Backlog of records leads to slower transcript processing

By Lawrence Anton

Deadlines can sneak up without notice. And those in need of an official Cal Poly transcript to apply for a scholarship or a first job may find themselves lost if they hesitate.

Last month 2,463 transcript requests were processed, said Carol Berry, a junior business major who took this quarter off and is working full-time as a Records Office transcript technician.

Berry said it usually takes two to three weeks for her and two part-time student assistants to work through the backlog and get a transcript mailed.

Every request is processed by hand, Berry said, pointing to a stack of nearly 500 request forms.sitting on a basket on her desk. Another pile of request forms, those received through the mail, fill a filing cabinet near her desk. Another pile of request forms, those received through the mail, fill a filing cabinet near her desk.

There are a lot of important deadlines in January and February, Berry said, so the office has been flooded with requests.

Students applying for scholarships or international programs must forward a transcript along with their application in order to be considered. Graduates hoping to take the architectural board or engineering board test must show they have received a degree. Students going on to graduate school and those out looking for a job also need transcripts.

Mayor urges residents to be active

Do the new tax laws have you confused?

If so, the Internal Revenue Service will be offering free income tax assistance to students in the University Union through April 15.

The IRS is providing service to help students understand the tax changes. An IRS representative will be in U.U. 218 on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 2 to 4 p.m., and on Wednesdays from 7 to 9.

The ASI officers arranged this service.

"The new tax laws will have a drastic effect on students this year," said Tyler Hammond, the director of community relations for ASI.

Hammond said students need to be informed so they won't get in trouble with the IRS after they file.

"This is the first big and drastic (tax) change to affect students in a long time," said Henrietta Sheffield, a revenue agent.

According to the new tax law, students won't be able to claim themselves if their parents claim them as dependents.

In the past, Sheffield said, if students worked they were able to claim exempt from their taxes. Parents were also able to claim the student as dependent, as long as they contributed at least 50 percent of their child's income.

Mayors: no representatives in the business community

By Shelly Evans

Acting as a "go-between" for the City Council and city administration, Mayor Ron Dunin said it is important for San Luis Obispo residents to become active in city issues.

"Residents think because we are elected officials, we will make the right decision all the time," Dunin said.

"It's annoying to me when an important issue is being discussed and there's no input (during the public hearings)," he said. "That's unfair to the council and to the people being affected." Dunin said the council bases its decisions on how they will affect a majority of the citizens.

"There are professional objectors who come to the meetings specifically to object," said Dunin. "We have about six who believe they are predestined to save San Luis Obispo."

If no one is at the meetings to dispute the objectors, then they act as the only representatives from the community, he said.

"At the time I ran, there were no representatives from the business community on the council," said Dunin, who has served two four-year terms on the council and is running for his first year on a second term as mayor.

However, Dunin says he doesn't "only represent interests within the business community.

"I'm unique in that I support both sides ... (business) and the..." Dunin said.

"I used to organize the cleaning of the creek and the planting of trees at Laguna Lake," Dunin said he believes Cal Poly students have an obligation to the community.

"The co-existence of different age groups is very important," he said.

"When students move in, the lifestyle of a neighborhood is altered. Students should adjust themselves and not change things," Dunin said. Dunin said he doesn't believe San Luis Obispo residents should be passive members of their community.

"We have our rights, but we also have our obligations," he said.

The most important function of the council, said Dunin, is to provide "service and protect life and property."

As mayor, Dunin said, he is placed in a difficult position.

"The mayor is perceived as a leader — chairman of the council," he said. "If I'm too active, the council will object. If not, then I'm seen as weak and not a leader."

MONTEREY PARK (AP) — Southern California Gas Co. distributed contaminated gas drawn from a landfill for eight years, a state Public Utilities Commission report said.

Mayor Richard Houseman, citing the report, called Wednesday for an investigation to find out how many people may have been exposed to cancer-causing vinyl chloride in the gas, which came from a local landfill.

The company bought the gas, a natural byproduct of decomposing garbage, from Getty Synthetic Fuels and distributed it to customers from 1978 to 1986. Vinyl chloride, a chemical used in producing plastics, was found in very small amounts, said Southern California Gas Vice President Roy Rawlings. He said tests conducted by the company showed the vinyl chloride burned harmlessly.

White House conservatives are furious with the three major television networks for not carrying live the president's last-minute plea this week for new aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

But even if ABC, NBC and CBS had joined Cable News Network in setting aside time for the Oval Office broadcast Tuesday night, would it have made a difference?

Many think not.

"Presidents have to realize they can only use that weapon as a reinforcing tool when they have a great deal of momentum going," said Joe Foutte, chairman of the Radio-Television Department of Southern Illinois University, who is writing a book on the subject.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — U.S. officials flew to Vietnam Thursday to interview about 1,000 Amerasians and their relatives who hope to settle in the United States, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

But the officials still awaited word from Hanoi about a meeting to complete agreement on their departure from Vietnam, he said.

Spokesman Ross Petzing said the six-member team would remain in Vietnam until Feb. 15, conducting standard interviews required for immigration.

Amerasians are children of American servicemen and Vietnamese women. The United States backed South Vietnam in its war against communist North Vietnam. The fighting ended with the communist victory in 1975.

The U.S. team also will interview some 1,000 other Vietnamese who have applied to enter the United States under the U.N.-sponsored Orderly Departure Program.

Wellness coordinator balances dimensions

By Meredith Svenman

A young girl nervously awaited her meeting with Gary Kelman. She sat in her car until it was time. Before stepping into the horizon floor of the Health Center, she stopped for a moment to take a deep breath and then slowly opened the door.

She saw him. He was standing on the far side of the room among some of his peer educators. He was wearing tight gray slacks, a navy blue jacket, a crisp white button-down shirt and a maniacal grin.

She heard him say, "This looks great. It looks almost professional. The other groups are going to be jealous," to a man standing next to him. She walked toward him as if mesmerized by an actor's performance.

As she approached, he said "Why look who's here!" His smile put her at ease and she stepped into his office to wait. As he entered the office, he looked at her and said, "I'm glad to have you on the team." The warmth in his eyes was sincere.

Although the above account is fictional, the girl's reaction to him is true to life. Kelman is the wellness coordinator on campus. Wellness is an approach to living that's here to stay. It's here to stay. It's here to stay.

wellness. "Society is so fast-paced. People include themselves in their electronic cottages. They turn away from each other and ignore the value of shared experience. There is a need to understand and appreciate different attitudes and cultures. World peace is brought about by peace within yourself," he said.

The media, according to Kelman, has set a negative example for lifestyle and behavior. Kelman theorizes that imbalances in American society are due to the same drive that built it.

"Our culture and country concern itself. In the early days of our nationhood, people were fairly balanced but as jobs became more specialized, we lost touch with some aspects of our nature."

Kelman said what is scary about society is that everyone is out to gain more. Kelman said that even wellness and other approaches to happiness and meaning are becoming a hard sell instead of a sincere desire to help.

TRANSCRIPTS
Registrar Gerald Punches said the OASIS computer system is expected to be operating by fall 1988. It will create a "paperless (records) system," he said, and should shorten considerably the time required to process transcripts.

But for now, processing a transcript request must be done by hand. Processing involves pulling a student’s record, making a photocopy, affixing the authorizing signature with a rubber stamp, stuffing the photocopy into an envelope, addressing and sealing the envelope and putting it in the mail.

While the new computer system should make it easier to generate transcript copies, they will still need to be authorized, sealed and mailed by hand, though the possibility of automating those tasks sometime in the future has not been ruled out, Punches said.

"Your imagination takes off when you’re working with technology," he said, adding that the hopes he has for the OASIS system.

Cal Poly is not the only CSU campus backlogged with transcript requests, nor will it be the first to computerize its student records.

Cal State Los Angeles and Sacramento State process their transcript requests without computer aid, and also require about two weeks. However, Cal Poly Pomona, which has a computerized records system, takes just four or five days.

Ida Walters, a member of the clerical staff at Cal Poly Pomona, said of their new computer system installed a year ago: "It’s wonderful, when it works."

The Ageless Golden Age
A guide to partying with the old stars

By Frank Warren, Special to the Daily

The constant search for new things to do can be a difficult one. While most people have discovered the joy of videos, even that is beginning to stagnate. The problem seems to lie in our search for the new while the solution is in the old. Classic movies are becoming available on video and local stores are making them accessible. Old movies are as funny, captivating and intriguing as any of today's box office champions. A suggestion: A Vintage Video Party.

Video shop managers in San Luis Obispo have noticed a trend of old movies being released in groups at low prices. Studios are putting out three to five movies at a time featuring a certain star, director or theme. MGM/UA, Columbia, Paramount and Warner Bros. are the primary companies releasing the classics on video because they were the studios that made all the great films of the Golden Age.

Lori Yashiyama, manager of Accent Video, said she's looking forward to the release of five new Alfred Hitchcock titles including Lifeboat.

Julie Vrana, manager of Twilight Video, has noticed a big classic push by the studios. One recent promotion featured the release of six Fred Astaire titles after his death.

That's Video, one of San Luis Obispo's first video stores, prides itself with the largest classical selection in town, said manager Myrna Nickelsburg.

Other notable releases are four titles from Marilyn Monroe, including Niagara and the Thin Man series, starring William Powell and Myrna Loy as the original moonlighting detectives. Look for a Shirley Temple collection soon.

But many people probably think that only movie buffs can enjoy the classics and let's face it — who's got time to watch the past when the present moves so fast? Well, many could be in for a surprise.

Old movies have a charm about them that is unequalled by the huge-budget blockbusters of today. True, most movies were simpler before 1965, and they didn't sport top-40 soundtracks, but they did entertain. I compare old movies to old music: one can't really appreciate U2 without knowing who Elvis Presley was. For those that liked Broadcast News, try Citizen Kane. It's a type of cultural literacy because by recognizing the classics, we can understand today's films better.

Here are some more advantages:

• Classics are usually cheaper to rent. Some stores offer old movies at 99 cents.
• Most old movies are short (90 minutes) and are light in nature.
• Unlike today, the only old movies put on video are the ones of merit. No, they're not all Oscar winners and some are silly, but movies were done with great care in the Golden Age.
• Classics are easy to rent because everybody else is trying to get the new movies. Bask in the tranquility of the section everybody else avoids.

America's rich cultural legacy displayed in Galerie

The exhibition looks at life in each of these regions and examines some of the social and economic issues which took root such as poverty, displacement of groups, pressures of immigration and wage disputes. This exhibition presents a new kind of history featuring the work, social customs, entertainments, conflicts and choices of ordinary people with diverse cultural legacies.

A photographic reproduction of Absalom Jones, the founder of Free African Episcopal Church, is located in the politics and government section of the exhibition. Jones was one of the leaders of Philadelphia's black community. He was born a slave and later purchased his freedom. Another panel is devoted to reviewing where the U.S. capital was first located and its later move.

In the religion section there is a drawing of "Frenzied Negro Methodists" holding a religious meeting in a Philadelphia alley. This work was done by Pavel Petrovich Svinyin in 1812.

The New England states include Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island. The panels in this section explain the history and importance of these states. The Middle Atlantic States are New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware. These states displayed more cultural diversity than any other region.

A panel about artisans in this section describes how skilled workers comprised a large proportion of Philadelphia's population and established themselves as a class separate from the merchant and labor class.

The Chesapeake Region includes West Virginia, Virginia and Maryland.

By the 1790s, the Chesapeake region was the richest and most politically powerful area in the United States.

There are posters in this section advertising the sale of negroes and rewards for the return of runaway slaves.

The Lowcountry region includes North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. The population in this region was at much French as English, Catholic as Protestant and 80-90 percent enslaved African-American.

The Appeal of Contact Lenses

With today's technology, most people can wear contact lenses successfully. There are somewhere between 12-18 million people now wearing them.

What are the Advantages:

- Contact lens wearers, unlike eyeglass wearers, usually look through the center of the lenses where vision is best and their view is not blocked by frames.

- Contact lenses do not "fog up" from changes in temperature or perspiration; they are unaffected by rain; and rarely interfere with most activities.

- Psychologically, contact lenses can boost the morale of people concerned with how they look in glasses.

- Optically they are the preferred treatment for certain vision conditions such as severe near and farsightedness, and irregular astigmatism.

Contact lenses are ideal for sports as well as making it easier to use optical instruments such as microscopes and cameras.

Contact lenses do have some disadvantages as well, including:

- They may need to be replaced more frequently, although insurance is available.

- Contact lenses take more time and effort than glasses to care for properly.

- They may cause some mild blurring of vision and discomfort during initial adaptation.

The decision to wear contact lenses is a personal one and it pays to get the facts before you decide to join the ranks of successful wearers.

very much like the sounds of ocean waves crashing," said Bewick. "Sitarists have that really wavy kind of sound."

A cover the band likes to perform is "Rocky Mountain High" by John Denver. "The song actually fits well," Bewick said, laughing, "because of our cello and harmonies. We're not trying to sound like John Denver."

Bewick said it is important to balance the music with socially aware lyrics, but actually understanding the words isn't always necessary. "I don't feel our lyrics have to be understood to have an impact because it is the whole thing between the music and lyrics that makes the song. For people's imagination and let them hear what they like to hear," said Bewick, who is the principle song writer for the band. Beside playing live, the band is also searching for an independent record deal.

"If I had to be part of the corporate rock movement in order to do something with music, I wouldn't be a musician," he said.

But not all commercial stars are necessarily bad, Bewick said. "I bought the most recent George Harrison album. It has a really large modern-produced sound, but I love George Harrison and everything he has ever stood for. It was a different album than anything he had ever done. But just because it's modern doesn't make it any less true to him."

Along with George Harrison, Bewick also lists musical influences such as Bob Dylan, Led Zeppelin and Stravinsky.

Red Eleven will bring their original music plus a few covers to D.K.'s West Indies Bar Feb. 6 at 9 p.m. Tickets are $2 at the door.

Gray provides steadying force on youthful Poly squad
By Keith Nunes
Two years after being a late arrival in the Mustangs' 1985-86 team, Jeff Gray is an accepted, important cog in the winning shot, head coach Steve Season.

"Jeff is one of the most consistent players on the team," said head coach Steve Season.

"His experience, confidence and leadership have helped bring this team together," said Gray.

Gray, a 6-1 senior point guard, has been with the Mustangs three years. He is one of three returning starters from last year's championship team.

"I think the two best characteristics I can offer the team are my leadership ability and my experience," said Gray.

"Last year we had two strong leaders in Sean Chambers and Melvin Parker. When they left the team, they left a hole. I like to think I helped fill that hole. When I bring the ball downcourt, it's nice to know that the other four players have confidence in me to run the offense." Gray transferred to Cal Poly from Diablo Valley College, where he averaged 12 points and seven assists per game, and was named to the all-Golden Gate Conference team.

"Personally I was a little disappointed in my performance last year," said Gray.

"I feel that I could have done more scoring and played better defense. This year I want to prove, not just to myself, but to the other teams, how good I can be." Last year Gray started in 28 games and averaged 4.3 points and 2.9 rebounds per game. This year he has started in all of the Mustangs' games and is averaging six points and 3.6 rebounds.

What should have been an easy win for the Cal Poly wrestling team turned into a bloody close match against the Brigham Young Cougars Wednesday night in the Main Gym.

"We were lucky to pull this baby off," said Cal Poly head coach Dennis Cowell. "We won 17-5 to a team we should have beaten easily. We'll take it though."

The Cougars entered the meet 2-5-1 overall and 0-1-0 in the Western Athletic Conference.

Point guard Jeff Gray (20) leads the team in assists.

The Mustangs went in 10-5-1 overall this season and were 5-1 in the Pacific 10 Conference.

A little blood doesn't hurt Poly, BYU falls

The Cal Poly gymnastics team has proven it can compete with Division I squads and come out on top.

The Division II Lady Mustangs are ranked fourth in the nation. Head coach Tim Rivera said every time Cal Poly competes with Division I teams in the same meet, the Lady Mustangs are more competitive with the Division I squads.

In the U.C. Berkeley Invitational last month, Cal Poly scored a 169.45. Division I opponents Stanford and Cal had 175.60 and 174.45, respectively, while Division I Chico State scored a 133.35.

"We are definitely just as good as Division I," said Rivera. "We are definitely just as good as Division I," said Rivera.

GRAY

"I think the difference between this year and last year's team is that there are 10 players on this team who can play any time and do the job," he said. The Mustangs have a chance to contribute in order to be successful.

Gray and the Mustangs will be in action Saturday, when Cal Poly hosts Riverside. Game time is 8:30 p.m.

BLOOD

"I was way better than on the fast," he said. "No one can hang with me when it comes to going fast."

Osborne's victory came at a key point in the race. It gave the Mustangs a lead of 13-9.

"Eric wrestled real smart," said Cowell. "It was a great performance." The second bloody incident came in the final match. Cal Poly's Tony Leonard (177) beat Bob Allman decisively, 15-13, for the last bloody win with nine points in the third period, but he received a gaze over his right eye.

We have to get in shape before our regional and nationals," Romero said. "We have to be mentally prepared just like you have to be physically prepared."

Other Cal Poly winners were Joe Pangestain (118), Darven Brown (95) and Mathematics Binyon (138).

Pangestain wasn't very excited about his victory.

"I was having a lot of fun up to my abili­ p.m. in Crandall Gym.

Rivera said the Lady Mustangs have improved a lot since their first meet.

The Lady Mustangs say the support they give each other is what helps them win. They are very close and supportive of each other.

“We have fun and become close by reaching for the same goals,” said Bridget Magor, a sophomore.

For the first time since he's been at Cal Poly, Rivera gave the team a three-day break from practice last weekend. He said the women needed a break after all the preparation that went into the early season.

“The girls work hard,” said Rivera. “Sometimes we wonder why we’re here. When we do well, that makes it all worth it.”
