Poly appeals $20,000 sexual harassment ruling

By Alison Skratt

Cal Poly is appealing a $20,000 award for damages granted to a woman hired by its industrial paint shop, who claimed she underwent four years of sexual harassment by fellow workers. The appeal will go the the state Superior Court, which can overturn the award and decision.

The Fair Employment and Housing Commission's ruling for the award followed the filing of a formal complaint, an investigation, a public hearing and a review under four years of sexual harassment starting almost immediately after she was hired in April 1978, according to the Country Telegraph-Tribune.

Bowlby accused fellow workers of harassing her by name-calling, placing pictures of a naked woman in her lunchbox and refusing to work with her, said the commission, according to the Associated Press. However, the commission's report did recognize that university officials had made a "sincere and laudable effort . . . to bring a woman into a male-dominated field," but that the harassment it did not excuse "the vicious treatment she received because of her sex." The decision said Bowlby's work environment was "offensive, hostile, oppressive and intimidating," adding that under these harsh working conditions, the need for medical and psychiatric care arose. The decision also said the university failed to properly investigate her complaints and discipline her co-workers, according to AP.

The $20,000 was awarded for emotional distress, but since the commission determined that she left her job voluntarily in 1982, damages for lost wages were not awarded.

Tipsy Taxi program returns, will be free

By Jenny Lampman

After a three-month hiatus, the newly structured Tipsy Taxi program will once again offer free rides home to those who've had one too many to drink.

The ASI-sponsored program, which goes into effect today, now offers rides to Cal Poly students, as well as the community. At no expense to the organization or bar offering the service.

Past programs have provided the organizations to purchase coupons, which offer a ride home to their customers or guests. Because of new funding sponsors, the program is now able to exist on its own without direct income from participating organizations.

The coupons are issued to "on-sale" establishments and organizations in books of 10.

Each coupon provides a free ride for one to four people to one residential address within the San Luis Obispo city limits or to the County Club Estates area.

In fall 1986, ASI tested the first Tipsy Taxi program, which was used 233 times in a two- and-a-half-month period. After an evaluation of the program, which was solely funded by ASI and the Interfraternity Council, it was determined there was a definite need for the program and that drunken driving was also a community problem.

For the past few months, ASI members have been seeking other entities to support the program so it can be expanded.

Tipsy Taxi now has $7,500 to initiate the new program, including $2,200 donated from the French Hospital Medical Center, $2,000 from ASI funding and $3,300 from ASI gift-in-kind

CSU students strive for trustees' award

By Tricia Higgins

Cal Poly will recommend one student to compete in the systemwide California State University Trustees' Award for Outstanding Achievement for 1988-89.

The award, founded by the Evelyn D. Armer Memorial Scholarship, will give three non-renewable awards of $2,500 each to currently enrolled CSU students.

Laura Dinnmett, Cal Poly's scholarship program manager, said that because only three students from the entire CSU system will be chosen for the Outstanding Achievement Award, it is possible that no one from Cal Poly will receive the award.

Students competing for the award must demonstrate financial need and academic and extracurricular merits, including high academic performance, community service and personal achievement.

The group of about 200 students competing for the award are also the finalists for the Outstanding Achievement award.

Deukmejian praises public safety

New police legislation urged at SLO sheriff's convention

By Shelly Evans

Gov. George Deukmejian commended officers statewide for their dedication to public safety.

In a speech at the California State Sheriff's Association conference held this week at the Embassy Suites Hotel in San Luis Obispo, Deukmejian said public safety has been established as a top priority at the state level.

"During the gold rush days, the sheriff's badge stood as a symbol for law and justice," Deukmejian told the group. "Today, they are a group committed to law and dedicated to justice."

A major court reform effort during the past two years has been highlighted by the signing of 10 bills, Deukmejian said. California's congressional representatives voted to spend $350 million to take over the funding of trial courts and created 109 judicial positions. The goal is to speed up civil and criminal trials, he said.

Deukmejian also summarized voter approval of five California Supreme Court justices.
Sacrificing the past for principles

I am a white male from the Deep South, born and bred a racist and a Republican. I was raised in a small town where I was segregated in spirit and in geography — the whites lived in relatively beautiful suburbs, the blacks in a 10-block ghetto known as Nigger Town.

On the day of the civil rights leader Martin Luther King was murdered by a white Southerner, blacks youths upset by his death and all the other things their race had suffered went on a rampage at my junior high school. They formed a battle line and swept down upon the white kids trapped in the schoolyard before classes began, clubbing, kicking and punching indiscriminately.

I was one of the students carried to the hospital that day. My head was split, blood streaming down my 13-year-old face. I was one of the students who won while the stitches were being sewn. Mean­while, white parents were milling about in the emergency room planning revenge.

Two decades later, I am working to help elect Jesse Jackson president. Who can tell me back in Florida they respond with shock, disgust, amazement. Some of them respond with the expected racist epithets:

"How can you be working for one of them blacks?" they say, using less-than-kind words to describe the black people.

Others tell me I'm wasting my time because Jackson is too outspoken and has to appeal to black people for his supporters? The most cunning arguments come from my educated, liberal, Democratic friends.

"Sure, Jesse Jackson is a great speaker and he is miles ahead of the candidates in sincerity and his voter appeal," they admit. "But he will never be elected because he is just not ready for a black man as president."

Not ready because it tells itself it is not ready. Jackson is criticized because of his color, his alleged lack of experience as a professional politician, his lack of money, his family, his fervency.

Jackson says things no other candidate will mention, things about the truth of what he says. He points out that America is controlled by a white, male, corporate elite. That makes people nervous. Americans prefer to hear the same old rhetoric: "America is No. 1."

Jackson says things no other candidate will mention, things about the truth of what he says.

Citizens should become active in rent issues

Editor — I trust all San Luis Obispoans are aware of the magnitude of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in the Penn Central case. Especially gratifying is the 6-2 result, as such an overwhelming vote reflects the same legal aspect of the issue to rent. The case puts to rest now.

I urge all citizens to give careful study to both Measure D and Measure E and get out and vote this June. Never has such a clear-cut opportunity come up for people to have a say in their own economic well-being. Now the fact is as clear as any law of the land that rent control is constitutional in principle. No longer do citizens who have been active in this area of SLO life have to fear a battery of lawyers attacking whatever results come from their efforts.

Since things have reached the "put it to the people" stage AGAIN (we thought we had already voted IN such rent control), I sincerely hope we'll all take serious and real efforts to support and act accordingly.

You will find that as of now there are many of your involved government and private leaders placing their names on the record on this issue. For example, signing the argument against polling (both Measure D were signed by Dr. Clark (eight-year president of the GMRID, mobile-home group) and Bill Roalman (newly appointed planning commissioner). Also of importance for you to know now are some signatures favoring Measure E. Notably, they include councilmembers Penny Rapan, Peg Burau, and K. Settle.

When people who sometimes differ join forces, as in this case of favoring protection of vast numbers of people in SLO, it's something we all should find out more about.

Rules thwart cash flow

Editor — Once again, we are subjected to the ant­ conformities of the conser­ vative right that tends to govern policy at this institution. As an annual, I feel it is time to ques­tion why the students of Cal Poly allow such policy to continue? A check of the dormitories and one realizes that this dry-campus policy is just another front. Sure, everybody jumps at the chance to increase the fees, but comes to support a clarification of the alcohol policy, the boltsier than such step in those who speak their peace will suffer. Once again Cal Poly has asked me to raise my hand and once again I refuse to give up my hard­ earned dollars to an institution that is dis­ tant from its own ideals. CANDY'S decision making and allowing a select few to dictate their moral values over the rest means that in the long run, in terms of alumni support, Cal Poly will remain unsupported."

Why should I donate to Cal Poly when indecisiveness is the state of the art here? The bawl­ ing alley is a prime example, along with many other issues. CANDYS' decision making and allowing a select few to dictate their moral values over the rest means that in the long run, in terms of alumni support, Cal Poly will remain unsupported."

Low rainfall and high demand force water restrictions in SF

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Water officials plan to seek mandatory restrictions on water use this spring, including limiting the watering of lawns.

The restrictions are expected to go to the city Public Utilities Commission for approval at its April 26 meeting. PUC acting general manager Dean Coffey said on Tuesday.

The move will ban hosing down sidewalks, except in certain heavily used areas, and prohibit lawns watering to the point that water overflows into gutters, he said.

Two consecutive below-normal rainfall seasons, combined with increasing demand from the San Francisco Water Department's South Bay customers, led to the proposed restrictions, according to department spokesman Bob Vasconcellos.

"Last year we didn't get significant rain from a purely voluntary campaign," explained Vasconcellos. "Our goal was to reduce consumption 10 percent, and instead it went up 6 percent."

San Francisco loses Olympic bid, says unified front missing

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A U.S. Olympic Committee official said San Francisco lost its bid to host the 1996 Olympic Games because it lacked a unified front, a "conflict and confusion" over the city's bid.

Jimmy Carnes, co-chairman of the USOC's site selection committee, told the San Francisco Examiner that there was "conflict and confusion" over the city's bid.

Carnes said the conflict resulted from publicity over a Board of Supervisors' resolution that included several pro-gay rights conditions the city would impose if it played host to the games.

"I would not think our committee could look favorably on San Francisco's bid when you don't have a unified front, when the other cities do," said Carnes.

"Our committee likes to look at the positive aspects and you have so many positive things in San Francisco, but not enough to override the other cities."

Swaggart to return to pulpit despite yearlong suspension

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Evangelist Jimmy Swaggart will return to the pulpit on May 22, with or without the blessing of national Assemblies of God church officials who suspended him for a year, his lawyer said Wednesday.

The date coincides with a more lenient three-month suspension given Swaggart by the church's Louisiana council after his tearful confession on Feb. 21 that he committed sins against his church and family.

The national Executive Presbytery had decided that the state council's penalty was not severe enough and announced Tuesday that Swaggart must stop preaching for at least one year and undergo two years of rehabilitation.

"We have an issue involving the constitution and bylaws of this organization," said Bill Treby, a lawyer for Swaggart.

He said there was a conflict over whether the national presbytery or the Louisiana district council had the right to discipline ministers.

Law promotes teen chastity, tells young girls 'date Jesus'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal law aimed at encouraging chastity among teen-agers provides money to religious groups that, in one instance, advised "young girls to pretend that Jesus is their date," the Supreme Court was told Wednesday.

"We're not saying that chastity cannot be a secular value, but it has been misused" by religious groups funded under the 1981 law, argued Janet Benshoof, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer.

As a result, she contended, the law unconstitutionally promotes religion.

But the Reagan administration's top-ranked courtroom lawyer defended the law.

 Solicitor General Charles Fried said the law, known as the Adolescent Family Life Act, was passed by Congress "in response to grave social, economic and health costs" of early-adolescent pregnancy.

Japanese automakers caught dumping cars on U.S. market

DETROIT (AP) — A group representing U.S. automakers said Wednesday it has evidence that five Japanese makers are dumping small pickups on the U.S. market and that the practice has injured domestic manufacturers and workers.

The evidence is contained in a study commissioned by the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association on behalf of General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp.

The study, by Wilmer, Cutler & Pickering of Washington, D.C., found that the five Japanese companies are dumping, or selling the vehicles for 10 percent to 48 percent less in the United States than in their home market.

"The study analysts concluded that the effect of this dumping margin was something on the order of 140,000 lost units of production to U.S. manufacturers," MVMA President Thomas Hanna said.

"That relates to about $500 million in lost wages, profits and sales," he said.

Half a ton of cocaine, 8 drug traffickers nabbed in Mexico

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — Federal Judicial Police confiscated half a ton of cocaine and arrested eight drug traffickers, the government news agency Notimex reported.

It said the agents also confiscated 12 firearms, 2,000 cartridges and five vehicles that the gang used in their illicit activities.

Five of those arrested were said to be relatives of Rafael Caro Quintero, the reputed drug baron jailed for nearly three years in the kidnap-murder of U.S. special agent Enrique Camarena Salazar.

Notimex also reported from Ciudad Obregón in the northeastern border state of Sonora that federal agents arrested seven more men and destroyed more than a ton of marijuana in a raid in the southern part of the state.

ASK LeNan

Dear LeNan

I seem to be able to go all day without eating, because I'm not hungry at all, but when I sit down in the evening I'm starved, and I eat everything I can find. What do you recommend?

Reply:

When you are experiencing in the evening is a drop in your blood sugar concentration. When this happens, the brain sends out signals for you to eat. Your brain knows the fastest way for you to elevate the blood sugar is to eat sweets, so, unfortunately, these hunger pangs you feel probably include a craving for sweets also.

At Diet Center, we teach you how eating on time and on a schedule and selecting appropriate foods can help you to maintain a more constant blood sugar level. Eating properly is the only way to eliminate the craving for sweets and the extreme hunger you have experienced.

Open safe invites spring break theft

By Marisa Fujikake

An unknown person stole money from the Yosemite Hall dormitory safe during spring break, according to Cal Poly Public Safety. The theft occurred sometime between the night of March 19 and the morning of March 20, police said.

Officer Pauline Hardy said the police said. "All they had to do was open the door and reach in," said Hardy.

"They didn't appear to be broken into," said Carol Folsom, coordinator of student development for Yosemite Hall, who called in the theft Sunday night. Tighter security measures will be enforced at Yosemite Hall, said Folsom. "We're going to upgrade our security," she said.

Identification of the suspect and the amount stolen are still under investigation.

"It costs taxpayers $17,000 a year to house a prisoner," Deukmejian said. However, he continued, a recent survey has shown criminals who make it to the state-prison level would commit 187 crimes and cost society more than $400,000 a year if they were out on the street.

Deukmejian urged the group to support legislation permitting electronic surveillance to be used by law enforcement groups in arrests if there is sufficient evidence of criminal actions.

"The drug scene has shifted from Florida to California," Deukmejian said, noting the enactment of wire tapping in Florida has driven drug smugglers out of the state.

"Fifty to 75 percent of men arrested for serious crimes are under the influence of drugs," he said. "Five officers have been killed by drug dealers or addicts. That is a heinous act."
Ethics and doing business

Morals class dearth could leave grads on own if ever faced with temptation

By Jill Gregory, staff writer

For many people, the term “business ethics” is a contradiction in terms that provokes curiosity or skepticism. Today’s news is full of stories about insider trading, fraudulent defense contracts and other incidents, all of which point to the decay of ethical standards in business. The stories are those one might expect to see in a supermarket tabloid, but most are true. The New York Times recently ran an article on the front page about a 24-year-old man accused of putting rat poison in contact solution and buying options to sell the stock, hoping for a price decline. This item appeared not long after Ivan Boesky and Dennis Levine were caught in an insider-trading scandal. These incidents do not appear to be isolated. Almost everywhere one looks in business today, from the Bank of Boston money laundering scandal to the E.F. Hutton check kiting scheme, one can usually find some type of dirty business taking place. Are these incidents indicative of a severe erosion of ethics in America’s business world today? Do these events signify a return to days of the robber barons and corrupt business practices? Is U.S. business headed for deeper trouble caused by the Yuppie generation and its thirst for money and power? These are questions that provoke debate in the business world today.

“I don’t try to impose views of what is right and wrong, but instead I teach what is legal and what is not. It is up to the individual to make his own decisions.”

say, 10 years ago,” said Lou Turley, a Cal Poly marketing professor. “It is just that with increased competition, the harsh domestic business situation and the emphasis on the profit motive, it is now easier for firms and/or businesspeople to rationalize unethical behavior.”

Turley added that since more and more firms are fighting for less market share, they do what they can to survive and sometimes it includes using unethical business practices.

According to a recent article in Fortune magazine, the difficult aspect of dealing with an ethics problem is that ethical behavior varies with context and is highly subjective and personalized.

The term “ethics” refers to a code of conduct that guides a person in dealing with others.

“Corporations cannot ignore ethics, because they have responsibilities to many people, including customers, shareholders, management and the government,” said Lee Burgunder, a Cal Poly business professor. “It is up to the individual corporation to determine where their responsibility lies.”

Burgunder teaches a class, Business 404, entitled Government and Social Influences on Business, that touches on this issue but doesn’t emphasize ethics.

“The main area addressed in Bus 404 is business dealings with government and society,” said Burgunder. “I don’t try to impose views of what is right and wrong, but instead I teach what is legal and what is not. It is up to the individual to make his own decisions.”

Many business schools across the country realize the importance of ethics and offer specific courses devoted to the discussion of ethics. Different universities, however, handle ethics in different ways. Some, like Cal Poly, leave the ethical issues to discussion in various business classes, an approach that is disputed among faculty and students.

“I personally think it’s a shame that there isn’t a business ethics class here at Cal Poly, but unfortunately this situation is not atypical among business schools,” said Turley. “One business ethics class should be required for every business student, because it is crucial to get students to think about the ‘gray areas’ involving ethics before they are forced to make difficult decisions with their careers on the line.”

Turley added he feels any school that doesn’t offer a business ethics class is doing its students a disservice. He suggested that an ethics class would open the eyes of some business students and remove some of the isolation they have.

This opinion was shared by Mary Beth Armstrong, a Cal Poly accounting professor.

“Business ethics would be a valuable course to students, because they would be able to think about ethical questions before they are forced to solve them in the real world,” said Armstrong. “Personally I think ethical issues are just as important as any other business issue we cover, and I would definitely like to see a specific ethics class

... with increased competition, the harsh domestic business situation and the emphasis on the profit motive, it is now easier for ... businesspeople to rationalize unethical behavior.

specific ethics class is necessary,” said Burgunder. “I think that by college age, one’s personal ethics are pretty well developed. I think the best way to deal with ethics is to address the issue in my classes and let other instructors address it in theirs.”

Cal Poly’s philosophy department offers a professional ethics class, and Burgunder said he added.

Mitch Kumagai, a business-marketing major, also favored the idea of a business ethics class.

“The exposure to ethics that I have received at Cal Poly has been through lecture and discussion in various business classes,” Kumagai said. “I’m not sure what a business ethics class would consist of, but I definitely think it is an important area to study.”

But there are different views.

“I’m not really sure that a feels the ethics question is better left to the philosophers.

“I think someone with a strong philosophical background is much more qualified to teach students about ethics than I am,” he said. Turley agreed with this view.

“I recognize the fact that I wasn’t trained in the area of logic and ethics,” said Turley. "However, if we aren’t requiring the philosophers to teach business ethics, then someone in the business department should be required to do so."
Tel Aviv city center project to help unify Jews, Arabs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In efforts to promote harmony between Jews and Arabs, industrialist Armand Hammer and local Jewish groups have launched a drive to build a $30 million community center in a poor Arab suburb of Tel Aviv.

"We will set an example for the rest of Israel and the Arab world that Jews and Arabs can live together," Hammer said during a news conference Tuesday. Hammer and fellow industrialist Guilford Glazer said they hope to raise $1.6 million to help build the schools and recreation facilities in Ajami-Lev Yaffo, a blighted suburb of Tel Aviv populated by more than 12,000 Arabs. The Jewish Federation Council of Greater Los Angeles hopes to raise $10 million for the project.

Hammer, chairman of Occidental Petroleum, said recent violence in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip had nothing to do with the center's conception.

Planning for the community center, viewed as a way to bond the two groups, began more than two years ago, he said. "This center will bring people together," he said.

Arizona Senate progresses toward ruling on Mecham impeachment

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Arizona Senate dismissed the third, most serious, impeachment charge against Gov. Evan Mecham Wednesday and moved toward considering a verdict on the two charges already heard.

The vote was a surprise to most involved, including the senator who made the motion, Republican Wayne Stump, who had predicted it would get no more than three votes.

Several of those who voted to dismiss said they were doing so in order to avoid prejudicing Mecham's upcoming criminal trial on the charge that he concealed a $350,000 campaign loan. That would have been the subject of evidence on the third impeachment charge and Stump said it would have put the governor in "cross-eyed double jeopardy."

The motion passed on a simple majority with 16 of those present voting in favor and 12 voting no. Two senators were absent.

Before the vote, other senators had urged putting the third charge in abeyance while they vote on the first two, which allege that Mecham misused $80,000 from a protocol fund and obstructed an investigation of an alleged death threat by a staff member.

"If the governor is exonerated, he ought to know that so he can go on to other things," said Democrat Carolyn Walker. "If he is convicted, the state ought not to have to go through the agony of this trial a day longer."

The governor's trial on felony charges related to the $350,000 campaign loan begins April 21 in Maricopa County Superior Court. Mecham, 63, the first U.S. gov-

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jesse Jackson is running for president on a liberal platform he calls "the opposite of Reaganomics" — raising taxes on the rich, slashing Pentagon spending, creating a national health program for all, doubling the budget for education and raising the minimum wage.

Jackson, who has finished first or second in most of the Democratic presidential primaries and caucuses and is close behind Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis in the delegate chase, has cast himself as the candidate of the working class, farmers, the jobless, the hungry, the homeless and others who have not prospered in the Reagan years.

"Economic violence haunts the lives of most Americans," Jackson said in a policy paper.

"There is nothing wrong with the American worker, the family farmer, or the small businessperson. There is something wrong with the system." He claims he could cut the deficit by one-third by raising taxes on "the richest 1 percent" of Americans and on corporations.

"There's nothing radical about his message," said John White, the Texan who was chairman of the Democratic Party during the Carter administration and now a Jackson supporter. "It's neither liberal nor conservative. It's the core language of the Democratic Party."

Jackson has called for a moratorium on family farm foreclosures; civil rights legislation to protect lesbians and gay men; tapping public pension funds to build housing, roads, mass transit and water systems; debt relief and an "international Marshall Plan" for the Third World; a national floor for welfare benefits; a phase-out of nuclear power; a freeze on nuclear weapons; and a halt to U.S. aid for the Contra rebels in Nicaragua and the UNITA insurgents in Angola.

Jackson said Monday his message is "stop economic violence against American farmers and workers. Stop drugs. Invest in our children. Reinvest in America. And that is the opposite of Reaganomics."

Here are some of Jackson's key positions:

Jackson says, "U.S. policy in the Middle East is fatally flawed. It is not working for Israel, for the Palestinians or for the interests of the United States."

He has called for an alternative policy that "moves the process that began at Camp David to the next progressive step."

On health care, Jackson says there should be a universal, comprehensive health care program for all, not just the elderly, "no matter what their income."

Two Mustang teams take home national honors

Osborne wins fourth spot in Division I

By John Kesecker

Cal Poly senior Eric Osborne took fourth place at the NCAA Division I Wrestling Championships two weeks ago, earning the Mustangs 25th place in a field of 11.

The fourth-seeded Osborne scored all of Cal Poly's points with his four wins at the championships.

WRESTLING

Osborne, at 167 pounds, won 35-4 for the year. He began the tournament with a 12-4 decision over Northern Iowa's Keith Mauser. He then moved ahead on a technical fall by Mike VanArsdale of Iowa State, the eventual 167-pound champion.

Over Oklahoma State's Mike Farrell, but lost 10-4 to Mike VanAndel of Iowa State, the eventual 177-pound champion.

"If I could have probably won it, he said, "I would do this," said Lenni Cowell, the Mustang's wrestling coach.

Osborne beat the top-seeded David Lee of Wisconsin in the quarterfinal round, but lost 16-12 to eventual national champion, Barry Hall.

Cal Poly's men's and women's teams won the NCAA Swimming Championships two weeks ago.

The Mustangs captured nine individual and three school relay records to be national champions.

Highlighting the meet was senior Neil Lee, who won the 100-yard butterfly to become the only national champion for Cal Poly this year.

"He knew he had that kind of speed in him, he was just too close to be a national champion," said Rich Firman, Cal Poly's men's and women's swimming coach.

Other all-American performers

WASCO

Two assistant football coaches have been named to head the football teams.

Bill Macdermott and Harold Andersen were under the direction of second-year head coach Lyle Setencich. Macdermott, who served as a volunteer coach/watcher at Cal Poly last season, will assume his duties as the offensive line coach.

He came to Cal Poly from Wesleyan University, where he served as head football coach for 16 years. In that capacity he compiled a 69-56-3 record. During that period, he also served as the assistant lacrosse coach.

Macdermott is a member of the American Football Coaches Association.

Andersen will serve as the football backer coach. He joined the football program after serving seven years as an area and regional National Football League scout for Blestco, Inc. of Stockton.

"We took four men and eight women and placed ninth in both," said Firman. "I'm extremely excited about their performances."

The men's team finished with 34 points, while the women's Mustangs scored 102.

The Cal State Bakersfield's men's team won the national title for the third straight year with 397 points while the Cal State Nor- thridge women's team took its second consecutive title with 441 points.

SPORTSBRIEF

Two Mustang relay teams received all-American honors.

The Mustangs made a stronger showing than expected this year at nationals, considering the team's best male and female national swimmers last year, Rich Swoboda and Kelly Hayes, transferred out of Cal Poly.

"I'm extremely excited about their performances," Firman said.

The women's team finished with 34 points, while the Cal State Nor- thridge women's team took its second consecutive title with 441 points.
