Rec Center approved by students

By David Kddy

With the largest voter turnout in the history of ASI, this demonstrates the desire of the students to have a rec center," Mendes said.

With passage of the referendum, and approval by the state, student fees will be increased by $31 beginning in Fall 1987.

Mendes said that extensive planning had a great deal to do with the victory. He noted that 20,000 information booklets were distributed to the students, thereby insuring, he said, that they were informed on the issue.

Mendes added that he felt the high vote total should also silence critics who think the student body as apathetic. "Everyone thinks that Cal Poly students aren't interested and committed, but I think this showing disproves those beliefs."

ASI Vice President John Sweeney said that he is not only happy with the victory, but with the high vote total, because it indicates that the voting was truly representative.

"The Students for a Better Cal Poly would like to thank all the students who will participate who will make this a better Cal Poly," Sweeney said.

Mendes said that approximately 4,300 to 5,000 of the votes were cast on Wednesday, the first day of the balloting. This shows the student interest in the rec center, Mendes said.

Mendes: policy board suggested for Daily

By Mary Anne Talbott

ASI President Mike Mendes suggested Wednesday night that the Student Senate consider sponsoring a resolution which would ask for the establishment of a university-wide advisory and policy-making board for Mustang Daily.

Mendes said he has received complaints from people who were angry about a full-page advertisement in support of the proposed recreational facility that Mustang Daily sold and later refused to print, in addition to some general complaints throughout the year.

"I'd suggest that Mr. Mendes refer any complaints he has had about Mustang Daily to the newspaper," General Manager Claudia Snow said Thursday. "Taking this matter to the Student Senate is like taking a complaint about the Washington Post to Congress. The policy was explained to the person who placed the order at the time it was cancelled. It was an unfortunate situation, but certainly not political."

The cancellation was based on the assumption that Mustang Daily should not run political articles or advertisements on the day of the election.

"Students should have some form of recourse," said Mendes. "(the idea of an advisory board) is mainly because the paper affects everyone."

The board would be composed of students at large, university staff and professionals from the field "to have some unbiased people representative of the university community," he said.

"But it would not be an ASI board."

Mustang Daily is published by the State of California through the journalism department. The paper is run by a student editorial staff with a faculty advisor. The policy-making board, the Publisher's Board, is composed of journalism department faculty who act as agents of the state.

"There is a publisher's board, which meets on the second Tuesday of every month. It's a public meeting, open to anybody who has a complaint. The channel to that board is through the editor (of Mustang Daily)," said James H. Hayes, chairman of the board.

Any complaints should first be brought to the editor and the adviser, said Hayes, because most problems can be resolved at that level.

"If they're dissatisfied with the editor's and adviser's response, they should bring it to the publisher's board," he said.

"We welcome people who have remedies."

Mendes said the people with complaints didn't think that their concerns would be addressed by the publisher's board.

"They felt it was biased. That's my interpretation of general

Computer message system

Administrators, faculty members and students with access on the Cal Poly Cyber computer system are now able to leave important messages through their access accounts with the recent addition of MAIL, said a consultant with the instructional support group.

George Westlund said any student working on a class assignment, senior project or special studies project can have access to Cyber with the instructor's approval.

"MAIL can eliminate playing phone chase," Westlund said. Access to MAIL is obtained by anyone on the campus system, and See MAIL, page 5

Sandwich Plant is technology showcase

I'm all for progress — when it makes life easier or more pleasant. Even at Cal Poly, considered by many to be somewhat backward, the latest in technological wonders are helping to improve the quality of life for all.

Those automatic money dispensers near the Snack Bar, for example, are not only quick and convenient, they also stimulate the economy by making it easier than ever to spend money — $20 at a time.

And then there's that handy portable kiosk. It's unnecessary to ever go downtown. Battle '49 Cadillac Eldorados for the last parking space, probe the backseat cushions for parking meter change and stand in line at the post office. All that is required of kiosk customers is a quarter for each stamp.

"Why," I hear you ask, "does it cost 25¢ to buy a 22¢ stamp? And what are we supposed to do with those 1¢ stamps the machine spits out as change?"

The reasoning is derived from the same utilitarian logic used by the U.S. Treasury Department when it makes a fresh batch of pennies. (Who wants these pennies?) The U.S. Postal Service is biased in favor of Aquino.

Amazing as it may seem, these advancements continue. The human race seems, nevertheless, in the midst of a race, tireless in contriving more life-improving complications for those of us who just don't realize how tough things really are. The latest marvel of the high state of technological advancement at Cal Poly today is the new and improved Sandwich Plant.

The old Plant, inefficient in its use of space and (heaven forbid) out of style, was transformed during summer and fall quarters into a wonder of high tech design. The new Sandwich Plant is a showcase of the most important technological improvements of the 20th century. Architects, engineers and interior designers slaved to build a better Sandwich Plant through gray Formica. But modernization did not stop at the wall coverings. Ice dispensers fill styrofoam cups to the brim (never mind that patrons dump out the excess ice), Switchback lines, introduced to the world at Disneyland and brought into everyday life in banks and post offices around the country, grace the service counter. It is no secret that the Reagan administration hopes to observe the election. The State Department expects vote takeover. Aquino will win the race, pledging a western democracy.

U.S. delegation is biased in favor of Aquino.

Filipinos to attend his speeches and he is monopolizing the television media, giving no equal time to Aquino.

It is no secret that the Reagan administration hopes fraud by Marcos' supporters who, in turn, charge that the television and cinema, and are not exposed of Individualistic opinions extreme, exists, It seems, only to mask the statements made by our "Rambo" symbolism analogy. Free speech is what our country thrives on. Censorship, in its extreme, exists, it seems, only to mask exposure of individualistic opinions anti-opposition. Our society should not be as democratic as we would like to believe, but at least we have the luxury of expressing our own beliefs. Unfortunately, portions of our society are swayed unknowingly by those every day headlines and sound bites. The real image of the Salvadorans. And then there's that dandy Cadillac Eldorados for the last parking space, battle '49...
Panel hears NASA testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA told a presidential panel Thursday that an errant flame near Challenger's right rocket booster first appeared 39.8 seconds after liftoff and "moved quite a bit" in the final instants before an explosion destroyed the space shuttle and killed its crew.

But space agency officials said NASA has no reason to believe that sub-freezing launch-day temperatures had affected the boosters or in any other way contributed to the tragedy.

No matter what the cause, one official said NASA has no "practical" emergency procedure that could have saved the five-man, two-women crew so long as the boosters were burning.

Reagan defends new budget

WASHINGTON — President Reagan and his top aides defended the administration's new $994 billion budget against sharp attacks Thursday from both parties in Congress, a plan Reagan conceded might require "artificial respiration."

Congressional critics complained that the administration had made defense the top budget priority while calling for deep cutbacks in social programs.

But the president, in his annual economic report to Congress, said he was not willing to "sacrifice programs essential to the nation," nor to consider supporting a tax increase.

Reagan, in his third report to Congress in as many days, said the economic outlook was bright through the end of the decade.

Shuttle astronaut honored

One of the seven crew members aboard the space shuttle Challenger which exploded Jan. 28 was honored by members of the Hawaiian community in a tree dedication Thursday morning.

Lt. Col. Ellison S. Onizuke was honored by the planting of a purple leaf plum tree which was donated by the ornamental horticulture department. Children from the child development lab helped in the planting of the tree.

The dedication was organized by Hawaiian student Andy Masuura, a junior ornamental horticulture major. Coleen Abangan, president of the Hui O'Hawaii Club, said that it was Masuura who thought of the idea to honor the Hawaiian astronaut by planting a tree on the lawn in front of the child development lab across the street from the library.

Masuura said the dedication was not only to honor Onizuke, but also the astronauts who perished in the shuttle explosion.

Masuura described Onizuke as a "simple yet humble man."

Masuura said of the dedication, "I am sad ... but yet happy to get something like this going. The impact that he had and what he shared — that is what is lasting."

The dedication included an opening speech by Masuura, a brief prayer by Baptist minister Darrell Blankenship and the dedication of a carnation by Abangan.

Onizuke was born on the Kona coast of the big island. He was married and had two daughters, ages 10 and 16.

Student Senate OKs resolutions on scheduling

The Student Senate voted Wednesday night to approve two resolutions which could help students schedule their classes more easily.

The first resolution asks the Registration and Scheduling Committee of the Academic Senate to include in the schedule a form which asks departments to tell students when they might be more likely to get classes they want.

The program is not intended to replace current faculty advising, but would give students other resources and more open hours to gather information, Mendes said. "Professors aren't always up to date on all the school policies," Mendes said. "This is the only thing the program is interested in, so the information would be kept up to date."

By passing in the Student Senate we have proved the need for a program and now we can lobby for it even harder," Mendes said. Funding was proposed to come from the Academic Program Improvement Fund of the California State Universities.

The resolution was written in response to the problem of withholding codes, specifically that school in which students want to take courses has a built-in lag time, those classes, when they might be more likely to get them, said Hammond.

The resolution was designed to help alleviate the problem by providing formatting in the class schedule indicating which classes are usually impacted. This would help incoming students, unaware of impacted class problems, and allow students to request classes during quarters when they might be more likely to get them, said Hammond.

The resolution also asks that departments with classes that are continually impacted consider omitting the codes from the class schedule. Students would have to obtain permission to take the classes from the department before receiving the code.

The Senate rejected Randall's motion and voted to approve the resolution as presented.

The second resolution passed by the Senate is to start a peer-advisement program to provide student-to-student help in selecting classes. The program would be university-wide, establishing peer counseling outlets in every school on campus. "Student advisement isn't readily available to students now," she said. "Professors aren't always up to date, either."

The advisees would be selected and managed by school councils and overseen by a university or ASI committee. Advisers would be experienced upperclassmen with some training in counseling.

The program is not intended to replace current faculty advising, but would give students other resources and more open hours to gather information, Mendes said.

Poly Royal Queen to be selected Monday

By Katie Brittain
Staff Writer

Contestants for the title of Poly Royal Queen and her court are busy preparing for the upcoming Queen's Pageant on Monday in Chumash Auditorium.

“They're excited and ready to learn,” said Marjorie Larson, director of the Queens.

Larson, who has participated in many pageants and was the 1984 Miss City of San Luis Obispo, said contestants will learn leadership, self-control and self-confidence as they participate in the pageant scheduled to begin at 6 p.m.

A panel of judges will select the queen on the basis of poise, speaking ability and ease in handling public presentations, Larson said.

The process requires each candidate to respond to one question delivered in advance of the pageant.

The 10 finalists are then asked a surprise question before the number is narrowed down to five representatives.

Question topics deal with Cal Poly life and Poly Royal. For example, a judge might ask what the contestant feels she has contributed to Cal Poly, said Larson.

After her coronation, the Poly Royal Queen will travel throughout California representing Cal Poly and promoting Poly Royal, said Larson.

Larson said other activities for the queen will include a portrait sitting, visits to Cal Poly clubs and organizations and visits to community clubs and convalescent homes.

Eligible contestants must be students at Cal Poly with junior standing, be carrying a course load of at least 12 units with a grade point average of at least 2.3. They must have attended the university for at least two quarters and be sponsored by a recognized student club.

Tickets for the pageant are $1 and are available at the A.S.I. Ticket Office in the University Union.

It's wild. it's bizarre and it's coming soon to San Luis Obispo.

The eighth annual Mardi Gras celebration will give everyone the opportunity to let loose and party in the traditional New Orleans fashion.

Only during Mardi Gras can people who normally wear threepiece suits oozing respectability take it all off in exchange for a costume and mask as they dance and parade on downtown streets with family, friends and strangers at what many say is the wildest party of the year.

On Feb. 8 San Luis Obispo will celebrate Mardi Gras, or Fat Tuesday, with a parade, masked ball and Cajun supper, sponsored by the Mystik Krewe of Karnival, a local, non-profit organization created to celebrate Mardi Gras in the traditional New Orleans manner.

"This is really the only sort of community-wide party with no strings attached," said James Bagnall, Cal Poly architecture professor and king of the event. "The whole idea is to get the community involved in the parade or the ball."

Bagnall said the Mardi Gras celebration in San Luis Obispo began eight years ago with two Cal Poly professors and former New Orleans residents, D.J. Koberg and George Suchand.

"Don Koberg decided he was going to give a party ... for the whole town," said Bagnall. The first ball took place in a restaurant which is now the location of the Rainbow Theatre and Los Hermanos restaurant, he said. "The parade went around the block."

And the celebrations have gotten wilder every year.

Last year a couple of hundred people watched the parade and about 480 people attended the ball, said Bagnall. This year the parade will be followed by a New Orleans-style Cajun supper and masked ball at the San Luis Obispo Veterans Memorial Building.

Bagnall said the local celebration is one of the most authentic outside of New Orleans.

"Traditionally the celebration, put on by the Krewe, includes balls and parades and will go on for months until the Wednesday before Lent," said Bagnall. "But the San Luis Obispo Krewe is open to the public and those who want to join need only pay the registration fee for the supper and dance and they will automatically be included."

Suchand said the Krewe is not just a club but a closely-knit group, the membership of which is by invitation only. He said in some groups the only way to belong is to be born into the Krewe.

But the San Luis Obispo Krewe is open to the general public and those who want to join need only pay the registration fee for the supper and dance and they will automatically be included. Suchand said no matter how big the celebrations the crowds never got too carried away.

"It's amazing, I would be involved in celebrations every night with hundreds of thousands of people and never saw any violence," said Suchand. "People putting on a costume take on another identity and inhibitions just seem to go."

'Down and Out' is wise and warmhearted movie
By Robert Chacecy

"Down and Out in Beverly Hills" is the movie "Beverly Hills Cop" had promised to be. "Down and Out" is a blissful, warmhearted comedy that gracefully comments on the disparities between the rich and poor in America.

Rather than pummel the audience with obvious jokes the film's gentle yet rambunctious humor nibbles on the privileged rich. Written by Leon Capetanos and Paul Mazursky, (the West Coast's Woody Allen), the movie pokes fun at the blues of the bourgeoisie.

Dave Whiteman's (Richard Dreyfuss) Beverly Hills home, a white palatial tribute to self-absorption, has become a vault for neuroses. Dave, a wire hanger tycoon, has the hots for his maid. His wife Barbara (Bette Midler) is frigid and constantly droning. His daughter is anorexic. His son communicates sexual anxiety through home videos and prances about his room in a tutu. Even the Whiteman's dog is visited by a psychiatrist.

Into this neurotic hothouse tumbles the gamey, disheveled bum Jerry Baskin (Nick Nolte), who tries to drown himself in the Whiteman's pool. Dave rescues Jerry and invites him to stay in the backyard cabana. Of course, much more deviance pops up on the screen, due to Mazursky's generous wit. The timing in his direction is quirky and startling.

Nolte's Jerry is pure charlatan but Dreyfuss is the film's real prize. His Dave is glib, feisty, horny and compassionate. Except for its disappointing ending, "Down and Out in Beverly Hills" is a giddy antidote to the careerist 1980s.

What restaurant in town has barrel-dome ceilings with light beams, imported Italian tiles, fancy wallpaper and solid oak seats? Would you believe McDonald's? The new McDonald's on Madonna Road has a whole new look, and the McDonald's on Foothill Boulevard is soon to follow in its footsteps, according to the owner of both restaurants.

"It was simply my personal preference to spend more money on the decor," said Mike Charles, owner of both the franchises.

Charles said he thought it was time for McDonald's to change its image and get away from the browns and golds that usually decorate the inside of the restaurants.

The McDonald's on Madonna Road, which opened just before Christmas, is decked out in plum, black and gray colors.

Although business has been slower than usual, Charles said he expects things to pick up as soon as people realize and remember there is a McDonald's out by Madonna Plaza.

"Surprisingly, I haven't had one negative comment, but only a lot of positive comments," said Charles.

He said he hopes to add a park to the new McDonald's because many more younger children go there than to the McDonald's on Foothill Boulevard.

"The image of the McDonald's on Foothill will be more college-oriented, but we're not yet sure of the design."

"Blowing Bubbles," "On the Beach" and "People and Pigeons" are the names of three of 24 photographs taken by a Cal Poly student which are presently in an exhibit at a Los Angeles gallery.

"Abstract Reality," is the name of the exhibit showing through February at C'est La Vie Gallery in Topanga Canyon. The exhibit was photographed and organized by Mary Fullwood, a senior art major with a concentration in photography.

Fullwood said the exhibit was a combination of both black and white and color photography in which she attempts to capture the abstract environment. "I tried to show people things that were a little unusual," Fullwood said.

In one of her color photos titled, "On The Beach," Fullwood said she photographed the shine of the early sun on the tide. "I try and force people to see amazing color and beauty which is easily overlooked," Fullwood said.

Fullwood said she has entered her work in exhibits before; however, this is the first time she has had only her work featured. She has several other shows lined up, one of which will be at Linnens' Cafe in San Luis Obispo April 1.

The brothers look so much alike their father says he had to

Eric, 24, a produce clerk from Thousand Oaks, was still in Sacramento after his successful turn of the lottery's Big Spin wheel there, while the jubilant young man on Southern California television was Marc, his identical twin. It seems Marc and some friends of the twins were gathered in Eric's apartment to watch a TV replay of the winning spin Saturday when they decided to have a little fun when the reporters showed up.

Marc quickly donned Eric's bathrobe and slippers and the friends cooperated by whooping it up for the cameras and pouring champagne over the supposed winner's head.

The imposter told the newshounds he was going to go right out and buy a red Lamborghini sports car and give $1 million to his "loving brother, Marc."

"I never thought it would get on the 11 o'clock news," Marc admitted Wednesday.

"The whole thing was spontaneous. I just fell into it," the Camarillo optician said.

Eric, who admitted he was amused by the joke, said he really would give Marc some of his winnings.

MUSTANG DAILY

From page 1 comments." He said that because of this, "I felt it was my duty to bring it to the sense."

Nishan Havandjian, faculty adviser to the Daily, responded: "It's bizarre to talk about bias when in the last five years the board was never confronted with any complaints from any student entity on campus."

Donald Munro, editor of Mustang Daily, said the paper is funded through advertising revenues, not ASI.

"There are indirect benefits which have to be recognized," said Munro. The Mustang Daily uses state facilities, and the salaries of the general manager and faculty adviser are paid by the state.

"But the State of California is not the ASI," he said.

Student booked for drunk driving

A Cal Poly student was arrested for drunk driving early Monday morning after being involved in a car accident, according to a Cal Poly police report.

Glenn S. Morrison, 19, was arrested at 12:15 a.m. after the car he was driving crossed the divided lanes on Klamath Road behind the red brick dorms, and ran into a Volkswagen driven by Steven E. Abrams, 20, the police report said.

After Cal Poly police arrived, Morrison was given a field coordination test, which he failed, and was transferred to San Luis Obispo County Jail, where he failed the breath test and was booked, according to the report.

Morrison was later released on his own recognizance and is scheduled to appear in San Luis Obispo County Municipal Court on March 10.

Men's tennis

0-4: difficult season ahead

By Tim Robinson

When a team begins the season by losing the first four matches there would usually be reason to worry, but that is not the case for the Cal Poly tennis team.

Cal Poly, which is 0-4 on the young season, has lost to three Division I powerhouses — UCLA, Arizona, Arizona State — and a fairly strong UCSB team.

"UCLA, Arizona, Arizona State are all from the Pac-10 which is far the best conference in the country, and the National Champion has come from there almost every year over the past 25 years," said Hugh Bream, head coach of Cal Poly's tennis team.

He noted that usually teams of UCLA's caliber do not play their best six players. However, against Cal Poly they did and the Mustangs were easily beaten 9-0.

Later that same week Cal Poly traveled to UCSB and lost a disappointing match to a team they, perhaps, should have beat.

The Mustangs then traveled to Arizona last Friday to take on the University of Arizona, where they lost 6-3, but did score an upset when the Mustangs number two player Paul Lavender beat Arizona's number two seed player. In the match Cal Poly lost five of the other six matches, and had they taken two of those they would have won the match. They also dropped a match to Arizona State.

Gymnasts home after cold trip

The Cal Poly women's gymnastics team has returned from a trip to Seattle and the University of Alaska.

"We didn't have a bad idea for the Mustangs to bring home some ice from the northland to help heal all of their injuries," said Rhonda Richter, one of the Mustangs' top all-around performers, twisted her ankle in a light workout the day the Mustangs left for Seattle and didn't get to travel with the team. In addition, Kristy Broder was still having problems with a knee injury she suffered earlier this season and Jana Lehman, also a top all-rounder for the Mustangs, had to be scratched off the Alaska meet after she turned her ankle during the floor exercise.

The Mustangs lost to number one-ranked Seattle Pacific 174.4 to 160.15 Friday. "With a full team we would have been close and they (Seattle) knew it," said Mustang coach Tim Rivera.

Lehman placed third in the all-around competition, scoring a 34.0, the team's highest all-around score this season and she also placed second on the balance beam with an 8.9.

Julie Williams stepped in to take Richter's spot in the all-around competition and placed sixth with a 32.35. "I'm pleased with our scores considering, we didn't have our full team," he said.

The Mustangs traveled further north to meet U of A Sunday in Anchorage. Not only did the Mustangs lose 166.85 to 157.5, but they also lost Lehman to an ankle injury during the floor exercise. However, before the injury, Lehman was able to take second.

Tracksters' first meet Saturday

The Cal Poly men's and women's track teams will "sprint" into the first meet of their seasons Saturday, at the Roadrunner Invitational in Bakersfield.

Men's coach Tom Henderson looks at the invitational as a chance for him to take team inventory. "The meet allows me to run people who aren't starting and also let me rest people who are starting. This meet is designed specifically to get out on the track and work out the pre-season bugs," Henderson said.

The men's team is the defending national champion this season and has more depth than it did last season. With 34 distance runners alone, the Mustangs have more athletes than most other teams in their conference. "We have more people on our distance team than our conference, we have altogether," Henderson said.

Women's coach Lance Harter is also positive about the invitational to get a pre-season look at his team and isn't too concerned with how well things will go. "We're going to be wearing T-shirts instead of tank-tops," Harter said. "We want to get out on the track."

Although Harter isn't worried about winning the meet, he said that Cal Poly has been a dominant factor at the invitational in years past and he expects to do well this year. "We're using the meet as a shake-down to work out pre-season jitters," Harter said.

The men's team should be as strong as last year's team with nine returning all-Americans. Jim Halter received all-American honors in the hammer throw and will also be putting the shot and throwing the discuss this season.

Also returning is the 400-meter all-American relay team of Damon Shows, Steve Fisher, Kevin Pratt and Erik Josephson as well as the all-American mile relay team of Pratt, Arnold Maler, Dave Johnson and Richard Batiste. Brent Griffiths also received all-American honors on the discus throw.

Henderson said the team looked "real strong and solid" in the meet and that the scores were "vastly superior to any other green and gold meets in the past. "We're definitely ahead of schedule compared to last year," Henderson said.

The men's team of 20 teems are expected to be competing at the invitational, which will be scored like a relay meet instead of a dual meet. Events that are usually individual, such as sprints, will be scored by combining the times of the top three sprinters from each team in each event.
The Mustangs have an 8-6 record and are currently ranked eighth in the nation. If they continue at this pace, they should qualify for one of the eight spots for the National Championships.

TENNIS

"I didn't feel we played quite as well as we did against Arizona. I think the main reason for that was our confidence dropping just a little bit. It's easy to maintain it if you have time off in between matches, if you're playing a couple of easier teams, but when you're just going against the best, match after match, and you're playing well it's tough," said Bream.

Bream pointed out that Cal Poly is a non-scholarship school in tennis, yet it continues to attract some of the nation's top players because of the competition they face every year. An example is Zoller who was an all-American last year and was ranked in the top 10 of the juniors in Southern California. Playing at the no. 2 position, Landry, a sophomore and ranked No. 12 in the nation last year, went to the semifinals of the San Diego Intercollegiate Tournament, and was named the nation's Freshman of the Year last season.

At No. 3, Todd West is a transfer student from Saddleback Junior College, where he was ranked 15th in the nation. The No. 4 spot is held by senior Jim Rakela, who is a two time all-CACC selection. At No. 5 is Tom Solomon, a senior, who is ranked 33rd in the nation.

Bream, who has a 76-26 lifetime record at Cal Poly, has reached post-season play in all of his five years as a coach here. He has also led the Mustangs to two straight conference championships.

Chapman College, ranked no. 1 in the preseason polls, will once again be the main obstacle in the way of a Cal Poly drive for a National Championship. A drive, which despite an 0-4 start, is still very much a possibility for the Mustangs.
