Philippine vote: US is neutral

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Tuesday night the United States is neutral in the bitter Philippines presidential election, and announced plans to send veteran U.S. diplomat Philip Habib to Manila to "help nurture the hopes and possibilities of democracy."

"We're neutral, and we then hope to have the same relationship with the people of the Philippines that we've had all these years," the president said at a nationally televised news conference.

In a written statement distributed moments before he stepped before White House reporters, Reagan said he found it disturbing that the election had been "flawed by reports of fraud, which we take seriously, and by violence."

In his statement, Reagan said he was sending Habib to meet with leaders of both political parties as well as with church and government officials and representatives of private sector groups.

Reagan said he would have no other comment on the election until the ballot count was finished.

The president opened his news conference with a pitch for his 1987 fiscal year budget, and took note of critics who say it is "DOA dead on arrival." He said those critics only want a tax increase to reduce deficits — and said any such increase would be "VOA -- vetoed on arrival."

Reagan's comments on the Philippines came with the outcome of the election between President Ferdinand Marcos and challenger Corazon Aquino still in doubt several days after the balloting closed. Each side has claimed victory, and the Marcos-controlled National Assembly is preparing a final, official canvass.

ABM major named 1986 Poly Royal queen

By Rebecca Hanner

A senior agricultural business management major was selected Monday night to reign as queen of the 34th annual Poly Royal festivities.

Karyn Scheuber, 24, representing the National Agri-Marketing Association, was chosen from among 28 other contestants during the Monday night competition which attracted an enthusiastic crowd of about 500 in Chumash Auditorium.

The pageant participants, representing various professional, cultural and fraternal organizations on campus, were judged on their poise, speaking ability and general appearance.

Each contestant was asked to respond to a question about Poly Royal which was distributed prior to the competition. After the 10 semifinalists were selected, each was asked to answer the impromptu question, "Why do you feel you'd be a good representative of Poly Royal?"

"I feel Cal Poly has contributed so much to the person that I have become, I want to repay that by promoting the school and Poly Royal," said Scheuber during a news conference held Tuesday.

Scheuber said she sees her position as queen not just as a person who walks around wearing a crown. She believes the queen should serve as a link between the campus and the visitors during the Poly Royal festivities, and hopes to communicate to others the pride she believes the campus exhibits.

ASI will change its image

Associated Students Inc. has hired a marketing consultant to improve its image and to create a better awareness of what ASI has to offer students.

Marketing Consultant Dan Block was hired by ASI to help establish a marketing campaign. "ASI wants and needs to change its whole way of thinking," Block said.

"ASI is like a passive, reactionary vegetable on life support systems," said Block. "We want to change it to a dynamic, forward-looking, responsive organization that truly serves the community,

Does it really matter who wins?

The various media have had two major events to focus on in the last few weeks: the explosion of a space-craft system and the elections in the Philippines. The reporting of both demonstrate a similar characteristic: nothing of importance is really raised. In the case of the Challenger, the clear message the public gets is that we need to solve some technical problems in order to make future manned space flights safer. In the case of the election in the Philippines, the message that comes through is that the elections are probably dishonest. The purpose of this brief essay is to suggest that there is an alternative interpretation to the Philippine elections. In the interest of space, I'll let colleagues more concerned about the non-military use of space analyze the implications of the shuttle non-controversy.

The issue of who "won" the elections in the Philippines may well be a pointless technical question; perhaps the real question to ask is "Does it really matter whether Marcos or Aquino is declared president of the Philippines?" The Philippines are clearly undergoing a revolutionary process. It is also apparent to most people that Marcos does not represent a viable road to whatever the future of the islands might be. Instead, by hinting that he might request American troops to support his regime, Marcos himself reveals that his crooks cannot necessarily expect to govern in the next few years.

However, acceptance of the fact that the Marcos regime is history does not automatically make Corazon Aquino an alternative to his government. She and her family are, after all, part of the ethnic group and class that have created the problems in the Philippines today. To argue that she and her political allies will reform away the miserable conditions that confront many people in those islands is the same point of view that once taken toward South Africa (currently called "constructive engagement") by every U.S. president since 1961. I can find no reason to believe that this approach will be any more effective in the Philippines than it has been in South Africa — or for that matter, than it was in Southern Vietnam or Nicaragua.

The interest created by the elections creates an appropriate time for Americans to consider the possibility that whether they like it or not, the people we have supported have generated conditions which make it likely that the future belongs to the alliance between the Islamic El Moro Liberation Front in the southern islands and Marxist New People's Army in the northern islands.

If this is the case, one might hope for a Marcos "victory." He is so bad that no U.S. president could use the American Army to maintain his government. However, it is possible to imagine intervening to support Aquino in the struggle of those who created the problems of the Philippines to maintain themselves in power.

LASA gets praise for organizing symposium

Editor — It is a welcome sight to see an article on the upcoming Latin American symposium on the front page of Mustang Daily. It is unfortunate that a small amount of controversy motivated your article; however, I applaud you for emphasizing the positive.

In this regard, I would like to underscore what Dr. Yang said: "I think the end product will be worthy of attention." Indeed, the students of the Latin American Student Association have worked extremely hard to produce what promises to be a very exciting symposium. A little perspective also may be instructive. Last year, with fewer resources of money and people power, LASA organized a conference on Latin America that the nearly 100 people who attended almost unanimously seemed to feel was very successful. This year, the conference is more ambitious, and the result will certainly be at least as satisfying as last year's conference.

The high caliber of the guests who will be giving presentations is most admirable. A conference that includes the Japanese ambassador to the United Nations, the chief assistant to the mayor of Mexico City, several consuls general from South America, professors who are specialists on a wide variety of aspects of Latin America, and our own Fulbright Scholars-in-Residence, Tchanoura Ayma Gogue, is worthy of mention by the entire campus. Cal Poly is becoming Internationalized, and the students of LASA deserve praise for their hard work in putting together this conference.

Reader compliments ag-related articles

Editor — I would like to take this time to compliment the Mustang Daily staff for putting together an excellent paper this year. I believe that over the last five years, the format of the paper has improved and that the format currently in use is the best one yet.

One feature I like is seeing the coverage from the School of Agriculture. In the past, agriculture-related topics were seen in the paper only occasionally. Now, there are agriculture articles at least once a week. The School of Agriculture is a very important part of Cal Poly, one of the largest agricultural universities in the state, and coverage such as the recent article by Greg Colbert titled, "Leadership program: ag group transcends asthma" (Feb. 4) allows students on the different activities taking place and opportunities available.

Mustang Daily is Cal Poly's paper and it should continue covering events from every corner of the campus as well as national, state, and local topics. I think it is splendid that there is an increased coverage of ag-related topics in Mustang Daily and hope that this will continue in the future.

Dissident released by Soviets

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Anatoly Shcharansky, the Soviet human rights activist imprisoned for nine years as a spy, was freed on a snowy Berlin bridge Tuesday and flows to a tumultuous, emotional welcome in Israel.

The 38-year-old Jewish dissident had become known as the "prisoner of Zion," a focus for international Jewry and symbol of Jews who are not allowed to leave the Soviet Union.

Also included in the East-West prisoner exchange on Berlin's Glienick Bridge were five people held in the West on spy charges and three held in the East.

Shcharansky was freed first, apart from the others, to emphasize the U.S. insistence that he was not a spy. He was arrested in 1977 and a Soviet court convicted him of spying for the CIA, sentencing him in 1978 to 13 years imprisonment.

Walesa slander charges dropped

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — The state dropped slander charges against Solidarity leader Lech Walesa on Tuesday, and Walesa hailed the decision as the first step toward compromise by Poland's Communist government since it crushed the independent trade union.

At the opening day of Walesa's trial, the prosecutor said the 12 election officials who filed the complaint were "satisfied" by Walesa's statement in court that he did not intentionally slander them when he gave voter turnout figures for national elections lower than the official count.

The three-judge panel in Gdansk provincial court suspended the case indefinitely, in effect ending the trial.

Walesa was in high spirits at a news conference after the trial and said he was happy the government recognized that "political trials are not in the interest of Poland."

Evils of communism worse than apartheid

 Editor — How so many intelligent people can accept the slavery of the U.S.S.R. In its empire and its satellites and boggie at South Africa is a startling example of the appropriateness of Jesus' remark to the erring shepherds of his day: "You blind guides, who strain out a gnat and swallow a camel!" (Matthew 23:24)

How can these people say that we should move against South Africa but say nothing about businesses dealing with the U.S.S.R. and Communist China? What's happened and what is happening in Russia and Red China is much worse than anything that's happened in South Africa. What are these bleeding hearts waiting on? The Communists have been brutalizing the Soviet people since 1917 and the Chinese Communists have been doing likewise since 1949. Why are these anti-Communists so deafeningly quiet in calling on U.S. companies doing business with the Soviets and the Red Chinese to push for "Full political, social and economic rights" for the citizens of these nations as well? Coretta Scott King, the widow of the slain civil rights leaders Martin Luther King Jr., recently declared, presumably with a straight face, that "If our ideas about democracy and human rights mean anything at all, they must be extended to U.S. foreign and trade policy...No nation is more abusive of human rights or more deserving of U.S. economic sanctions than South Africa."

But King's assertion is preposterous on its face. Together, the Soviet and Chinese Communists have liquidated more than 200 million human beings — more than six times the entire population of South Africa. What of the recent Soviet intimidation of Poland in suppressing Solidarity, to say nothing of the indiscriminate slaughter of thousands of innocent men, women and children in Afghanistan? What of Red China where the government forces women with more than one child to have abortions? And in addition, with the millions of slave laborers in the Soviet and Sino-Gulag, it is clear that no matter how evil the apartheid system may be — it is very evil — it is ludicrous to claim that South Africa is the focus of evil in the world today.

All these liberals, along with those who listen to them, who are criticizing the South Africans while ignoring the atrocities committed by the Communists, are classic examples of the blind leading the blind. And the Scriptures tell us that such people end up in the ditch — which indeed is an excellent place for them. The hypocrisy of those who, when it comes to the Communists, hear no evil, see no evil, is self-evident. Those who decide to speak out against evil should do so with consistency. University presidents, faculty and student senators and newspaper editors take note.

Bar owners hold 'Unhappy Hour'

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — "Happy Hour" became a time for imbibers to cry in their beer, their premiums for liability insurance soaring from $14 for a beer to $32 per martini.

Operators trying to dramatize and gather support against skyrocketing increases in dramatiae and gather support for legislation when about 400 New Hampshire bar owners staged an "Unhappy Hour," charging from $14 for a beer to $32 per martini.

Operators were trying to dramatize and gather support against skyrocketing increases in liability insurance rates, which have soared nationally because of increased litigation and jury awards in liability cases, and one Keene bar owner said much of that was due to drunken drivers.

Bar owner Dewey Mark said the participating tavern owners would discount prices back so-as-to-add for patrons who joined the protest and signed postcards urging the insurance commissioner, governor and state lawmakers to back legislation limiting personal injury awards to $250,000 in an effort to hold down rates.

The establishments raised prices for drinks by the same percentage their liability insurance rates have risen — 2,000 percent in some cases.

At Mark's restaurants in the resort towns of Gilford and Glen, a beer was $14 during "Unhappy Hour"; a martini, $32; a snifter of fine brandy, $40 plus. A shot and a beer could mean a bill of $45.

Mark, who runs B. Mae Den-ny's in Gilford and the Red Parks Pub in Glen, said he expected to collect about 30,000 postcards statewide during the "Unhappy Hour." From patrons who would rather sign their name than pay the high prices.

"I don't think there will be a lot of people paying 14 bucks for a bottle of beer, but it will point out that if we don't do something about these insurance rates, this is the kind of thing we're facing," Mark said.

Moe Mozier, owner of Henry's in Gilford, said his hospitality association, said his bar focused on the more common drinkers, such as a bottle of beer for $14, "because everybody can identify with that, a bottle of beer."

Insurance Commissioner Louis Bergeron said the publicity surrounding "Unhappy Hour" was misleading and that the liability insurance situation was not that bleak.

Parents with class

By Janice Barger

Although it is college in a pot-of-gold town, for some students, breaking away from the nest can be more challenging than anticipated. Jon Bachman, a 22-year-old civil and environmental engineering freshman, said his mother, Cora, a professor, and father, Alfred, a professor of mathematics, made the transition harder than expected.

"I like having my dad on campus," said Becky Cota, a sophomore, who is in her last year at Cal Poly. Her father, Harold Cota, teaches civil and environmental engineering at Cal Poly. Becky chose to live away from home and attend Cal Poly, but found that "students get a lot of pressure to be on their own."

Becky's sister, Cora, said she barely had a chance to feel at home living with her parents, who have lived together for 13 years. "You have to go by the rules at home," she said.

"I rarely see him," said Alfred. "I see him when he goes to see his dad." For Alfred, having his son on campus turns out to be very helpful. "Jon is able to provide additional input about his professors feel about student life and how they feel about their instructors," he said.

Parents, such as that of Jon Bachman, a 22-year-old journalism major, said none of his friends think he gets privileges because of his dad's position as an associate professor of mathematics. "They think that since my dad's a teacher, I don't have to pay for books and tuition," But Bachman said "even faculty have to pay for parking stickers."
T.ylenol death is called a murder

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — A woman who died of cyanide poisoning Saturday after taking Tylenol capsules, leading thousands of stores nationwide to take them off their shelves, was murdered by someone who placed the poison inside the package within the last 10 days, a county official said Tuesday.

"We are dealing with a case of murder," Westchester County Executive Andrew O'Rourke said at a news conference. No one has been charged in the death of Diane Elroth, 23, of Perkasie.

The potassium cyanide would eat through a gelatin capsule in eight to 10 days, said County Chief Medical Examiner Dr. Millard Hyland, who appeared with O'Rourke. He did not pinpoint when the cyanide was introduced into the capsules.

Authorities announced Monday that Miss Elroth had been fatally poisoned by cyanide after taking Tylenol on Saturday.

Parent reactions affect students

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Parents can worsen their child's school performance by reacting emotionally to poor grades or by setting up rewards and punishments, according to a Stanford University study released Tuesday.

The study of 7,836 students and about 3,500 parents in six San Francisco Bay area high schools also showed that the more time students watch television, the lower their grades tend to be.

Better grades were associated with participation in school sports, except for boys who play more than 30 hours a week, and with speaking a foreign language at home.

Asian students, especially Vietnamese, tend to do better in school, the study found, because they study about 14 hours a week — twice as much as other students.

Parenting style particularly affects school performance, said the study's author, Sanford M. Dornbusch, professor of human biology and sociology.

Children of parents who are authoritarian or permissive tend to have lower grades, while those whose parents are firm, encouraging and communicative have higher grades.

Preliminary results from the two-year study, to be published next year, indicated the relationship between parents' actions and their children's school performance.

"The linkage between parental reactions and grades was moderate in strength but very consistent for all ethnic groups and income levels," Dornbusch said in an interview. "Low-key, positive reinforcement, like praise and encouragement, work better than material rewards or big, exaggerated or emotional responses."

Parents who get visibly upset by a child's poor report card worsen the situation, he said, adding that they further upset the child. That tends to result in poorer grades over time.

Creating rewards and punishments don't work, he said. Giving children greater access to cars or letting them stay out later because of good grades leads to poorer performances because students become less motivated toward schoolwork.

Similarly, restricting privileges because of poor grades is counterproductive.

Attack by terrorists remembered

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A 78-year-old woman who was among those injured in a terrorist attack at the airport in Rome says she doesn't plan another overseas vacation any time soon.

"You hear about these attacks, and the ones recently in Paris, and you wonder if it's safe there any more," said Kay O'Off, who is still recovering from a leg wound inflicted by shrapnel from a hand grenade in the Dec. 27 attack.

"I think people are thinking twice about traveling, and I don't blame them. ... I'm not going to any place, not for awhile, anyway."

The assault by Palestinian terrorists in Rome, and a simultaneous attack at the Vienna airport, left 19 people dead, including four terrorists and five Americans. Italian authorities are holding one terrorist, and two are in custody in Vienna.

Goff was in the crowd of holiday travelers at the Leonardo da Vinci airport when the Palestinians burst in, firing automatic weapons and throwing hand grenades. The assault apparently was aimed at the ticket counter of El Al, the Israeli airline, but Goff, like many of the scores of injured, was at another airline's counter.

"I remember hearing a noise like breaking glass, then a pop, pop, pop, and then everyone started dying, so I lay down also," she said.

"I really wasn't frightened, though. I knew I couldn't move, I knew that, so I just thought to myself, 'They'll come back and get me in a little while.'"

"But I never felt any pain." Goff was rushed to a hospital in Rome, where a bullet was removed from her leg. She fielded calls from reporters around the world from her bed there.

The widow, who had made three previous trips to Europe, said she didn't give a thought to terrorism when she left on short notice for her ill-fated tour.

The candidate is elected and the campaign posters come down, but the work of political clubs is never done.

During election times, it is easy to see the efforts of the Young Democrats or the College Republicans, working to rally the candidates of their choice into office. These groups, however, have goals that reach beyond campaigning during election years.

Awareness of current issues is a goal of primary concern for both groups. Tyler Hammond, president of the College Republicans, said they work to "keep students informed of what's going on." Young Democrats President Robert Van Sickle said they plan to disseminate information on current issues to Cal Poly students.

The College Republicans and Young Democrats also spend time encouraging students to register to vote. College Republicans vice president Bob Tapella said during their last voter registration drive the group registered more than 400 people.

Van Sickle said the dissemination of literature will deal primarily with the Democrats' position on current issues. According to Van Sickle, the Young Democrats "fell into dormancy two years ago." Van Sickle, along with a few others, is working to re-establish the group on campus.

"Cal Poly has a reputation as a conservative campus, especially with the local Democratic apparatus not being strong," Van Sickle said. According to Van Sickle, the group has strengthened by the recent establishment of the Democratic Central Committee in San Luis Obispo.

Through this committee, the Young Democrats will have more access to speakers, pamphlets and other material, but, according to Van Sickle, the biggest advantage will come from the added moral support of the committee.

Van Sickle said, "We've never had a local group committed to supporting Democrats on campus." Van Sickle is looking forward to Democratic Congressman Leon Panetta's visit to campus Wednesday, when he will speak at 2 p.m. in University Union Room 220. The Young Democrats have also planned their first general meeting for 11 a.m. Thursday in Room 214 of the Agriculture Building.

College Republicans is growing in size each year. According to Hammond, the group has grown from 40 members when he first joined in 1982 to about 350 members this year.

Members are active in all phases of politics. Many are involved with the Student Senate, the ASI and in working with local politicians. Some have completed internships in Washington D.C. Tapella said the Cal Poly chapter of College Republicans is one of the most influential in California because they are one of the most unified groups in the state.

Recently, College Republicans had a chance to meet with Gov. Deukmejian to discuss issues affecting the college-age population. According to Tapella, only about four groups a year are able to do this.

Hammond said the club currently has three people who are members of the state board. Four members are running in the next election for a state position.

College Republicans work with the San Luis Obispo County Republican Central Committee. Through this group, they are able to schedule speakers and make contact with politicians through the committee members. Often they help the Central Committee with events, and in that way are able to meet politicians.

"This is a good opportunity for us to meet people here locally," Hammond said.

Members also attend conventions where they can interact with the "movers and shakers of California," Tapella said. "They're actually human beings, too."

College Republicans also plan many social events. Tapella said, "Some of my best friends are those I met through College Republicans." The group has had beach parties, spaghetti feeds and other events.

Hammond said for the Poly Royal parade, the club is planning to have someone dressed as President Reagan, accompanied by "Secret Service men." Afterwards, the Reagan proxy will be available for photographs.

Hammond summed it up: "Politics is fun."
Mardi Gras partiers brave cold weather

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Icy winds kept normally rambunctious Mardi Gras costumed revelers at bay, but the uproarious pre-Lenten celebration shifted into high gear on Fat Tuesday as parades turned much of the city into a free-wheeling street-party.

Crowds jammed shoulder to shoulder on Bourbon Street and the other routes of the five parades planned in the city.

"C'mon, you stuck up folks! Let's party!" a young man shouted at the bundled-up families who lined St. Charles Avenue.

He staggered backward, ignoring a sharp beep from behind him, and backed into the front wheel of a policeman's motorcycle. The policeman shook his head and drove off.

Parked next to the police car was a painting of a cabbage, worn over warm pants and bulky coats, were the most popular costume in the French Quarter.

Five friends dressed as oysters — sporting gray sweatshirts and white satin-covered foam shells strapped to their shoulders. "You can pile lots of things under it," said Maureen Shelton, 24, of New Orleans.

Although Mardi Gras is celebrated in cities from Galveston, Texas, to Mobile, Ala., New Orleans has the biggest show. People spend an estimated $50 million to put on and participate in the parades and balls for the five weeks leading up to Lent.

The celebrating officially ends at midnight.

California prison crowding to continue

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California's record prison construction program is generally on schedule, but the system will still be overcrowded when it is complete, a Department of Corrections spokesman said Tuesday.

Rod Bionien, undersecretary of the Youth and Adult Correctional Agency, said construction for 13,720 beds has been finished and occupied, 5,716 more beds are to be completed this year, and ground is to be broken for another 13,720 beds.

By 1987, he said there are 50,000 prisoners now, which is about 160 percent of capacity. By the end of 1987, when nearly 9,000 more beds will be added, he said the prison population would be about 60,000, about 140 percent of capacity.

Bionien said that overcrowding will be "more manageable" than the current conditions.

He noted that the state hopes to build a new 1,700-bed prison in Los Angeles, and another the same size in Riverside County, possibly near Blythe. And, he said, the state is studying sites for prisons in Del Norte and Sutter-Yuba counties.
Poly gymnasts tumble Manitoba

By Katie Brittain
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly women’s gymnastics team is eighth in the nation but may be even closer to first after its successful scores from Sunday night’s meet against UC Santa Barbara and University of Manitoba are added into the standings.

The Mustangs placed second in the meet with a score of 162.5 against first place UCSB, which scored 165.5, leaving Cal Poly Pomona in third place with a score of 157.25 and the University of Manitoba at Winnipeg, Canada in fourth with a score of 117.4.

“...This is one of our best scores all year...” said Mustang coach Tim Rivera. “I’m really proud of all the team.”

Despite injuries and a tough schedule which has most recently taken the team to Seattle and Alaska, the team performed very well, said Rivera.

Rhonda Richter was still tendering an injury as she suffered in a light work-out the day the Mustangs left for Seattle and Kristy Brodcur is still having problems with a knee injury. Jana Lehman, a top all-rounder for the Mustangs, added to the team’s injury list when she twisted an ankle in the floor exercise last week at the University of Alaska.

Paige Allan, who placed second all-around Sunday night, said the team score could have been improved a lot more if the injured people had been in the competition, but that those who did compete did a great job.

“...I don’t think we’ve been doing as well as we could have considering the injuries...” said Allan.

Placing fifth in the all-around competition was Renee Azzari with a score of 32.85 and Julie Williams placed sixth with a score of 32.4.

Azzari agreed that injuries have affected the teams score. “We could have done better with the injured people, but considering who we had we did really well,” said Azzari. “Everybody’s working really hard to make up for the injuries.”

In the individual events, Paige Allan placed second on the vault with a score of 8.7, a personal best, and Julie Williams placed third with a score of 8.6, tying for fourth with 8.2.

Allan said overall the meet was not only successful but fun. “That’s what makes our team unique,” said Rivera. “The America team said that this was one of the best meets that they had been to. The crowd was really supportive.”

The next home meet for the gymnastics team is Feb. 13 in the gym at 7:30 p.m. The Mustangs will meet San Jose State University and CSU Long Beach.

Women’s tennis coach, Orion Yeast, said his team would need a close match to help build confidence under pressure, and his predictions came true.

In singles play, Cal Poly wins were secured by Leverte, who beat Davis’ Ursula Donodrom in 6-2, 6-2, and number three seeded Stubbs easily beat their opponents 6-1, 6-3, and the number two team of Leverte and Susan Norman swept through their match 6-0, 6-0.

The winning momentum continued on Saturday, however, as the UC Davis Aggies squeaked past the Lady Mustangs winning the match 5-4.

In floor exercises, Renee Azzari placed third with a score of 8.3, Julie Williams and Paige Allen tied for fourth with 8.2 and Kelly Packer placed fifth with 8.1.

Allan said overall the meet was not only successful but fun. “That’s what makes our team unique,” said Rivera. “The Canada team said that this was one of the best meets that they had been to. The crowd was really supportive.”

With the score 2-4 after singles action, the Lady Mustangs looked towards their top three doubles teams to help even out the competition.

The number one ranked doubles team of Stubb and Hilliard overturned their Davis opponents 6-3, 6-3, while the number two team of Lewis and Norman won their match 6-4, 6-1.

"Going into the doubles action down 2-4, I felt we could pull off three wins. Unfortunately, their number three doubles team was very tough," said Yeast, as the Davis team knocked off the number three team of Carol Mehill and Chris Calandra, by winning 6-3, 6-2.

"It was an exciting match, which helped pull the players together," added Yeast.

The women's tennis team is 2-3 on the season, and will travel south on Friday to face UC Riverside in conference competition.

Baseball team homestand

The Cal Poly baseball team starts off a long homestand today against Westmont College at 2:30 p.m.

The Mustangs will also take on San Jose State University Friday at 2:30 p.m. and Saturday the two teams will play a double-header starting at noon.

The Mustangs will end the three-day weekend with a tough game against University of California Berkeley Monday at 1 p.m.

All of the Mustangs' home games are played at Shaeffer Park on Southwood Drive in San Luis Obispo.

Nets miss Richardson

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Michael Ray Richardson of the New Jersey Nets missed practice and a doctor's appointment Monday, just three weeks since his suspension for drug abuse was lifted.

"Obviously, this is not good," said Lewis Schaffel, chief of operations for the National Basketball Association team.

"With his past history, it's definitely not good. We've called all the usual places," Richardson, 30, recently was released from a drug rehabilitation center for the fourth time.

He called Nets trainer Fritz Massman on Monday and said he did not feel well and would go to a doctor.

not just students." Block believes present college government have an image reminiscent of everyone's high school civics class.

In actuality, Block said, we are "dealing with a company with $10 million in assets." ASI President Mike Mendes said, "We are running a business and we have a fiscal responsibility to run it efficiently." Mendes said ASI has fallen short of marketing its products.

Block was hired from money saved when an employee took a leave of absence. A student team was hired to fill the empty position, leaving extra money for ASI to pay a consultant.

As well as hiring Block, a student group was established to create a marketing plan. The group consists of Brett Haberkern, Donald Rollin, Tom Lebhens and Tracy Johnson. The team will help Block "lay out the foundation for a marketing program," Mendes said.

Mendes said the program would give ASI a working ground to implement the students' ideas to maximize the extent of programs ASI offers students and the community. He believes there is a need to inform all of the college environment of all the programs of ASI and to create new programs students want and need.

Block said he plans to show everyone how large a corporation ASI is and how it can help both students and community.

"We can use the economic power of ASI for the betterment of the community," Block said. "It will blow away the community that we are the largest corporation in the community."

Block said the marketing plan will involve anyone interested with the university. "It will involve the permanent staff as well as students," he said.

Last quarter there were class projects that involved researching student body needs on campus. A survey of more than 2,000 students was conducted on the ASI website. "I think I can relate to both sides of the fence," Block said. "I have an understanding of both sides of the issues." The unveiling of the new program will be in April.

Heart recipient meets President and Mrs. Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Donna Ashlock, the 14-year-old California girl who received the heart of her friend and classmate, Felipe Garza, met President Reagan on Tuesday and said he was taller than she had expected.

"I thought he was shorter," Miss Ashlock said, shivering in front of microphones outside the White House after her brief Oval Office visit.

She emerged from the meeting with two presents, one a jar of presidential jelly beans and the other a surprise from Mrs. Reagan, which Miss Ashlock hadn't opened yet.
