Resolution defines relative; admission policy clarified

Lawrence Anton

A resolution introduced at Tuesday's Academic Senate meeting defines "close relative," a definition necessary when administering Cal Poly's guaranteed admission benefit for relatives of 'employees.'

Cal Poly has a policy of automatically granting admission to relatives of employees if the applicant meets California State University admissions requirements. However, there has never been a definition of "close relative" for the admissions office to refer to when reviewing prospective students.

The policy is being administered arbitrarily, said Malcolm Wilson, vice president of Academic Affairs.

The resolution defines "close relative" as "the spouse, children, brother, sister, parent, grandchildren, grandparent, niece or nephew of any employee ... of Cal Poly."

Paul Murphy, chairman of the personnel policies committee which drafted the resolution, said the intention is not to take away benefits, but to provide the admissions office with a guideline.

Some senators questioned whether the definition may be too broad.

Ken Riemer, professor of business administration, said the definition may be getting too far by including sisters, brothers, nieces and nephews.

Charlie Crabbs, chairman of the senate, said "a large number of people will be eligible but few actually take advantage.

Last year, 71 applicants gained admission because of the policy, said Murphy. The resolution will come back before the senate in two weeks.

Also discussed by the senate was a report recommending ways the effectiveness of undergraduate education can be measured.

An Academic Senate ad hoc committee has studied ways to measure the effectiveness of instruction at Cal Poly and recently released a "Report on Measures of Effectiveness."

Jack Wilson, chairman of the ad hoc committee, said that before carrying out any of the recommendations the senate needs to determine how well the recommendations will measure effectiveness and if funding will be available.

Malcolm Wilson said the university must find a way to measure its instructional effectiveness.

"We think we're effective. We say we're effective. But when pitted to the wall, we don't have the evidence to back it up," said Wilson.

Faint doesn't stop lecture

By Alison Skratt

Tuesday was not a run-of-the-mill day for Paula Kopecek. On top of the fact that she fainted during noon class, her professor continued to lecture while she was still unconscious -- after calling Public Safety, of course.

"When I woke up, she was still going," said Kopecek.

A dietician and food administrator, Kopecek blacked out and fell off her chair while Maria Ortiz, her professor, was lecturing. Kopecek's classmates were startled, but Ortiz managed to call Public Safety.

After calling for help, Ortiz continued to teach.

"I didn't see that the students would be served by starting at that poor girl," said Ortiz. "What should I have done?"

When paramedics arrived a few minutes later, Kopecek had regained consciousness. The paramedic took her to the Health Center, where she was examined and released.

"It was kind of odd waking up with six or seven people staring at me," said Kopecek. "I remember thinking, 'Gosh this is weird. What went on there?'

Kopecek said she misunderstood Ortiz.

"She has to get through her subjects," said Kopecek. "Some Public Safety officials were not so understanding. "I thought it was kind of rude," said a fire official. "There is a test coming up."

There were questions we wanted to ask her (Ortiz) and we were competing for her attention."

Reservoir might be getting fishy

By Coleen Bondy

To fish or not to fish, that is the question.

Well, maybe a more precise version is: To stock Whale Rock Reservoir with trout, or not to stock it.

Whale Rock Reservoir in Cayucos has been a source of controversy in the past few years. Some groups would like to see the reservoir stocked with fish and some would like to keep people away from the unspoiled area.

The Whal Rock Commission met last Friday and decided to stock the reservoir. The City Council also tentatively decided to stock it.

Members of the City Council had mixed emotions. Mayor Ron Donin was opposed to the venture because he believes it will not generate enough revenue to pay for itself.

The Fish and Game Department wants the reservoir stocked for local sport fishermen.

A group of fishermen sued the city in the late 1960s to open the reservoir for fishing. Prior to the building of the reservoir, the public had access to a creek which offered good fishing.

Since the reservoir was built, fishermen have argued that because they can no longer use the creek, they ought to be allowed to use the reservoir.

In 1978 the California Supreme Court upheld an earlier ruling in favor of the fishermen and ordered the city to stock the reservoir with trout.

The reservoir was stocked in 1982 and fishermen were allowed to fish from two spots on the lake. This supply of fish has been depleted because of fishing and the abundance of a type of sucker fish that eats the trout egg before they can hatch, thwarting reproduction.

The Whale Rock Commission, formed in the late 1950s, is composed of representatives from the California Game Commission, Cal Poly and the city of San Luis Obispo. Each donated money to build the reservoir in return for use of the water it supplied.

The reservoir currently supplies 4,400 acre-feet of water per year. One acre-foot of water is enough water to supply a family of five for one year.

Some people are worried about putting fish in water that people will be drinking. Larry Hansen, of Silver King Oceanic, who wishes to remain anonymous, said "We think we're effective. We say we're effective. But when pitted to the wall, we don't have the evidence to back it up," said Wilson.

We can't have beer, so policy is our depressant

Add to that I was, sitting in the University Union, needing a beer, with nowhere to go. “Why is there no drinking establishment on this entire campus?” The answer, it would seem, is simple. Think about it, Kim, it is a DRY CAMPUS. Alcohol is therefore, illegal. But why? Well, according to one key administrator who shall remain nameless, this campus is dry simply because it has always been that way, and the no-drinking policy has just never been changed. I’ve been told that President Baker has the final say in changing policy at this university (which makes sense, if you think about it). Well, high-fives, are you listening? Maybe it’s time for a change.

Changing the policy has apparently been discussed “for many years.” I guess we’ve heard that one before.

And you want to hear the most ludicrous part of it all? There is a college on campus, but only at certain events — events that are sponsored by the university, where wine and beer can be served for certain gala occasions like when entertaining visiting celebs on our illustrious campus. Or, as football tailgating preparations, where alcoholic beverages are confined to a certain area. I personally think a pub could be considered a “confined area.” Shall we vote?

Standards have apparently been relaxed in the past five years, but only in situations where the big brass (i.e., adults, non-students, the ELITE) get to partake of the fermented fruits as the lowly student is forced to consume off-campus.

The reasoning? A “good percentage” of students at Cal Poly are below the legal drinking age. I’m just sure that universities like Fresno State and San Jose State aren’t only over-21 establishments so they can have pubs on campus. Just positive of it.

No, but we do have the largest on-campus housing capability in the CSU system, and a majority of them are underage. So what? I don’t live in the dorms, and therefore I don’t expect to have to run up with that excuse. If I’m 21, I shouldn’t be deprived of my God- (and state-) given right to drink. I waited a long time for this right. A long deprived of my God- (and state-) given right to drink. I waited a long time for this right. A long time.

The reason could not be economic, as far as I can tell. I’ve been to pubs on other campuses, and the only times we did not get something for free was if we told them our student IDs. And if we did get something for free, it was just a drink or some other libation. But the pubs were still there.

Letter to the editor

Paying a premium for pitiful parking

Editor: I wonder how much President Baker pays for a parking permit? Or was when the last time you saw him driving around hunting for a parking space?

Do you think that the hike in parking fees will increase the motorcycle and scooter parking congestion to the point where the $108 annual sticker cost isn't this parking already limited?

It is also true that Cal Poly is accepting an additional 2,000 students next fall? Where in the school going to have them park? Or is the school going to have to sacrifice “his spot” for the newcomers?

Does the school expect more students to ride their bikes to school when an amazing amount of bike are being stolen each day?

We’ve come up with a lot of questions. Does the school have answers to these questions?

L.A. quake damage estimates rise to more than $213 million

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Federal disaster officials raised the damage toll from this month's earthquake and aftershocks to $213.6 million on Wednesday, with most of the damage to private property.

Most of the increase came from higher estimates of damage to government facilities, said Tom Mullins of the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

The Oct. 1 tremor, which registered 6.1 on the Richter scale, was the most powerful to hit the region since 1971, when a 6.4 quake hit the San Fernando Valley.

The most recent quake has been blamed for seven deaths.

Mullins said total damage now was estimated at $65.8 million to public property and $147.8 million to private property.

The breakdown includes damage to Los Angeles Unified School District and at California State University campuses at Los Angeles and Fullerton, $24.2 million.

Testicle cancer nearly cured; less success in prostate cases

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Medicine's battle against cancer of the testicles has been so successful that few American men should die of the disease anymore, but progress is slower in fighting prostate cancer, which is a much larger killer, researchers said Wednesday.

About 4,000 to 5,000 men, mostly 15 to 35 years old, develop testicle cancer each year in the United States, said Dr. B.J. Kennedy, a University of Minnesota cancer researcher and president of the American Society of Clinical Oncology. Oncology is the study of cancer.

For the advanced stage of the most serious form, called non-seminoma, the proportion of men surviving at least one year was 50 percent in the early 1970s, 78 percent in 1983 and should soon reach 98 percent, Kennedy said, adding survival is even higher for seminoma, which is more vulnerable to chemotherapy.

Testicle cancer grows so rapidly that men who survive one year almost always survive much longer and are considered cured, he said.

About 90,000 American men — almost all older than 50 — are diagnosed with prostate cancer each year, and some 30,000 will die.

Iranian boat shoots tanker, Iraq retaliates with Gulf raid

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An Iranian gunboat fired on a tanker Wednesday, shipping sources reported, and Iraq said its warplanes raided a ship near Iraq's main oil-export terminal in the northern Persian Gulf.

It was the second Iranian attack on a tanker in two days. Iraq's report, if confirmed, would mark the 10th Iraqi raid on ships carrying Iranian oil in a little more than a week.

An Iraqi communiqué said warplanes raided a "large naval target," the customary term for a tanker, after dark east of the Kharg Island oil terminal and scored "an effective and accurate hit."

In Baghdad, hundreds of thousands of Iraqis marched in a 10-mile-long funeral procession for victims of an Iranian missile attack Tuesday. The long-range rockets exploded at a school, killing at least 32 people, according to official reports.

The United States reaffirmed that its warships will protect only American-registered ships in the gulf, where Iraq and Iran have been at war since September 1980. Eleven Kuwaiti tankers have gotten American flags.

Taiwan lifts ban, allows visits to families in mainland China

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — The governing Nationalist Party removed another barrier between Taiwan and Communist China on Wednesday with the announcement that Taiwanites will be allowed to visit relatives on the mainland.

A party statement said the 38-year ban on travel to China will be lifted for humanitarian reasons, but said the party will still oppose Taiwan independence.

"Falling Taiwan" citizens had eagerly awaited the decision to lift the ban, particularly the 2 million people who follow ed the late Nationalist leader Chiang Kai-shek to Taiwan.

"I'll apply for the trip right away," said Wei Tsun-yin, a 64-year-old army veteran who left his hometown in Hunan province with the Nationalists in 1949. "Falling Taiwan" leaven should return to the root, and I'm so glad I can see my mother and Friends again."

Judge berates ‘Night Stalker’ attorneys, sets Feb. 1 trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge angrily berated Richard Ramirez' defense attorneys Wednesday for being unprepared and set a trial date of Feb. 1 for the killing rampage terrified California residents in 1985.

Richard Ramirez, a 27-year-old drifter from El Paso, Texas, is charged with being the infamous "Night Stalker'' whose killing around the Los Angeles region has been blamed for seven deaths.

"The date your counsel is requesting is Feb. 1, 1988," said Judge C. R. Tynan, who asked if the defendant waived his right to a speedy trial and agreed to that date.

"Yes," said Ramirez.

Lucky's "Food For All" system to provide for local hunger groups

It's there and convenient at whatever level people want to give at, whether it's 50 cents, $1 or $5. Some people come in and buy $100 worth of $5 cards at a time," she said.

By Carolyn Duvali that week

The cards are easy to use. Just put one or more on the counter with your purchases and the amount on the front is added to your grocery bill. The grocer will then send your donation to the Food For All organization for processing and then it is returned to the local committee for distribution.

"It's proving to be successful with shoppers — it's an easy way to share concern," said Nancy Chandler, advertising executive for Lucky supermarkets.

The program is run from headquarters in Redlands, but the benefits are mainly local. Seventy-five percent of the money collected from stores in San Luis Obispo County will be returned to county hunger relief agencies. The other 25 percent is sent to international programs such as Meals for Millions and Heifer International, said Jennifer Foster, administrative assistant for the program in Redlands.

Food For All began in April 1986, and arrived in San Luis Obispo in December. Local groups can probably expect several hundred dollars, said Scot Sorensen, co-chairman for Food For All and assistant pastor of the Mt. Carmel Lutheran Church in San Luis Obispo.

In order to ensure the fairness of the program, funds are tracked so no areas can spend money raised elsewhere.

Foster said Linda Hamilton, one of the program founders, was impressed by San Luis Obispo when she visited here to set up the program.

People in your area (San Luis Obispo County) seem to be very concerned about hunger," Foster said.

Food For All began in April 1986, and arrived in San Luis Obispo in December. Linda and Milan Hamilton came up with the idea while they were shopping, said Foster. She said Linda Hamilton thought it would be easy to provide someone else's food while buying her own.

College life: with children

For most, it's which party; for some, it's which babysitter

By Kristine J. Abbey

Many students associate marriage and children with life after graduation, but there are some who are experiencing homework, classes, marriage and children all at the same time.

Although managing a family and college is difficult at times, many say they wouldn't change their lives.

Jacqueline and Mike Carroll are Cal Poly students who mix family life with student life. They have two children, 4-year-old Julianne and 4-month-old Emily, and they say that although being both parents and students is sometimes complicated, they have no complaints.

"Time management and blending schedules is the hardest thing," said Jacqueline. Along with working, she said she and Mike have to make time for each other and time for the kids.

Mike said he has to be there for the baby when Jacqueline is at school, as well as coordinator time for homework.

"There's not enough time in the day," he said.

Mike and Jacqueline are usually full-time students, but Jacqueline has cut her load to six units until Emily gets older.

Jacqueline and Mike got married while Mike was in the military. When he got out they decided to move to San Luis Obispo to attend Cal Poly.

"Things have always been hard — it's normal for me. It's no problem," Mike said. "Maybe someday when we get out of school things will be easier, but I have no complaints. I have lots of support from my wife and even from my older daughter."

Although she said they are happy, Jacqueline said it might have been easier if they had finished school before having a family.

"We really don't think about it," she said. "We love our kids and they are our priority. Sure it would be easier, that's why most people do it that way."

Mike said: "You have to want it. We've set high goals and we work the best we can at it."

Harry and Allison Danicome are in a similar situation. Allison is a journalism major and Harry is an MBA student. They have two children, 2-year-old Paul-Alan and year-old Allison.

Allison said she deals with student life and family life separately.

"At school I try not to be a mother and at home I am not a student," she said. She does all of her homework at school or when the children are asleep.

Allison said a problem student-parents have to deal with is being called out of class or missing class because something is wrong with the children.

"Professors don't understand if you miss a day because of that," she said. "They don't relate too easily. It's not up there with death in the family."

Allison said she has not missed too many classes.

"It's not up there with death in the family," she said. "They don't relate too easily. It's not up there with death in the family."

Allison said her biggest regret is not that she has a family while attending school, but that she didn't do all of this when she was in the 18- to 25-year-old range.

"It's possible to do both together," she said. "A person can do it if they want to, it's not as much as you think."

She said she would like to get her master's degree, and afterward, probably will work for a large corporation and then start her own company. She said Harry will probably get his master's degree.

Leslie Onstott is not a student at Cal Poly, but her husband, John, is. Their daughter, Brittany, is 7 weeks old.

Leslie said John is more into school and success now than before they were married because he realizes he has a family to support.

"He's on the rugby team and quite a partier," she said. "I think the family has calmed him down a lot. It makes him look at the future a lot more."

John, a business major planning to graduate in June, said he agrees.

"I'm happy — I have no regrets about giving up partying. The baby is the most important thing. She needs to be foremost, even though we have other responsibilities," John said.

Compromise, John said, is what keeps his life running smoothly. He and Leslie have different perceptions of what is hard.

"Things tire us out — me at school and her at home," he said. "You have to understand what a person goes through in a day and put yourself in the other person's shoes. It takes work to make relationships work. We know it's not easy, but we have hope that it's going to work out OK."

John said he also gets a lot of support from others.

"My grandfather is a big help financially," he said. "I haven't been able to work for as many of my own dollars as I would like. He's set on my getting my master's degree and has given me more backing."

John has no regrets about having a family before finishing school.

"There are pros and cons to everything," he said. "The good things far outweigh the bad things. Things don't always turn out the way you plan."

John said his grades haven't been hurt by his family situation.

"It's actually improved my study habits," he said. Now he is forced to budget his time and be more organized, he said.

Kerry Yamada, director of the Cal Poly Counseling Center, said although students with families take advantage of some counseling services, there is no formal program to deal with the specific problems of students-parents.
'Date rape' presentation aimed at prevention

Most rape victims are accosted by friends; many won't admit it

By Julie Williams

Rape is usually equated with dark alleys and creepy strangers, but in actuality almost two-thirds of all victims know the persons who raped them, a spokeswoman from the Rape Crisis Center in San Luis Obispo said.

Stephanie Biggs spoke on campus Tuesday night at an acquaintance rape and alcohol awareness presentation.

A group called the "Status of Rape On Campus" has been formed by staff members from the Health Center, Counseling Center, Housing Office, the Rape Crisis Center and some concerned students to educate students about acquaintance rape and how to prevent it from happening to them or someone they know.

Tuesday night's presentation was the first of its kind and was introduced to the pledges of half the sorority and fraternity houses on campus. Another session will be held Oct. 27 for the rest of the houses.

Biggs, who counsels many victims at the center, pointed out that the program is not trying to pick on the Greek system, but added she assisted several women last year who had been raped at fraternity or sorority parties on this campus.

"I don't hear about all that happens, but I hear about an awful lot of stuff I wish had never happened," Biggs said.

According to Biggs, there were 85,000 rapes reported last year in the United States — only an estimated 10 percent of the total number of incidences. She added that one out of every three women will be sexually assaulted in her lifetime.

According to Carolyn Hurwitz, health educator at the Health Center, college-aged women (18-25) are the group at highest risk because of the need to fit in and the predominance of alcohol in the college social environment.

This guy's not just a student anymore

Former ASI VP chosen as only student representative to CSU Board of Trustees

By Donna Taylor, Staff Writer

A visit to John Francis Sweeney's room in the Alpha Gamma Rho house may be misleading. In one corner sits a torn and tattered Lazy Boy chair; a larger-than-life Spuds Mackenzie cardboard poster looms next to the couch; and an enormous fish tank containing poisonous, squidlike creatures stands near the window.

"Sound like your average, blond, blue-eyed, frat boy's living quarters? Guess again. Out of the 340,000 students in the 19-campus California State University system, Sweeney was chosen to represent them all as a CSU trustee.

He became the first Cal Poly student ever to be named a CSU student trustee when Gov. Deukmejian appointed him to the position this summer. Sweeney will serve a two-year term, attending meetings of the CSU Board of Trustees in Long Beach every other month as well as serving on three committees. "This is an excellent opportunity, and I feel extremely lucky to have been selected for this position at such a young age," said the 22-year-old science major.

"I would say that the underlying responsibility of the board is the advancement of post-secondary education on a state level," said Sweeney, getting back to business. "As a student trustee, I am in a sense a liaison between the board and the CSSA (California State Student Association). On the other hand, I am also a full-fledged student senator for the School of Science and Mathematics in 1984-85 when he learned of the student trustee position, which has existed since 1980. He applied, and in the meantime became ASI vice president for the School of Engineering. "I sort of backed off of that (being an alternate senator), however, to do London Study," said Sweeney, calling his quarter there a fantastic experience. Before he left for London, Sweeney and 12 other students were interviewed by CSSA members, who then forwarded two names — Sweeney's and a Cal State Bakersfield student's — to Gov. Deukmejian. When he saw SWEENEY, back

She added Greeks are at an even greater risk due to the increased social pressure within the Greek system and the fact that most of their activities center around alcohol.

A video shown at the presentation, called "Rethinking Rape," explained that most acquaintance rapes go unreported and the victims rarely tell anyone about it or receive any form of counseling.

"Nobody wants to think their friends are capable of (rape)," Biggs said. "I've had three cases where the girls' sororities didn't believe them and wouldn't back them up because the guy was real popular. All three have since left this campus."

"If someone tells you they've been raped, believe them. They have nothing to gain from telling you something like that."

Biggs said this usually happens because when women acknowledge someone they know has been raped, they have to face the fact that it could also happen to them. Many acquaintance rape victims feel they must have done something wrong and are to blame, not acknowledging they were actually raped.

Biggs said, "A lot of women say to me, 'It was my fault, I was drinking, I went upstairs with him.' But I tried to call it off and I couldn't call it off. That is rape and the sooner we all acknowledge that as rape, the sooner we can stop it.

The program included facts on alcohol use and its effects since 85 percent of acquaintance rapes involve alcohol. Ironically, next week is National College Men's Health Week also stressing the importance of safe and healthy drinking habits.

Small group discussions were held at the end of the evening to give students an opportunity to discuss their feelings about what they had seen and heard. The reaction was mainly shock, but quite a bit of doubt prevailed.

Hurwitz said this is not uncommon because acquaintance rape victims are often partially blamed by society for what happened to them. She added that people usually say things like "You were drunk," "You seduced him, "'You really wanted it," or "What were you wearing?"

"A woman can become very confused when she starts hearing those things and begins to feel really guilty," said Hurwitz.

"The only thing a woman who has been raped is guilty of is using poor judgment," Biggs said.

"No one wants to be raped." "It's scary," said Rob Cronon, who attended the presentation. "I'd never think it affected men, either. I'm used to talking about little sisters ... they really made us out to be the bad guys."

Kelly Lacey said it changed her definition of rape. She also said it was helpful by stressing the need to be supportive of victims and by giving them numbers they can call if they, or someone they know, need help.

The Status of Rape on Campus committee hopes to make this a mandatory presentation in the residence halls in the near future in order to reach a greater number of students.

The committee also urges anyone who has been involved in a rape or any type of assault situation to contact any of the organizations involved in the program or find some form of counseling to help them deal with what happened and why it happened.

SENATE

A report will go to executive committee where it will be assigned to one of the senate's standing committees to be studied further.

Also in the meeting, a resolution to restate the affirmative action statement at Cal Poly was sent back to committees to be rewritten, because senators didn't think its meaning was clear.

The resolution asked the senate to recognize the importance of the affirmative action facility in promoting equal opportunity employment.

The Academic Senate has never out and recognized that the campus has affirmative action. Senate President Warren Baker asked each department to assign a faculty member to sit as liaison between the department and the affirmative action office.

Paul Murphy asked the resolution be rewritten because the dual role of an advocate were not clearly stated in it.

The senate concurred.

UNITED AIRLINES
Chambers scores on Asian tour

By Julie Williams

Former Mustang promotes new league overseas

He's got the same style — that familiar confidence and charm — but this time Sean Chambers has got a new story. Until recently, Chambers' claim to fame was that he was the first Cal Poly basketball player to be named an all-American. Now, he is the first to ever play professional ball.

Chambers has got a new story. The other mishap occurred on conference championships the past two seasons, spent September touring Asia to promote the new International Basketball Association. The IBA, composed of players 6-foot-4 and under, is about to embark on its first year.

The league, which has 12 teams in the United States and Canada, will play from May to September. Dennis Murphy, the league coordinator, said only 4 percent of National Basketball Association players stand under 6-5. Murphy likened the IBA and NBA to boxing's middleweight and heavyweight divisions.

Tryouts for the touring all-star team were held in Los Angeles, Chicago, Dallas, New York and Canada. The top six players from each area were sent to Fresno for the final cuts. Only 12 were selected to represent the Mustangs to conference championships the past two years.

The Cal Poly volleyball team suffered two breakdowns on its trip earlier this week. One was mechanical — the team's motor coach needed some late-night work done on it in King City, delaying the Lady Mustangs' arrival in San Jose Monday night.

The other mishap occurred Tuesday night in Spartan Gym, as Cal Poly fell to 17th-ranked San Jose State in three straight, 15-9, 15-7, 15-5, in a Pacific Coast Athletic Association match.

The loss dropped the Lady Mustangs' record to 10-8 overall and 2-6 in the PCAA. San Jose has swept Cal Poly in the teams' first two games, they were not able to sustain the advantages.

"You've got to give a lot of credit to San Jose State," said head coach Mike Wilton. "I think they're a fairly balanced and steady team. We played poorly. We were like zombies at times. I thought we were going to come to play."

Said San Jose head coach Dick Montgomery, "I thought, looking at them in warmups, that they were here to beat us."

Cal Poly was led by Michelle Haisen, who had 12 kills, and Theresa Smith, who had 10.

"If we were going to beat these guys, it would have been tonight," said Smith. "We just didn't cut it."

Said junior outside hitter Darci Pankhard, "We get ahead and then we let teams back into it. We don't keep that fighting attitude."

The Lady Mustangs will try to recapture some of that intensity Saturday night, when they take on conference foe Fresno State in the Main Gym. Game time is 8 p.m.

Sean Pierce once again getting kicks from football
By Marty Nedeffter

Picture this scenario. The Cal Poly football team continues its winning ways and goes into the playoffs, where the Mustangs have an opportunity to win their first national championship in seven years.

In the championship game, they trail by one point with two minutes to play. Quarterback Tom Sullivan leads his team on a desperation march to the opponent's 30-yard line. As the clock ticks inside 10 seconds, the Mustangs call for their last time out. Without hesitation head coach Lyle Seemisch sends in his field-goal unit. Meanwhile, the rest of the Mustangs look on helplessly, their bodies beaten, their insides churning. A season of hard work will come down to one kick.

Holder Kevin Emigh kneels to mark the spot. Here's the snap, the spot, the kick. It's, it's, it's good. The Mustangs are the national champions!

If by chance this scenario prove to be prophetic, the Mustang's coaches can thank their lucky stars they found a reliable foot in first-year kicker Sean Pierce.

You see, Pierce is no ordinary first-year player. For starters, he is 23 years old and has been in school five years. For finishers, he hasn't played football in more than three years.

For the team's coaching staff, which opened training camp this summer in dire need of a consistent kicker, these factors soon became irrelevant.

"Sean was very fortunate," said assistant coach Bill MacDermott. "He inherited something we needed very badly."

Pierce, who last kicked for Ventura Junior College, said he had stayed away from football because he found the free time to be enjoyable. After leaving Ventura, he came to Cal Poly as an English major and became an honor student.

Still, the yearning for the game never left him, and when it became apparent that this would be his last chance to prove he could play at the college level, he decided to give it one last shot.

"Actually, I came back by popular demand," said Pierce. "I had been kicking for five years before I took the layoff and my

Two great ways to cruise through the semester.

The hand on the left is poised on what could be the most essential part of your education.

A Macintosh computer.

And the hand on the right is gripping pure, simple, unadulterated fun.

A Honda Scooter. One we're giving away.

All you have to do for a chance to drive it away is visit your campus computer center and fill out an entry form. While you're there, take a Macintosh for a test drive.

Because Macintosh can help you write term papers, categorize elements of the periodic table, plot the rise and fall of pork prices, compile computer code, and talk to other computers.

And the first 250 people on campus who get behind a mouse, so to speak, will receive a free Apple memo board.

So head over to your campus computer center today. And ask about our Student Financing Program.

Who knows? You may soon find yourself cruising a little farther than you expected.

From page 10 parents really wanted me to have the idea, the way I was talking. Though parental pressure may have been the driving force behind his choice,

"I decided in my mind before I decided to try," he said.

After reviewing the pros and cons, Pierce realized, he said to himself, "I could do it."
CHAMPIONSHIP, which the IBA won.

"Everywhere we went, we were treated like royalty," said Chambers. "The Filipinos, especially, were basketball fanatics.

Chambers said he and his IBA teammates were greeted at the Manila airport by hundreds of people holding banners that read "Welcome U.A.", and five bands were also on hand. Fans approached the Americans and asked for autographs and souvenirs.

"People would stop us on the street and thank us for playing. It was like identifying each of our players gives an accurate rundown of their statistics from the night before," said Ted Owens, head coach of the IBA team. He also is the head coach and general manager of the Fresno Flames, an IBA franchise.

In the Philippines, basketball is played round the year in five 2-1/2 month sessions. The games are the top-rated television shows, while the teams play in sold-out arenas.

The Philippine Basketball Association is one of only a few professional leagues outside the United States. Each PBA team is allowed two American imports, and Chambers was offered a $70,000 contract to play one season.

It was a tough offer to refuse, Chambers said, but he didn't want to stay in a country experiencing great political turmoil.

"If there's two armed guards at a Kenny Fried Chicken, you know there's some definite instability," he said.

Chambers became a favorite of the Filipinos after winning a slam-dunk contest. He was awarded $2,500 after defeating two PBA American imports with a 360-degree spin dunk. The IBA all-stars were paid the average monthly wage of an NBA player for the month-long tour.

"I kept the slam-dunk money to pay for school, but I gave the big paycheck to my mother so she could buy her house in the Philippines," said Chambers.

Chambers said he and his teammates were overwhelmed by the attention they received and the stadium crowds of over 12,000 people.

"It was like being a Michael Jordan," said Chambers. "You could never imagine what it was like unless you've been there."

Although the team was well received, Chambers said the natives desperately wanted their teams to beat the IBA representatives because they were Americans.

"Our coaches kept reminding us of the U.S.A. loss to Brazil in the Pan Am Games and that we had a big reputation to stake," he said.

Chambers averaged 21 points per game and led the team in rebounds with 11 per game. He also clocked more playing time than any of his teammates.

Chambers hopes to play for Owens and the Fresno Flames.

"The chances are very high that Sean will be taken as a territorial draft pick," said a spokesperson for the Flames. "Our own, John O'Donnell, really likes him a lot."

Chambers still has his work cut out for him, though. Players are being picked through statewide tryouts, this month's territorial draft and the college draft that will occur after the NBA draft.

"It's not going to be a cake walk for us all-stars," said Chambers. "But I thank God just for the opportunity because a year ago, this wasn't available for guys like me."

The IBA schedule would allow Chambers to attend school fall and winter quarters. He hopes to obtain his social sciences degree within the next two years.

"Everything I ever dreamed about as an athlete happened to me this summer, but it felt so good to get back home," said Chambers. "I really learned to appreciate what I have here at home and how lucky we are to live here."
