eagle Scouts and their guests attended a barbecue at Mission Plaza Friday.

"We had a good time meeting with each other," Lebens said.

Donald Cone, resources vice president and public relations representative of the Santa Lucia Area Council, said he is not aware of any other universities that have a national Eagle Scout chapter, but he said he assumes there are some.

Cone said Scout-A-Rama, which will be held at Mission Plaza on Nov. 7 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., might be of interest to Eagle Scouts at Cal Poly. Cone said it will show Eagle Scouts from other areas of California and the United States what Boy Scouts in the Santa Lucia Area Council are accomplishing.

Another event will be Camp-O-Ree-Camporal, which is scheduled for spring. Scouting groups compete with each other on levels of scouting skills at a series of challenges.

DUI enforcement officer stresses education, apprehension of drivers

By Coleen Bondy

Too close to the curb, the driver of the car ahead suddenly swerves to the middle of the street, overcorrecting for the mistake. The driver drifts slowly toward the curb again, and repeats the earlier movements.

Jean DuPuis, the new driving-under-the-influence enforcement officer for the San Luis Obispo Police Department, needs no more evidence than this driver may be having an alcohol-related problem. She pulls up close behind him, turns on the red and blue lights of the police car, and signals the driver to pull over.

Walking up to the window of the driver’s side, she asks him for his license and explains to him that he was swerving all over the road.

DuPuis asks him to please step out of the car. She faces him squarely and says, "Now I want you to be honest with me. How much have you had to drink tonight?"

The driver almost invariably answers two — two beers, two glasses of wine, or two cocktails. And he hasn’t had a drink for an hour or so.

She will continue with questions about how much sleep he had the night before, what he had for dinner, and over what period of time he was drinking. All of these factors play a role in how a person drives.

DuPuis then administers a series of tests. The driver is asked to walk a line, heel-to-toe, 10 steps forward and nine steps back. He is asked to stand with his feet together, eyes closed and head tilted to the stars.

Swaying gives him away, perhaps. Or else he fails to count from 60 to 70 forward, and 50 to 40 backward. Depending on how he performs on the tests, DuPuis must decide if she would want this person driving on the same road with someone she cared about. For his sake, and the sake of others, she must get the drunken driver off the road.

Last Saturday night, DuPuis pulled over about six or seven cars. One person was lost, looking for the freeway. He had been driving in the left-hand turn lane down Missionary. Another driver was too engrossed in a conversation to notice that she had run two stop signs.

Only one driver was deemed too intoxicated to drive, after he failed to take 10 steps forward and turn around and count out nine steps backward. He counted 16 steps in one direction, looked around confoundedly, and then counted from 16 to 24 back the other way. After performing poorly on a number of other tests, he was taken to the county jail for a breath test.

"We’re not out there to seek and destroy," said DuPuis of her job. She is the only officer who deals strictly with DUI enforcement, only called away when she is needed for backup.

DuPuis enjoys public speaking, which is probably a main reason for her being chosen to be the DUI enforcement officer for this year. The police department is stressing education and apprehension, two things that DuPuis feels strongly about. See DUI, back pag
At one time, during my travels to the many countries of this world, I happened upon a society whose culture was so unique and different, that I thought it might be worthy of discussion. As first glance, it might seem to be the same as any of the multitude of other societies on this planet. But, when considered more closely, it reveals its almost unbelievable oddities. It seems that its inhabitants worship, of all things, brussels sprouts. I know it's hard to believe, but legend has it that the forefathers of this culture can be traced down to two people and Dawn. These two people were simple vegetarians farmers when the world was first created, and they lived quiet lives. They resided in a place that was situated on the eastern-most border of a vast swamp.

Because the swamp did not offer a great variety of things to eat, they were constantly searching for new sources of food. Over the years, they had looked almost everywhere for something different, but they were never to enter a certain bog, known to them only as Ignorance. One day, when Dawn was out scouring for new foods, she happened to spot a peculiar-looking plant that she had never seen before. The only problem was that it was in the bog. So, in Ignorance, she picked one of the plant's seeds and quickly ran home and planted it.

All of a sudden, there arose a mighty voice from the ground, and it said unto Dawn, "Thou hast done a great deed. Thou hast set me free from Ignorance, so thou shalt be blessed in the eyes of all for your courageous act." The voice continued, "Thou shalt never again be burdened by searching for food. Thou shalt, from this point on, reside in a place of beauty and life, away from the grim days of the swamp. Thou shalt rule over your companions, for sprouts have shown you worthy." Dawn looked toward the voice in awe, and asked only one question of this entity: "What shall I call thee?" The voice replied, "I am the Rule Book."

This story has been handed down through many generations, and it has been this society's primary source for its cultural development. This is quite obvious when you consider, perhaps, a single family.

The woman is responsible for having the brussels sprouts, and each worship, of all things, brussels sprouts. It says that in was in the bog. So, in Ignorance, she picked one of the plant's seeds and quickly ran home and planted it.

All of a sudden, there arose a mighty voice from the ground, and it said unto Dawn, "Thou hast done a great deed. Thou hast set me free from Ignorance, so thou shalt be blessed in the eyes of all for your courageous act." The voice continued, "Thou shalt never again be burdened by searching for food. Thou shalt, from this point on, reside in a place of beauty and life, away from the grim days of the swamp. Thou shalt rule over your companions, for sprouts have shown you worthy." Dawn looked toward the voice in awe, and asked only one question of this entity: "What shall I call thee?" The voice replied, "I am the Rule Book."

This story has been handed down through many generations, and it has been this society's primary source for its cultural development. This is quite obvious when you consider, perhaps, a single family.

The woman is responsible for having the brussels sprouts, and each worship, of all things, brussels sprouts. It says that in was in the bog. So, in Ignorance, she picked one of the plant's seeds and quickly ran home and planted it.

All of a sudden, there arose a mighty voice from the ground, and it said unto Dawn, "Thou hast done a great deed. Thou hast set me free from Ignorance, so thou shalt be blessed in the eyes of all for your courageous act." The voice continued, "Thou shalt never again be burdened by searching for food. Thou shalt, from this point on, reside in a place of beauty and life, away from the grim days of the swamp. Thou shalt rule over your companions, for sprouts have shown you worthy." Dawn looked toward the voice in awe, and asked only one question of this entity: "What shall I call thee?" The voice replied, "I am the Rule Book."

This story has been handed down through many generations, and it has been this society's primary source for its cultural development. This is quite obvious when you consider, perhaps, a single family.

The woman is responsible for having the brussels sprouts, and each worship, of all things, brussels sprouts. It says that in was in the bog. So, in Ignorance, she picked one of the plant's seeds and quickly ran home and planted it.

All of a sudden, there arose a mighty voice from the ground, and it said unto Dawn, "Thou hast done a great deed. Thou hast set me free from Ignorance, so thou shalt be blessed in the eyes of all for your courageous act." The voice continued, "Thou shalt never again be burdened by searching for food. Thou shalt, from this point on, reside in a place of beauty and life, away from the grim days of the swamp. Thou shalt rule over your companions, for sprouts have shown you worthy." Dawn looked toward the voice in awe, and asked only one question of this entity: "What shall I call thee?" The voice replied, "I am the Rule Book."

This story has been handed down through many generations, and it has been this society's primary source for its cultural development. This is quite obvious when you consider, perhaps, a single family.

The woman is responsible for having the brussels sprouts, and each worship, of all things, brussels sprouts. It says that in was in the bog. So, in Ignorance, she picked one of the plant's seeds and quickly ran home and planted it.

All of a sudden, there arose a mighty voice from the ground, and it said unto Dawn, "Thou hast done a great deed. Thou hast set me free from Ignorance, so thou shalt be blessed in the eyes of all for your courageous act." The voice continued, "Thou shalt never again be burdened by searching for food. Thou shalt, from this point on, reside in a place of beauty and life, away from the grim days of the swamp. Thou shalt rule over your companions, for sprouts have shown you worthy." Dawn looked toward the voice in awe, and asked only one question of this entity: "What shall I call thee?" The voice replied, "I am the Rule Book."

This story has been handed down through many generations, and it has been this society's primary source for its cultural development. This is quite obvious when you consider, perhaps, a single family.

The woman is responsible for having the brussels sprouts, and each worship, of all things, brussels sprouts. It says that in was in the bog. So, in Ignorance, she picked one of the plant's seeds and quickly ran home and planted it.

All of a sudden, there arose a mighty voice from the ground, and it said unto Dawn, "Thou hast done a great deed. Thou hast set me free from Ignorance, so thou shalt be blessed in the eyes of all for your courageous act." The voice continued, "Thou shalt never again be burdened by searching for food. Thou shalt, from this point on, reside in a place of beauty and life, away from the grim days of the swamp. Thou shalt rule over your companions, for sprouts have shown you worthy." Dawn looked toward the voice in awe, and asked only one question of this entity: "What shall I call thee?" The voice replied, "I am the Rule Book."

This story has been handed down through many generations, and it has been this society's primary source for its cultural development. This is quite obvious when you consider, perhaps, a single family.
State

Bakersfield police face riot after Fat Boys gig canceled

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Police officers were met by a barrage of rocks and bottles when they formed a skirmish line and pushed back a crowd of 2,000 that roared when a Fat Boys concert was canceled.

Several members of the crowd at the Kern County Fairgrounds earlier pulled the event's promoter from his car, beat him and overthrew the vehicle, according to a sheriff's statement.

At least three concert-goers were arrested after Sunday night's melee on charges ranging from failing to disperse to felony assault on a peace officer and felony assault on a police dog, according to Kern County sheriff's Sgt. Win Leijder.

The cancellation announcement came about 90 minutes after the scheduled start of the show, according to witnesses.

At the same time, a group of concert-goers spotted the promoter, Marvin Adams of Hollywood, getting into his 1985 Mercedes with show receipts.

"Then they pulled him out and beat him up," said Darice Powell, 14. "He was all bloody."

Man who killed 7 in rampage denied release from hospital

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A judge ruled Monday that a former Cal State Fullerton junior, who killed seven people during a library shooting rampage 11 years ago, was unfit for release from a state mental hospital.

Orange County Superior Court Judge Donald McCartin said Edward Allaway, 47, had not recovered sufficiently for release from high-security Atascadero State Hospital, where he has been confined since his trial ended in 1977.

Jurors found Allaway innocent by reason of insanity after the 1976 campus massacre in which he killed seven people during a library shooting rampage 11 years ago, was unfit for release from a state mental hospital.

Orange County Superior Court Judge Donald McCartin said Edward Allaway, 47, had not recovered sufficiently for release from high-security Atascadero State Hospital, where he has been confined since his trial ended in 1977.

In a wide-ranging announcement speech in his hometown of Houston, the vice president signaled that he would keep closely to President Reagan's major policy stands, both in domestic and foreign policy areas.

Nation

Bush announces candidacy, offers U.S. stable leadership

HOUSTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush, saying America needs strong and stable leadership instead of "radical new directions," today declared his candidacy for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination.

"For seven years now, I have been with a president, and I have seen what crosses that big desk," Bush said. "And who should sit at that desk? I am that man."

Japanese researcher awarded Nobel prize for disease work

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Susumu Tonegawa, a Japanese researcher working in the United States, won the Nobel Prize in medicine Monday for discovering how the body makes millions of antibodies to fight disease.

His findings could help improve vaccines and make organ transplants safer, said the Nobel Assembly of the Karolinska Institute, which awards the prize.

Hans Wigzell of the institute said Tonegawa's research also may be significant in fighting such diseases as acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS, which destroys the body's immune system.

At the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge, where he has worked since 1981, the 48-year-old Tonegawa, a Japanese researcher working in the United States, won the Nobel Prize in medicine Monday for discovering how the body makes millions of antibodies to fight disease.

"The problem of how our body can respond to so many different kinds of pathogens was one of the most badly debated issues in immunology. We did not understand how that happened."

"It turned out that, contrary to what many people thought, genes can change during the life cycle of the individual."

World

Man returns to S. Vietnam to bring back lost daughter

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Former U.S. Army medic Barry Huntoon left Monday for Vietnam to bring back the half-Vietnamese girl he fathered 15 years ago but has never met.

Huntoon, of Paradise, Calif., departed on an Air France flight for Ho Chi Minh City to bring back Tran Thi Tuyet Mai, whose face he saw for the first time in the picture magazine Life two years ago.

He had left behind his Vietnamese girlfriend, nine-month-old Tran Mai, and returned to the United States in 1972 after completing his tour of duty.

Accompanying Huntoon, 38, was attorney Bruce Burns, who helped him try to resettle Mai and six other half-Vietnamese children of other fathers. Burns works for American Registry, a private voluntary agency in San Jose, Calif., that helps reunite so-called Amerasians with their American fathers.

Huntoon said he lost all contact with his girlfriend after the war ended in 1975 as the Communists overran the U.S.-backed South Vietnam government.

Man who killed 7 in rampage denied release from hospital

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A judge ruled Monday that a former Cal State Fullerton junior, who killed seven people during a library shooting rampage 11 years ago, was unfit for release from a state mental hospital.

Orange County Superior Court Judge Donald McCartin said Edward Allaway, 47, had not recovered sufficiently for release from high-security Atascadero State Hospital, where he has been confined since his trial ended in 1977.

Jurors found Allaway innocent by reason of insanity after the 1976 campus massacre in which he killed seven people during a library shooting rampage 11 years ago, was unfit for release from a state mental hospital.

Orange County Superior Court Judge Donald McCartin said Edward Allaway, 47, had not recovered sufficiently for release from high-security Atascadero State Hospital, where he has been confined since his trial ended in 1977.

In a wide-ranging announcement speech in his hometown of Houston, the vice president signaled that he would keep closely to President Reagan's major policy stands, both in domestic and foreign policy areas.

Japanese researcher awarded Nobel prize for disease work

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Susumu Tonegawa, a Japanese researcher working in the United States, won the Nobel Prize in medicine Monday for discovering how the body makes millions of antibodies to fight disease.

His findings could help improve vaccines and make organ transplants safer, said the Nobel Assembly of the Karolinska Institute, which awards the prize.

Hans Wigzell of the institute said Tonegawa's research also may be significant in fighting such diseases as acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS, which destroys the body's immune system.

At the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge, where he has worked since 1981, the 48-year-old Tonegawa, a Japanese researcher working in the United States, won the Nobel Prize in medicine Monday for discovering how the body makes millions of antibodies to fight disease.

"The problem of how our body can respond to so many different kinds of pathogens was one of the most badly debated issues in immunology. We did not understand how that happened."

"It turned out that, contrary to what many people thought, genes can change during the life cycle of the individual."

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Former U.S. Army medic Barry Huntoon left Monday for Vietnam to bring back the half-Vietnamese girl he fathered 15 years ago but has never met.

Huntoon, of Paradise, Calif., departed on an Air France flight for Ho Chi Minh City to bring back Tran Thi Tuyet Mai, whose face he saw for the first time in the picture magazine Life two years ago.

He had left behind his Vietnamese girlfriend, nine-month-old Tran Mai, and returned to the United States in 1972 after completing his tour of duty.

Accompanying Huntoon, 38, was attorney Bruce Burns, who helped him try to resettle Mai and six other half-Vietnamese children of other fathers. Burns works for American Registry, a private voluntary agency in San Jose, Calif., that helps reunite so-called Amerasians with their American fathers.

Huntoon said he lost all contact with his girlfriend after the war ended in 1975 as the Communists overran the U.S.-backed South Vietnam government.
Jackson’s campaign not reminiscent of 1984

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Jesse Jackson’s 1984 presidential race posed a dilemma for black political leaders that was as stark in Alabama as anywhere in the nation.

That dilemma — whether to stand by the first black man to run for president or support a more electable, white candidate — literally split apart Alabama’s black community. Elsewhere, black leaders were also torn between Jackson and Walter F. Mondale, the Democratic front-runner with a long history of support for black causes.

As Jackson begins his 1988 campaign, he faces the Democratic field, at least in the public opinion polls, and the “new” Jesse is running a mainstream campaign and striking a more conciliatory tone.

“1984 is behind us. 1984 has nothing to do with tonight. 1988 behind Mondale and Gary Hart. The ADC’s decision split the powerful caucus. Older, political-ly experienced members maintained their allegiance to the group while Jackson’s supporters — mostly young and middle-aged professionals — left to form a new political network, the Alabama New South Coalition. Jackson’s 1988 campaign team in Alabama includes many new South members, but Friday night he attempted to pick up ADC support by attending an informal reception with more than 100 members.

“I’d like to think whatever friction existed in 1984 has been ironed out for the better,” ADC Chairman Joe Reed said.

Tuskegee Mayor Johnny Ford agreed. “At this point Jackson has the edge” for the ADC endorsement, he said.

See JACKSON, page 5

SCOUTS

From page 1 weekend camp at Camp French on Lopez Lake.

A fraternity called Alpha Phi Omega existed at Cal Poly several years ago. This fraternity was for former Boy Scouts, but not specifically for Eagle Scouts. Cone said at one time in the past, it could stand on its own legs.” Jackson said Friday night at a reception in Montgomery designed to heal some of the wounds left by his first campaign.

In 1984, Alabama’s black political leader, the Alabama Democratic Conference, endorsed Mondale because Jackson was late entering the race and lacked a strong organization. Jackson ended up third in Alabama.

As Jackson begins his 1988 campaign, he faces the Democratic field, at least in the public opinion polls, and the “new” Jesse is running a mainstream campaign and striking a more conciliatory tone.

“1984 is behind us. 1984 has nothing to do with tonight. 1988 behind Mondale and Gary Hart. The ADC’s decision split the powerful caucus. Older, political-ly experienced members maintained their allegiance to the group while Jackson’s supporters — mostly young and middle-aged professionals — left to form a new political network, the Alabama New South Coalition. Jackson’s 1988 campaign team in Alabama includes many new South members, but Friday night he attempted to pick up ADC support by attending an informal reception with more than 100 members.

“I’d like to think whatever friction existed in 1984 has been ironed out for the better,” ADC Chairman Joe Reed said.

Tuskegee Mayor Johnny Ford agreed. “At this point Jackson has the edge” for the ADC endorsement, he said.

See JACKSON, page 5

TONIGHT

Tuesday, October 13 6–9 pm.

Wear Your P.J.'s and Save 20%.

The fun begins at 6 pm Tonight when El Corral Bookstore will re-open with a Special P.J. Party Discount Sale, just for you!

So Bring all your friends to the P.J. Party and have a great time! We'll have some surprises and a gift for each person wearing pajamas to the Bookstore.

From 6 pm until 9 pm, wear your P.J.'s and you will save 20% off the lowest marked price on all Clothing, Gifts, Greeting Cards, School Supplies, Paper Goods, Craft Supplies, Jewelry, Drafting, Technical Equipment, Computer Supplies, Batteries, Film and much more.

Also Save 20% on our full selection of Halloween Costumes, Audio Products, Cosmetics, Stationery, T-Shirts, Cal Poly Imprinted and many other items from our regular stock.

In addition you can take advantage of our everyday savings of 35% off the publishers suggested price on many Hardbound Best Seller Books and 10% from the suggested price on all Magazines, Leisure Reading and non-text Reference Books.

This sale is Tonight, October 13 from 6 pm until 9 pm only and is limited to our existing stock, so wear your pajamas to El Corral Bookstore, have some fun with your friends and save 20%.

RIDE THE CITY BUS FREE ALL YEAR

• unlimited rides, anytime, anywhere
• just show your Cal Poly ID to our driver
• for info or to have a bus schedule mailed to your home, phone 541-BUSS
• this program is a joint venture between Cal Poly and the City of SLO

El Corral Bookstore
Poly's place in space
Aeronautical engineering students design award-winning space vehicle

By Kristy Rosencratz

A group of 10 Cal Poly aeronautical engineering students are building a vehicle that can be attached to a space station for use in an emergency. The project will allow astronauts to "jump in and zip back to earth," said Lang. Lang said because Cal Poly does not have a consciousness within the department which focuses on space research and design, a lot of the research had to be learned from scratch.

The students spent approximately 1,500 hours developing proposals for the vehicle's nine systems — electrical power, communications, structure, formation and data management, thermal protection, environmental control, navigation guidance and control and propulsion.

Other team members who worked on the project were Christopher Brown, Nasser Khan, David Mounkes, Alexander Osov, Lee Peron, Lisa Won and juniors Joyce Byrne and Stephanie Los. The students were advised on the project by mechanical engineering professor William Patterson.

Former deliveryman paints rice accurately

WEST FRANKFORT, 111. (AP) — Many painters think of themselves as starving artists, but David Stevens is one of the few who can actually eat his work. One day you paint the Statue of Liberty on a grain of rice, the next you paint the ocean scene with a bright yellow sunset, a tiny island with palm trees and a gannet.

"If I thought with the smallest surface it won't take long," Stevens said. "In a couple of hours, I have a finished product." Stevens is an unemployed deliveryman whose formal artistic training consists of a single high school art class. Stevens discovered his knack one day about three years ago when he was bored and his wife, who painted ceramics, had a single grain of rice.

"At the risk of sounding vain, but I think I've got a talent that's probably leaning toward Jesse Jackson," he said. "That's fine. But the day you paint the Statue of Liberty on a grain of rice, you can't be dismissed as it was in 1984. "Rev. Jackson has done a better job of organizing. His campaign is being viewed as more serious," he said. Stevens obrines, though the See RICE, page 9

Jackson

From page 4

Ford backed Mondale in 1984 because, he said, Jackson had no chance.

"This time," he said, "you're looking at a new Jesse Jackson. He's much more mature and he's appealing to a broader base — working class whites." Ford, president of the World Conference of Mayors and a long-time political force in Alabama, said he has started focusing on economics, which is the issue of concern to blacks and whites, and has learned how to sell himself to Southerners, who will choose a third of the nation's congressional delegates next March 8.

"Jesse is more conservative than he was four years ago," Ford said.

Another ADC member, state Rep. John Buskey, agreed with Ford that "this group is probably leaning toward Jesse Jackson. One reason is none of the other candidates have stood out above the crowd."

Buskey added that when the ADC meets Dec. 5 to endorse a candidate, Jackson's campaign can't be dismissed as it was in 1984. "Reverend Jackson has done a better job of organizing. His campaign is being viewed as more serious," he said.

Buskey's brother, state Rep. James Buskey, was one of the Jackson supporters who left the ADC to form the Alabama New South Coalition. The Mobile politician has not, however, jumped on the Jackson bandwagon.

"Even though the New South broke with the old organization over Jesse Jackson's candidacy, the New South has gone in a new direction," he said.

James Buskey rates Jackson the front-runner in Alabama, but he said his strength is concentrated in three of the state's seven congressional districts. Because Alabama's delegation selection system is based on congressional districts, Jackson "may get the most popular vote but he won't win the most delegates," James Buskey said.

Also, James Buskey said, "I do not think Jesse Jackson can get the majority of the delegates to the Democratic National Convention. Because of that, he said, the New South Coalition must "have a viable slate" of candidates that can appeal to both blacks and whites. "Jesse is a viable candidate. We have a viable slate." Buskey added that when the ADC meets Dec. 5 to endorse a candidate, Jackson's campaign can't be dismissed as it was in 1984, "Reverend Jackson has done a better job of organizing. His campaign is being viewed as more serious," he said.

Buskey's brother, state Rep. James Buskey, was one of the Jackson supporters who left the ADC to form the Alabama New South Coalition. The Mobile politician has not, however, jumped on the Jackson bandwagon.

"Even though the New South broke with the old organization over Jesse Jackson's candidacy, the New South has gone in a new direction," he said.

James Buskey rates Jackson the front-runner in Alabama, but he said his strength is concentrated in three of the state's seven congressional districts. Because Alabama's delegation selection system is based on congressional districts, Jackson "may get the most popular vote but he won't win the most delegates," James Buskey said.

Also, James Buskey said, "I do not think Jesse Jackson can get the majority of the delegates to the Democratic National Convention. Because of that, he said, the New South Coalition must "have a viable slate" of candidates that can appeal to both blacks and whites. "Jesse is a viable candidate. We have a viable slate." Buskey added that when the ADC meets Dec. 5 to endorse a candidate, Jackson's campaign can't be dismissed as it was in 1984, "Reverend Jackson has done a better job of organizing. His campaign is being viewed as more serious," he said.

Buskey's brother, state Rep. James Buskey, was one of the Jackson supporters who left the ADC to form the Alabama New South Coalition. The Mobile politician has not, however, jumped on the Jackson bandwagon.

"Even though the New South broke with the old organization over Jesse Jackson's candidacy, the New South has gone in a new direction," he said.

James Buskey rates Jackson the front-runner in Alabama, but he said his strength is concentrated in three of the state's seven congressional districts. Because Alabama's delegation selection system is based on congressional districts, Jackson "may get the most popular vote but he won't win the most delegates," James Buskey said.

Also, James Buskey said, "I do not think Jesse Jackson can get the majority of the delegates to the Democratic National Convention. Because of that, he said, the New South Coalition must "have a viable slate" of candidates that can appeal to both blacks and whites. "Jesse is a viable candidate. We have a viable slate." Buskey added that when the ADC meets Dec. 5 to endorse a candidate, Jackson's campaign can't be dismissed as it was in 1984, "Reverend Jackson has done a better job of organizing. His campaign is being viewed as more serious," he said.

Buskey's brother, state Rep. James Buskey, was one of the Jackson supporters who left the ADC to form the Alabama New South Coalition. The Mobile politician has not, however, jumped on the Jackson bandwagon.

"Even though the New South broke with the old organization over Jesse Jackson's candidacy, the New South has gone in a new direction," he said.

James Buskey rates Jackson the front-runner in Alabama, but he said his strength is concentrated in three of the state's seven congressional districts. Because Alabama's delegation selection system is based on congressional districts, Jackson "may get the most popular vote but he won't win the most delegates," James Buskey said.
Mustang Daily Classified Advertising Order Form

Name ______________________________
Address ______________________________
Telephone __________________ Date __________
Social Security # _______________________

Ad starts _______ Times to run _______
Ads turned in by 10 AM may start running on:
Monday .............................................
Tuesday .............................................
Wednesday ........................................
Thursday .........................................
Friday .............................................

Check appropriate classification:
1 Campus Clubs
3 Announcements
5 Personals
7 Green News
9 Events
11 Lost & Found
13 Wanted
15 Services
17 Typing
19 Miscellaneous
21 Travel
23 Ride Share
25 Opportunities
27 Employment
29 For Sale
31 Stereo Equipment
33 Mopeds & Cycles
35 Bicycles
37 Automobiles
39 Roommates
41 Rental Housing
43 Homes for Sale

To calculate cost of ad: (Two line minimum per day)
Number of lines used below _______ X $ _______ per line = $ _______
Bold lines _______ days = $ _______

Total Amount Due = $ _______

Amount Paid $ _______
Check # ___ Date ___

AD RATES
(2-Line Minimum)
Ad runs 1-3 days . . . $ 1 per line per day
4-5 days . . . 90c per line per day
6 + days . . . 80c per line per day

Classified Advertising Policies
All classified advertising is subject to final approval by the General Manager of Mustang Daily and may be rejected by the General Manager for any reason prior to deadline. Classified advertising for Mustang Daily is accepted with the provision that, in the event of error, Mustang Daily will not assume any responsibility for credit or financial remuneration beyond the cost of the advertisement in question.

Write your ad copy here

PETROLEUM PRODUCTS, NORTH AMERICA
MANAGEMENT DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

All December and May graduates are cordially invited to attend a presentation on career opportunities with PP, NA.

DATE: Tuesday, October 13, 1987
TIME: 7:00 - 9:00 PM
PLACE: Staff Dining Hall, Room B

* DEGREES SOUGHT

BS or MS in Chemical, Civil, Industrial, Mechanical, or Petroleum Engineering
MBA’s with an Undergraduate Engineering Degree

new balance
735
Lightweight breathable
upper, tri-density
compression molded
EVA midsole.
Sold in 1986 for $80

39.99
A PAIR

Quantities & sizes limited to stock on hand. We reserve the right to refuse sales to dealers. Visa & Master Card accepted.

Copeland's Sports
962 Monterey
San Luis Obispo, 543-3663
Mon-Fri 9:30-6, Thurs til 9, Sat 10-7, Sun 10-6

PRICES GOOD THRU 10/18/87
S. Korean government approves reformed constitution

SEUL, South Korea (AP) — The National Assembly overwhelmingly approved a new constitution Monday that would allow direct presidential elections and bring other democratic reforms following stormy demonstrations last June.

Government and opposition legislators joined to pass the measure by a 254-4 vote. It would then become law when a new president is scheduled to take office.

"We hope it will lay down a firm foundation for our march toward democratization and politics through dialogue," said Rep. Kim Hyun-kyu, floor leader of the main opposition Reunification Democratic Party.

It was the first constitution jointly drafted by rival political groups since South Korea won independence in 1945. The new constitution strengthens the role of parliament by reducing the power of the president and restoring parliamentary rights to audit and inspect state affairs. It also improves provisions for press freedom and a free labor movement.

It was rewritten after President Chun Doo-hwan bowed to opposition demands to hold direct presidential elections and enact other political reforms after nationwide anti-government protests in June.

The opposition complained that the old electoral college system of choosing a president favored the party in power.

An election, the first direct presidential balloting in 16 years, will be held before Dec. 20 to pick a successor to Chun, whose term expires Feb. 24.

Roh Tae-woo, president of the governing party, and Kim Young-sam, president of the Reunification Democratic Party, have declared they will run.

Kim Dae-jung, also of the Reunification Democrats, is expected to announce his candidacy soon. Kim Jong-pil, a former prime minister under the late president Park Chung-hee, also has indicated he would run.

Ahead growing concern that the split between Kim Young-sam and Kim Dae-jung would benefit Roh, 13 members of the opposition party called Monday for the selection of a single candidate by a party ballot showdown.

The lawmakers from Reunification party factions controlled by each of the two Kims renewed proposals that they share power in accordance with the result of a presidential party convention. If one runs in the election, the other could serve as party president, they said.

The two Kims had pledged only one of them would run for president, but then each asked the other to bow out of the race.

"If both Kims decide to run for president, we will make an important decision," the legislators said. The lawmakers did not elaborate.

Chinese police are keeping the quiet in Tibet

LHASA, Tibet (AP) — Nema Tsering said Tuesday that Chinese authorities have kept the quiet in Tibet following stormy demonstrations last month.

"I've seen the posters," he said. "We believe in peaceful understanding."

Tibetans to live together peacefully because of their differences in religious beliefs, Nema Tsering said. "Our lifestyle and their state of mind is not free." He said even the highest standard of living the Chinese authorities are trying to achieve is not adequate compensation.

"The Lamas say, living is not enough. Freedom is most important. Even though life is better than before, our hearts are not at rest," he said.

"The Chinese say our lives are better than before," he said. "But our hearts are not as peaceful as before. In the past, life was not good, but now our state of mind is not free."

He stopped and looked off to where his fellow monks were seated in a row in front of hundreds of flickering candles, swaying to the rhythmic chanting of prayers and mantras.

China for centuries. They blamed the disturbances on former prisoners and followers of the Dalai Lama who ignore the feelings of the Tibetan people.

Nema Tsering explained that monks were at the forefront of the battle because they broke all personal ties upon entering the monastery and were in a better position to sacrifice for the sake of independence.

More than 100 monks were arrested for joining demonstrations. Most have since been released.

Nema Tsering, a monk for two years, did not consider violence the right path to independence. He said Tibetans look to the United States and other countries to help convince the Chinese government to support China's claims to Tibet.

He said that once the Chinese see their interpretation of history is wrong, Chinese and Tibetans can discuss the issue of an independent Tibet and reach a peaceful understanding.

However, Tibetans will never settle for anything less than independence with the Dalai Lama as religious and political leader, he said.

The Dalai Lama, considered a god-king by Tibetans, fled China in 1959 after a massacre of 150,000 Tibetans by government forces.

It is impossible for Chinese and Tibetans to live together peacefully because of their differences in religious beliefs, Nema Tsering said.

"Our lifestyle and their lifestyle are completely opposite," he said. "We believe in Buddhism, they don't."

In recent years, the Chinese government restored and reopened many temples severely damaged during the chaotic decade of the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution. It also allowed Tibetans to follow their religious practice, but Nema Tsering said the religious freedom they were given is not enough.

"They've spent a lot of money restoring the temples, but it can't compensate for what was destroyed," he said.

He said even the highest standard of living the Chinese authorities are trying to achieve is not adequate compensation.

"The Lamas say, living is not enough. Freedom is most important. Even though life is better than before, our hearts are not at rest," he said.

"The Chinese say our lives are better than before," he said. "But our hearts are not as peaceful as before. In the past, life was not good, but now our state of mind is not free."

He stopped and looked off to where his fellow monks were seated in a row in front of hundreds of flickering candles, swaying to the rhythmic chanting of prayers and mantras.
BASF T-120 Video Panda Pack
manuf. sugg. retail $48.75
$26.95

Ray-O-Vac AA Batteries 2 pack
manuf. sugg. retail $2.10/2 pack
$1.49/2 pack

Sharp PA-3100E Typewriter
manuf. sugg. retail $199.95
$139.95

Maxell XL II90 Cassette
manuf. sugg. retail $3.15
$1.99

BELL Phones
Bell Roommate* Telephone
available in assorted colors
manuf. sugg. retail $29.95

Sony WM-68 Walkman®
(assorted colors)
manuf. sugg. retail $69.95
$44.95

STUDENT SWEEPSSTAKES
First Prize Quadrunner from TDK
Second Prize Microwave from Sharp
Third Prize Pocket TV from Casio

Grand Prize Toyota Supra from Maxell

Fantastic Prizes! Savings Galore!

maxell
RICE

From page 5

would-be customer disappeared.

Stevens says that, without using a magnifying glass, he can paint the Statue of Liberty — down to the miniature yellow torch — in 15 minutes. It measures one-quarter of an inch tall, and one-sixteenth of an inch wide.

To paint detail, he uses a brush with only two or three hairs. He glues the rice grain to a piece of cardboard to keep it steady. During a recent interview, he painted a Canada goose in flight in about 10 minutes, from its tiny black beak to its plumage of gray, white and black against a light blue sky.

Other pieces include 12 mallards in flight on a single grain, artist's signature included. And a tuxedo-clad gentleman before a grand piano, with candles burning on a candelabra.

"What's so frustrating about it is I found my niche in life, but I can't use it," Stevens said. "I can't make a living off it."

"I've cornered the market on a non-existing market."

The most he has gotten for his works at art shows in this town of 10,000 in southern Illinois is $30 for one rice grain, with $5 sales more common.

In addition to rice and rocks, Stevens said he painted the face of a watch for a friend obsessed with game show celebrity Vanna White. He painted a nude portrait of Ms. White from the waist up.

"His boss told him he couldn't wear it," Stevens said, "because he works in a retail store."

"He brought it back and I painted a negligee on it. Now he can wear it."

Class Encounters

Late last Saturday night this party was a zoo. Let's get out of here and head for Taco Bell for a quiet snack...

Minutes later...

Two great ways to cruise through the semester.

The hand on the left is poised on what could be the most essential part of your education.

A Macintosh® computer.

And the hand on the right is gripping pure, simple, unadulterated fun.

A Honda Scooter. One we're giving away.

All you have to do for a chance to drive it away is visit your campus computer center and fill out an entry form. While you're there, take a Macintosh for a test drive.

Because Macintosh can help you write term papers, categorize elements of the periodic table, plot the rise and fall of pork-laden prices, compile computer code, and talk to other computers. And the first 250 people on campus who get behind a mouse, so to speak, will receive a nice Apple® memo board.

So head over to your campus computer center today. And ask about our Student Financing Program. Who knows? You may soon find yourself cruising a little farther than you expected.

Apple. Test drive a Macintosh. You may ride away on a Honda Scooter.

Take a 5-minute demonstration

Enter Now - October 22
Electronics Festival

EPSON

Epson Elite 100 Typewriter
- Manufacturer suggested retail price: $249.95
- Special price: $159.95

Casio

FX-7000G Scientific Calculator
- Manufacturer suggested retail price: $79.95
- Special price: $69.99

Texas Instruments

TI-74 Programmable Calculator
- Manufacturer suggested retail price: $135.00
- Special price: $109.99

TI-95 Programmable Scientific Calculator (not pictured)
- Manufacturer suggested retail price: $200.00
- Special price: $167.95

BASF

LH-60 Cassette
- Manufacturer suggested retail price: $1.15
- Special price: $.79

LH-90 Cassette
- Manufacturer suggested retail price: $1.42
- Special price: $.99

SONY

ICF-A-10W Clock Radio (assorted colors)
- Manufacturer suggested retail price: $44.95
- Special price: $29.95

Hewlett Packard

HP-12C Financial Calculator
- Manufacturer suggested retail price: $99.00
- Special price: $69.99 (net price after rebate)
- $10.00 rebate coupon when you purchase an HP-12C.

Sony

3-1/2" DSDD, 10 pack
- Special price: $19.95/10 pack

5-1/4" DSDD, 10 pack
- Special price: $8.95/10 pack

El Corral Bookstore

In the University Union Building
- Mon-Fri: 7:45AM-4:30PM
- Sat: 10:30AM-2:30PM

El Corral Bookstore

In the University Union Building
- Mon-Fri: 7:45AM-4:30PM
- Sat: 10:30AM-2:30PM
Deadline for Rec Sports tennis tournament is Thursday

Rec Sports will be taking applications for its singles tennis tournament until 4 p.m. Thursday. The tournament is scheduled for 9 a.m. Saturday and Sunday at the tennis courts. There will be both men's and women's divisions. The levels are advanced, for those with high school or college experience, intermediate and beginner.

The entry fee is $1 and each participant must provide one can of balls. Applications will be accepted at the Rec Sports office.
HOMELESS

From page 1
Ellen Cavalier with the Zadakah House. "Violent people are not alloted on our bus. Fifty percent of the people we serve would not be suitable for employment because they just don't have the mental capacity to hold down a job." The other 50 percent are people who need transitional housing. They need more of a long-term, temporary shelter where they can pull themselves together and get back on their feet before they go out looking for jobs. The Zadakah House is funded by private donations and by the Salvation Army.

The Salvation Army is in the process of petitioning the city for a permit to operate a temporary shelter for up to 35 people from November through April. The shelter would provide mostly transitional housing and offer adult education.

Part of the problem that families face is the lack of subsidized housing in San Luis Obispo. Though the cost of living on the Central Coast is accelerating at a rapid pace, jobs continue to offer low wages with few or no benefits. Even with two incomes, families with children have a hard time making ends meet because of the high rent. Mobile homes, typically the cheapest housing available, can't be rented (legally) to families with children. There are families who are living in the campgrounds at Lopez Lake, whose children cannot attend school because they don't have a permanent address. Often these families have been evicted from former residences because of discrimination against their children, or because of the tenant's inability to pay rent.

According to Joel Dillinger of the California Rural Legal Assistance, it costs a minimum of $1,500 to get into a permanent home after being evicted. "I attribute this to the failure of the city to enable a countywide housing authority that would prevent unauthorized evictions by landlords," he said. "They (the city) are too busy fixing potholes in the street. People who apply for welfare are handed a stack of papers a half-inch thick, which are almost impossibly to fill out and many applicants don't have the mental capacity to fill them out. You need a lawyer these days to fill out a welfare application.

The food stamp people are the same way," continued Dillinger. "They want to be sure that recipients can't pull themselves together and start cooking the food, yet most of them won't go down to the creek bed to look at the tin pan and fire that some people have to use.

Another problem is busing. Often cities pay for the homeless to be bussed to Los Angeles or San Francisco to meet with the street people in those cities. When President Reagan goes to his ranch in Santa Barbara, the street people are bussed up to San Luis Obispo. When the Pope passed through Los Angeles the pattern was repeated.

California houses 10.9 percent of the nation's homeless, according to Jan Bradford of the California Special Training Institute. There are 3 million homeless nationwide, up from 2.5 million in 1944.

"The average time someone is on welfare in California is 18 months. There are no third generation welfare recipients here, as there are in the East," she said. One of the main reasons why people go on welfare is the 30 percent drop-out rate in high school. Forty percent of the drop-outs are women. While it may seem that there are many groups offering help to the homeless, those who look for help are not always welcomed with open arms. Michael Allen, a senior biology major, and his roommates found that out the hard way. "One of my roommate Jim's friends brought this guy over and asked us if he could sleep at our house for a couple nights because he didn't have anywhere else to go. Our house policy is that we let someone spend two nights on our couch, and then he has to get out."

What Allen and his roommate didn't know was that the guy was in a wheelchair. "Besides the imposition of having a stranger in our house, the fact that he had to rely on us to bathe him and do other things for him, because he couldn't reach cupboards or the freezer, was a real pain," he said. "It was like baby-sitting."

Although Allen and his roommates repeatedly told their guest, who's name was William, that he would have to find another place to live, he made no effort to find a place. They called Rancho晃 of God, a shelter in Morro Bay, Grass Roots and the Salvation Army. People at each place told Allen that they either had no room for William, or that they flat out didn't want him. Leaving Allen and his roommates to deal with the problem of getting William to leave. "We finally just told him after a couple of days that he had to get out. It was a really frustrating situation because we wanted to help him, but we couldn't keep him at our place any more."

DIU

From page 1
has spoken to the dormitory residents and the Greeks. She also

THE MUSTANG TAVERN
1347 Monterey, San Luis Obispo
Specials...
WED. & FRI...25¢ mugs/1.50 pitchers
SATURDAY...$1.00 CORONA
SUNDAY...$1.50 PITCHERS
* A Pool Tables All The Time*

THE BURGER FACTORY
Drive-in
374 Santa Rosa, San Luis Obispo
4 P.M. TO 10 P.M. DAILY

The BURGER Factory
Drive-in
374 Santa Rosa, San Luis Obispo

We take PHONE ORDERS
543-2363

Check out our DAILY SPECIALS!
2¢ DELUXE BURGERS
4 P.M. TO 10 P.M. DAILY

Good for $1.00 off
any large sub
EXPIRES OCT. 31, 1987

The BURGER Factory
374 Santa Rosa
San Luis Obispo
543-2363

Good for $1.00 off
any large sub
EXPIRES OCT. 31, 1987

The BURGER Factory
374 Santa Rosa
San Luis Obispo
543-2363

CALENDAR

*Political Science professor Richard Kranzfeld will talk on his recent overland trek from Pakistan to China, "The Road to Kashgar," Tuesday, Oct. 13 at 11 a.m. in UU 217D. The event is sponsored by the Multi-Cultural Center.

*Changing sexual attitudes on the college campus will be discussed through the CN broadcast of the "Sex on Campus," Wednesday, Oct. 14 at 7 p.m. in Chumash auditorium. The event is sponsored by ASI TV programming.

*Valentine Garcia-Smith, admissions officer from UC Davis, will speak on "Admission to Vet School" Wednesday, Oct. 14 at 10 a.m. in Dancer Hall, room 227. The event is sponsored by the veterinary science club.

*Cal Poly's Disabled Students Unlimited has named Roy and the 1987 readers of the year. The Wicosa Green and Jack Faust as the two readers involved in the program, which started three years ago. Readers verbally record textbooks for handicapped students.

UNLIMITED has named Roy and the 1987 readers of the year. The Wicosa Green and Jack Faust as the two readers involved in the program, which started three years ago. Readers verbally record textbooks for handicapped students.