Dole begins run for nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican leader Bob Dole is launching his campaign for the 1988 presidential nomination as the clear runner-up to Vice President George Bush, but critics and supporters say he faces lingering political contradictions.

As Dole embarks on his campaign from his hometown of Russell, Kan., there is general agreement on the impressive steps he has taken in the last 12 months to be has moved off the pack of Bush's pursuers.

"I think we're ready to go one day at a time," Bush, said Bill Lacy, a key campaign aide. "The thing that pleases me most is organizationally, we've made dramatic strides," he said, referring to strong fund-raising and political oppositions in 35 states.

But others say that won't be enough.

"Dole has a marvelous sense of humor, but it's like a two-edged sword," said one campaign aide, speaking on condition of anonymity. This aide said Dole must "learn to use his own weapon, and not use it for attacking and deprecating an opponent."

In public he has accomplished that, thus far, but in private, Dole is still capable of cutting, acidic remarks. According to one aide, when Bush was musing about Bush, he was reluctant to answer a debate question on portraits which he would hang in the White House, he said he would put up pictures of the things he has defeated in past campaigns.

Aides to other candidates say Dole must decide whether he will run as a conservative or a moderate. "I don't think that he can appear to be a man without a spine."

The 30 reptiles and amphibians kept in the Fish & Science Building is shown to area grade school children.

Cal Poly technician and three students are taking care of 30 amphibians and reptiles in the Fish & Science Building.

A Although the room 254 is sometimes referred to as the snake room, technician Phil Ashley he said it should be called the herpetology room. A herpetology is any animal that is either an amphibian or a reptile.

The herpetology's major function is to provide observation opportunity for students enrolled in a herpetology course offered in the spring.

Local elementary and secondary schools can check students on any of the animals for 24 hours.

Tours of the room are also given.

Ashley said a lot of the herpetology's are donated. Some of the animals are provided by breeding facilities, and some are captured in the wild by Ashley and his student employees.

A lesson learned is one more tragedy avoided

With every passing day my parents seem to grow wiser. Those ridiculous lessons and that ridiculous advice have all been put aside. As a child it is beginning to make sense as I mature into adulthood. As an adult I'm beginning to understand why my parents made certain decisions for me, for at a young age I was incapable of making the proper one.

My parents did not let me do everything I wanted. They wouldn't let me go to parties that didn't have a specific purpose. To me, this seemed foolish. What harm could there be in going, if they trust me? Not being allowed to do something, I was more than likely to do whatever I wanted. When dad wouldn't pay for me to go to the snow with my friends, I felt deprived of my friends and my parents. It seemed like the only thing that would make basic necessities of childhood, and was beginning to think my parents were tyrants. Who could do anything my friends' parents, let them do as they wished and always be allowed to go to the beach.

What really irritated me was that I worked so hard for my parents and received little recompense for my efforts. My parents had me working for the age of 17, picking walnuts from 6:30 in the morning until sundown. At the age of 17 I wasn't old enough to play baseball, but this was impossible: dad needed me to help. "But dad, all the other kids are playing ball," I would cry. He would reply, "No John, I'm sorry, you need you here on the farm." This seemed to me such an injustice that I contemplated running away. After all, looking at the situation realistically, how badly could my dad really need me?

After the folks sold the farm, things improved considerably because we no longer had to spend all our leisure time working. With free time, I finally had an opportunity to play baseball. The only problem with playing ball was that the practice and games were during the day. This created friction between my parents and I, and quite frankly, I couldn't understand why they were making such an issue. I didn't see what difference it made if I am a little later than the rest of my family. Entering high school, I was still very active in school and sports, which didn't leave me much time to spend my leisure time working. In my life I was beginning to date, but because of my financial status, our leisure time was very much restricted. Unfortunately, I didn't have a two-seater, 10-speed bike. Why couldn't dad just fork out a couple of hundred bucks and buy me a bike? How did my folks expect me to be active in school, sports and work when all kids were able to go grocery shopping in their high school in all that I did? These expectations seemed too much to ask of me as a sophomore in high school.

Well, I made it through high school and now I'm pursuing my dream of a career in science. I see things from a different perspective. I can now understand why my parents didn't do whatever I wished. I can now understand so easily as I look at some close friends who were caught in the drug scene that began at those harmless parties. Many of my friends from those days do not have their lives together and some are even in jail. I can now understand why dad didn't make it easy to go to the snow, for he knew there would be other things when I didn't do everything I wanted. This was a valuable lesson I learned at an early age. For those kids who are always going to the snow, well, some of them need to be woken up. Good people, but they certainly never learned some very valuable lessons about character, and that lack can be seen in their lives to this day. All that time I spent on the farm and working was good for me. It gave me something to work with, and more importantly, teaches me a lesson in responsibility. No one is going to go out and make you do something, you have to do it yourself. That is why my parents didn't let me do whatever I wished. 1.7 Los Angeles earthquake was a scientific experiment

SOUTH EL MONTE (AP) — Residents were awakened early Sunday by what some thought was an earthquake when scientists blew up 1,200 pounds of dynamite underground to study the fault that caused last month's powerful temblor.

The 4:10 a.m. blast near the epicenter of the Oct. 1 earthquake was felt in such nearby towns as Whittier, Rosemead and Temple City, authorities said.

The explosives had been placed in a 330 foot hole drilled in the Whittier Narrows Recreation Area, about 12 miles east of Los Angeles.

The experiment was conducted by scientists from the U.S. Geological Survey to gain understanding of the area's underground geology by measuring shock waves from the blast at various surrounding points.

Seismologists had said the force of the blast would be felt no further than 100 yards away from the site.

The ground motion from the blast registered 1.7 on the Richter scale.

Nicaraguan mission brings back memories of Vietnam

Nicaragua. For many, it is just another country at war. To David Lynn, a Vietnam veteran who recently participated in a peace mission there, the devastation he witnessed brought back painful memories of Vietnam.

In a slide show and lecture sponsored by Students for Social Responsibility, the Multi-Cultural Center and MADRE, a group supporting mothers and children in Nicaragua, Lynn talked to a large group about his experience helping rebuild one of the most war-torn regions of the country.

Along with 10 other veterans of Vietnam and World War II, Lynn was chosen to participate in the Veterans Peace Action Team after intensive screening and training in the non-violent teachings of Martin Luther King and Ghandi. Since the area was under such heavy siege, the group had to pledge that they would not pick up a weapon to defend themselves or anyone else.

Their goal was to reconstruct a health clinic in El Cedro, just 25 miles from the Honduran border.

"Once in Nicaragua, we were delayed for five days because three towns near El Cedro were attacked and no one was willing to drive us," he said.

They finally found a bus driver but the atmosphere was tense as they moved along country roads and through rivers, a prime target for landmines.

"All along the roads, we saw empty shells of vehicles that had been blown up," Lynn said. "We heard about a recent mine that had been planted in the middle of the road. The Contras hid in the bushes and selected a bus carrying more than 30 civilians and killed them all. He didn't even realize his own mother was on board."

When the Peace Action group arrived in El Cedro, the population of the town had dropped from 86 families to 30 because of the recent attacks. The town had been leveled almost to the ground three times.

Most of the men of the village were living up in the hills to defend against the Contras. The women and children were left to run the farms.

"The Contras have managed to pretty much stay away from the Sandinistas," he said. "Their attacks were in retaliation for Iraqi air raids."

I've been here that we've had enough competition to really warrant a legitimate challenge," said head coach Lennis Cowell. The next challenge matches will be next month.

"There were some weight classes where guys completely dominated, like Osborne against a freshman, Scott Galloway," Cowell said. "But there were also a few real good matches."

The lighter matches were between Cortina and Rick Ravlin, Kordell Baker and Sean Bentson at 150 pounds, and Pangelinan and Galkowski. Each could have gone either way, with the winner edging out his opponent by a mere one or two points.

Such even competition has created a lot of depth, showing the Mustangs' potential for a strong showing this year.

"For this time of year our conditioning level is really good, as well as our enthusiasm," said Cowell. "It looks like we're going to be a decent team."

Cal Poly opens its season against Fresno State 7 p.m. Friday in the Main Gym. Bulldogs took fifth place in the Pac-10 last year, edging out the sixth-place Mustangs by a fraction of a point. Cal Poly will host intrasquad Saturday.

"We have the ability to do some damage in the Pac-10 this year," said Cowell. "If we can keep healthy, and with a little luck, we should do well."

WRESTLING

The challenge matches are in a best-of-three format. Winning their second matches and a first-string position were junior Joey Pangilinan at 118 pounds, junior John Martin at 142 pounds, senior Malcolm Boykin at 158 pounds, senior Eric Osborne at 167 pounds and junior Gabe Cortina at 190 lbs.

Osborne, the defending Pac-10 champion, and Boykin wrestled in last season's NCAA championships, as did John Galkowski and Anthony Romero. Galkowski was beaten Friday by Pangilinan; Romero will fill the 177-pound spot again this year.

Although freshman Aaron Castrell was defeated by another freshman, Craig Miller, he will fill the heavyweight spot because Miller will redshirt this season.

Series that were not ended Friday will be decided early this week.

The challenge matches are sometimes the toughest of the season because the same wrestlers compete against one another daily in practice and are familiar with each other's style and technique.

The time spread between Cal Poly's first and fifth runners was a mere 25 seconds, showing outstanding team strength.

"It was total dominance in the team battle," said Harter: "It was impressive considering Northern and Los Angeles are in our region. They ranked second and fourth nationally."

Poly nips Chapman in overtime

Mustangs await possible NCAA at-large playoff berth

ORAQUE — The Cal Poly softball team wrapped up its regular season on a high note Saturday, but only time will tell if the Mustangs were good enough to land an NCAA at-large berth.

In a 25-minute battle of Chaminade and Cal Poly, the Mustangs defeated Chapman in overtime, 3-2, improving their league record to 4-2 and overall 8-11 and 4-1 in the California Collegiate Athletic Association. The win, said head coach Wolfgang Gartner, "gives us a realistic shot at being involved with an at-large berth."

It is the seventh season in Cal Poly history.

Gartner will find out today if the team received an at-large berth.

"We played one of the three tightest schedules in the league. We have just a little waiting to do," he said.

So far this year, six Mustangs have received recognition.

memorabilia for an auction.

"The more Mike understands our situation here, the more support he has given us," said McFarland.

The big surprise at this year's tournament appeared to be that of a future Hall of Famer, pitcher Don Sutton, who entered with more than 300 victories, wasn't supposed to show due to a previous engagement. To add to the surprise, "Sutton really made a huge effort," said McFarland.

"We really appreciate Mike having the time to come. Sutton has always been sort of a Mike's idol. (Krukow) was really pumped up."

For his special effort and because of Krukow's fondness, Sutton was given a cowboy hat and named an honorary Mustang at the post-tournament dinner.

Among those were Jason Maas and Rob Lambert, both in the New York Yankees organization; John Ortner, the head coach for Cuba's organization; and John Ortner, the national director of the California Angels this year.

How does it feel to play the tournament in a celebrity role? "I get to play for free," joked Lambert. "No, really though, I don't feel much like a celebrity and get to have some fun with Sigma Chi around."

Maas said it was just nice to see old friends, "It's also nice to be able to support the baseball program."

The proceeds haven't been added up yet, but McFarland is sure they will exceed last year's proceeds of $5,000. For the Mustangs, this means they can play ball in 1988.

Hawaii ends Mustangs' win streak

HONOLULU — The Cal Poly volleyball team last week found Hawaii less appealing than the last time.

Outside hitters Michelle Hansen and Darcy Paschall each had 11 kills to lead the Lady Mustangs.

Cal Poly, whose record fell to 17-7, 1-16 overall and 8-8 in the Pac-West Coast Athletic Association, has three matches left.

The animal with the parasites is placed in a cage in a different room with a small piece of a no-pest strip for 24 hours. The animal is then placed into another isolated cage without the no-pest strip for a day, so the animal doesn't suffer from the pesticide. This procedure is repeated for one week.

The Spiny Softshell Turtle, found in the south-central United States, burrows itself in the mud under small ponds. Its long neck and pointed nose enable it to breathe and catch prey.

Bob Hole, an environmental and systems biology major, first worked for Ashley last spring. He cares for the turtles, including Andy, a desert tortoise. Desert tortoises are on the California and the national endangered species lists.

"She likes to be scratched behind the ears," he said. Andy is 13 years old and her expected life span is 60 years. Andy is a herbivore, but Hole said all the other turtles eat mostly fish, and a little shell.

"I've worked for vets and I know cats and dogs inside out," said Hole, adding that he finds desert animals interesting, and they don't have fleas.

Hole said he enjoys giving tours of the room to elementary school children. He recently gave a tour to a group from the YMCA.

Art Hazebrook cares for the snakes and lizards and said he has been interested in reptiles most of his life. "My mom used to make me empty my pockets when I came in the house," he said. Hazebrook said when he was growing up in Florida, he used to feed marshmallows to alligators.

The herptile room is not open at specific times, but Ashley said if students pass by when someone is working there, they are welcome come in and look.

Hole said he sometimes needs students to work for him during Cal Poly breaks and during the summer. He said when he needs help, he advertises through the Wildlife Club and puts a notice up outside the room.

Students working for Ashley feed the animals and clean cages. The hourly wage is small, but the job provides experience working with animals.

Hole said his experience working in the lab helped him get a job last summer with the California Fish and Game Department working on a herp-inventory of Santa Barbara County.

Other preservation techniques include relining rugs and tapestries that hang on the cement walls. "There's a lot of acid in cement, and you need linings to protect the fabrics," said Labhard.

New technology is also used to protect the hangings. Instead of the usual bars with rings attached to the top of a piece, strips of velcro are being hand sewn to the piece and then it is attached to the wall.

The velcro events out the stress on the material, said Labhard.

Many of the furnishings at the castle are rare and valuable, while others are typical of life and furnishings in the 1930s.
