Suicide higher for vets

BOSTON (AP) — Vietnam veterans are nearly twice as likely to commit suicide as men in the same age group who avoided the war, a new study concludes.

Researchers say they believe the work is the first to show a cause-and-effect relationship between military service in Vietnam and an unusual risk of suicide.

"I think it demonstrates the experience of being drafted during the Vietnam era had profound, long-term psychological effects on people," said Dr. Norman Horwitz of the University of California, San Francisco.

The study concludes that Vietnam veterans were 18 percent more likely to commit suicide than their non-veteran age and sex peers, and that this difference became statistically significant by 1981.

The study was conducted by the National Institute of Mental Health and the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

The results were presented at a meeting of the American Psychological Association in Boston.

The study included interviews with 587 Vietnam veterans and 587 randomly selected non-veteran men who were matched for age, education, occupation and other factors.

The researchers found that Vietnam veterans were more likely to have experienced post-traumatic stress disorder, depression, and other mental health problems.

The study also found that Vietnam veterans were more likely to have a history of alcohol and drug abuse, and to have been exposed to violence.

The researchers say the findings suggest that efforts to prevent suicide among Vietnam veterans should focus on identifying and treating mental health problems.

The study was funded by the National Institutes of Health and the Department of Veterans Affairs.

The results have been published in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Have you ever seen President Baker?

Stephanie Wall, biological sciences, junior:
I've never seen him. I walk by the President's house every day and I've never seen a sign of life. I don't even know if he exists - I think he's a fictional character.

Nathan Sears, recreation administration, senior:
No, I haven't. I think he should be a little more communicative with the students.

John "Flet" Watkins, physics, senior:
No - I've only seen him in the newspaper. I don't think the path of the average student crosses his.

Jenni Zimmer, home economics, sophomore:
I've seen him all over the place. I saw him here (the University) and out on the lawn playing with his kids.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Let there be peace: Soviets have feelings

Editor - Imagine all the people sharing all the love. Imagine a world where happiness and love, not hate and fear. Imagine a world where there is no hunger and greed, plenty for all. Imagine a world where we break down these barriers of miscommunication and let our hearts flow out to everyone.

Josee Hanson

Editor - For the last several years there has been a lot of debate over the strength of the dollar in the world market. Well, some economists would be glad to hear that there is a place where they can watch the dollar lose ground against an ancient Asian currency.

I'm talking about tea, and now you can purchase this valuable commodity for only 50 cents a bag at the Campus Store. If you had purchased $100 worth of tea at the Campus Store last year you would have made a profit of $30 by the same time this year! (How's that for money market rates?) But wait, for this same low price of only 50 cents you also get a genuine styrofoam cup (small), complete with hot water.

CRAIG LOVE

WHY DO THEY CALL 'EM VREWAYS ANYWAY?

Why do they call 'em freeways, anyway?

Whenever there's a traffic jam on the freeway, I always seem to get stuck behind a truck carrying giant tires. (I'm not sure why I never get stuck behind a busload of cheerleaders, but I guess you really haven't lived until you can breathe asphalt fumes for 30 minutes without getting sick.)

After years of driving on L.A. freeways, traffic jams still mystify me. When I spend an hour in stop-and-go traffic, I expect to see an accident being cleared up on the side of the road. What usually happens is that everyone is slowing down to watch a man fix the flat tire on his RV while his eight kids are hanging out the windows waving at everyone.

Of course, over the years I've learned to relax and accept the fact that I'm going to be late because some guy doesn't know he's supposed to put water in his radiator to keep it from overheating. You can always spot an experienced freeway commuter. He's the guy stuck next to you in a traffic jam who's reading the L.A. Times and drinking a hot cup of coffee.

The trick to dealing with traffic jams is to get stuck next to an attractive member of the opposite sex. Of course, sometimes you have to drive around L.A. all day before it happens. Once you're in position, you can have a great time flirting. Unfortunately, by the time I usually get up the nerve to smile and wave, her car has pulled forward and I end up greeting a hard-core Rambo impersonator in a black Camaro.

My favorite traffic jam diversion is playing tag. I find a guy in a brand new car and pull in behind him. When the cars in our lane move, let him get about 30 yards ahead and then hit the gas. I wait as long as possible before hitting the brakes. I love to see the expression on his face when he sees my car sliding to a stop inches away from his rear bumper.

A lot of people say that being stuck in traffic is boring. I think that there's nothing to do but sit and wait. Well, here's a list of things to do the next time you're stuck in a traffic jam:

•Refold your road maps.
•Read your owner's manual for your horn.
•Pray that the cop who just came by is not going to make you take another lane.
•Climb on the roof of your car and yell, "I'm mad as hell and I'm not going to take it anymore."
•Climb into the back seat and take a nap.
•Climb on your car and wave at the nearest 7-11 to buy a Slurpee.
•Arrange the parking tickets in your glove compartment in chronological order.
•Climb into the back seat and take a nap.
•Open your door to pick off the motorcycle who's trying to pass you between lanes.
•Pray that the cop who just ran up to your door has a sense of humor.

Jets contracted to Navy collide
SAN CLEMENTE ISLAND (AP) — Two Learjets under contract to the Navy collided over San Clemente Island on Wednesday, and authorities fear at least four people dead.

The two planes, owned by Flight International, struck each other while participating in a radar training mission for the Navy, said Petty Officer Rex Kramer, a Navy spokesman in San Diego.

Sandy Browne, a National Transportation Safety Board spokeswoman in Los Angeles said at least four people were killed in the collision, two on each airplane.

The deaths are as yet unconfirmed.

30,000 S. African blacks mourn
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — At least 30,000 black mourners, joined by hundreds of whites, turned a mass funeral for 17 black riot victims Wednesday into a vast demonstration of opposition to apartheid.

The throng packed a soccer stadium in Alexandra, a squalid black township wedged among the richest white suburbs of Johannesburg. In the crowd were black activists Winnie Mandela and diplomats from seven Western nations, including the United States.

Among clergy of all races was the Rev. Beyers Naude, 70, an Afrikaner whose spiritual journey from faith in apartheid to the struggle for black rights has made him a symbol of white liberalism.

"No one is free in this country as long as the black man is not free," Mike Beez, president of the Alexandria Civic Association, told the mourners. "We are simply saying, dismantle apartheid."

NASA may resort to rocket use
WASHINGTON (AP) — With dozens of satellites waiting to be launched and the shuttle grounded, NASA may return to throwaway rockets and make room for commercial payloads on the few launch vehicles still on hand.

The space agency had contracted to deploy six commercial communications satellites from the shuttle in 1986 and six in 1987. In addition, its biggest customer, the Defense Department, had booked all or part of 12 shuttles in the two-year period.

Of five of those flights, nothing is known of the cargo, but presumably all involved launching one or more satellites. The others were to carry at least 11.

Although the cause of the Jan. 28 explosion that destroyed the shuttle Challenger and its crew has not been determined, NASA officials expect it will be at least a year before another attempt is made to launch a shuttle. That has NASA managers looking for other ways to hold onto its customers.

Women's studies are needed at Poly
Editor — Cal Poly does need a women's studies program! San Francisco State University and the University of California at Berkeley both have programs in women's studies. Not only have these programs proved popular with students of both sexes but such programs bring an overall awareness to students about women.

A week ago it was about time that there is an educational movement on the university level that will educate people about a woman's true role in society, past and present. Perhaps this will wake up some of the cultural liberaters who feel woman belong in the kitchen barefoot and pregnant. Start the program now!

Glass found in baby food by Gerber

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pieces of glass have been found in four jars of Gerber baby food in Southern California, but tests conducted on 1,600 containers taken off local supermarket shelves found no shards, officials said Tuesday.

There have been 200 reports nationwide of glass shards in Gerber baby-food products since February. No children have been injured.

Since the reports surfaced, the Los Angeles office of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, which covers Southern California and Arizona, has received 25 complaints from consumers who claim they discovered glass after opening the products, said spokeswoman Irene Caro.

Tests determined that four of the 233 opened containers had "microscopic" size glass shards, Caro said.

The FDA would not disclose where the four jars with glass fragments were found.

The latest complaint occurred Monday at an undisclosed Orange County supermarket when a woman returned a container after discovering what appeared to be a glasslike fragment inside, said Walter Schneggenburger, supervisor of the FDA's Santa Ana office.

Store officials turned the container over to the agency's Los Angeles office for testing. Last week, three other opened jars that Orange County consumers claimed contained glass were submitted for testing. The results have not yet been determined, Schneggenburger said.

The FDA in Los Angeles has tested 1,600 closed Gerber containers taken randomly off store shelves in Southern California.
Banner headlines proclaiming "victory" and "freedom" for the people of the Philippines have been seen often since the fall of dictator Ferdinand E. Marcos and the rise of Corazon Aquino.

No United States newspaper had as large and bright a headline as the San Francisco-based Philippine News. Nor did any newspaper writer have the reason for the unmitigated joy caused by Marcos' fall from power as the editor and publisher of Philippine News.

Alex A. Esclamado's paper has been the hard-hitting, anti-Marcos publication since 1972, generating displeasure from both the United States and Philippine governments.

With a circulation of 70,000 and 17 editions in the United States and Canada, this family-owned corporation has been "a champion of freedom" for the past 25 years, Esclamado said.

Esclamado spoke to a crowd of more than 200 people Saturday night at the San Luis Obispo Veterans Memorial Building at a banquet and show sponsored by the Filipino Cultural Exchange.

It was the Cal Poly disc's annual celebration of Filipino culture featuring traditional food, dancing, a slide show and a guest speaker, said Henry Rockman, Filipino Cultural Exchange chairman.

With the world's attention now focused on the Philippines, Rockman said, "We were delighted Mr. Esclamado was able to be with us at such a timely moment."

"Students are my top priority," said Esclamado in a Mustang Daily interview. "They are our future and I will never turn their invitations down."

Esclamado was scheduled to hold a press conference with Jesse Jackson in Texas Saturday, but canceled the appearance because he said he was worried about catching a connecting flight and arriving in San Luis Obispo in time for the banquet.

Esclamado is currently chairman of the Filipino-American Political Association and planned to meet with members of the Rainbow Coalition and other civil rights leaders to discuss expanding the immigration quotas.

In his speech Esclamado focused on the victory of the Filipino people by overthrowing Marcos and the success of democracy in the Philippines.

"We have so much to be thankful for today. Those aware of the situation give a sigh of relief that the people of the Philippines are restoring democracy," said Esclamado.

He emphasized the role the United States must play to support democracy in the world. "I am a great believer in democracy for America, the Philippines and anywhere in the world democracy is in danger," Esclamado said.

The communist-led New People's Army in the Philippines will be watching the Aquino administration, but will disavow once the new government reaches full power, Esclamado predicted. "When democracy triumphs, communism fails," Esclamado said.

"The NPA are weak in Manila where the revolution took place," said Esclamado. He estimates the NPA number at approximately 16,000 armed members in the less-populated regions of the 7,000 islands.

Esclamado emphasized that the people of the Philippines do not owe American support of the revolution to President Reagan but to the U.S. Congress and the media.

"Now that the revolution has been a success, they are trying to make it look like Reagan did something," Esclamado said.

Although he considers himself an American, Esclamado still has close family ties with the Philippines.

President Corazon Aquino appointed Esclamado's brother-in-law, Ramon Fil, as her minister of agriculture. In 1975, Fil was running as Benigno Aquino Jr.'s vice president when Aquino was assassinated.

The Philippine News was started in 1961 as simply an informational paper, but began responding to advocacy issues when the question of immigration quotas arose in the Kennedy era, Esclamado said.

Problems started for the newspaper after martial law was declared by Marcos in 1972, and the Philippine News began criticizing the Marcos administration. By 1973, businesses which advertised in Philippine News were receiving letters warning them not to advertise or associate with Philippine News or Esclamado.

"In one month's time we lost all advertising income," said Esclamado.

"We then regionalized distribution of the paper and localized the advertisements," Esclamado said it was not until 1979 that they knew the newspaper would survive.

In 1975, Marcos tried bribery to stop Philippine News, said Esclamado, by offering him $750,000. Esclamado continued publishing.

Another offer, in 1979, for $1 million was made to Esclamado, and again he refused.

A Philippine government-supported newspaper was started later that year and was distributed free to the Philippine community. Esclamado said his advertisers stayed with Philippine News, and the other paper folded.

A $12 million bribe to stop the newspaper was recorded on tape by Esclamado in July 1981. He said he called a family meeting to decide what they should do and his youngest son asked him, "Is that all our principles are worth?"

Esclamado said the newspaper will continue to watch the Aquino administration and Mar...
Choosing a long distance company is a lot like choosing a roommate.

It's better to know what they're like before you move in.

Living with someone for the first time can be an "educational" experience.
And living with a long distance company isn't any different. Because some companies may not give you all the services you're used to getting from AT&T.

For instance, with some companies you have to spend a certain amount before you qualify for their special volume discounts. With some others, voice quality may vary.

But when you choose AT&T, there won't be any surprises when you move in. You'll get the same high-quality trouble-free service you're used to.

With calls that sound as close as next door. And discounts off our Day Rate on your state-to-state calls.

With savings of over 50% during weekends until 5pm Sundays, or nights from 11pm to 8am, Sunday through Friday. And 40% discounts evenings between 5pm and 11pm, Sunday through Friday.

With AT&T, you'll continue to get services like immediate credit for wrong numbers and collect calling. And long distance operators to help you anytime there's a problem on the line.

So when you're asked to choose a long distance company, choose AT&T. Because whether you're into Mozart or metal, quality is the one thing everyone can agree on. Call 1 800 222-0300 for more information or to choose AT&T. Reach out and touch someone.

tos in the United States. He said he hopes to help the Philippine government solve its basic economic problem by using his connections in Washington D.C. and by continuing Philippine News operations in San Francisco.

Esclamado said he will be visiting his family in the Philippines after a 14-year exile. Under the Marcos rule, a death sentence awaited him if he returned to the Philippines.

Some of his long-term plans will directly affect Cal Poly, said Esclamado. He said he is going to look into the development of an Asian Study Program and the hiring of Filipino professors.

"Cal Poly is among the most non-integrated of schools," said Esclamado, "and I would be guilty of unconcern if I did nothing about it."

He encouraged the Filipino students of Cal Poly to be proud of their heritage because recent events proved they knew how to fight for freedom.

"The future looks bright for us," According to Esclamado, Filipinos are the fastest growing Asian group in California and second in the United States.

"We are going to unify the elements in our community in order to solidify for political action," Esclamado said.

This was the second time Esclamado spoke for the Pilipino Cultural Exchange, and he said he would be anxious to return to see the growth in the club.

Fog causes Japanese boat to run aground

HERMOSA BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A Japanese sailor made an unscheduled stop on his round-the-world solo trip when his 30-foot boat ran aground here in heavy fog.

Lifeguards said he missed smashing into a pier by only 25 yards.

Koichiro Mori was unhurt in the grounding at 1:15 p.m. Tuesday, said Lifeguard Ira Gruber.

Fog cut visibility to about 20 feet.

Complete banking services for students, including a student credit union, may soon be available on campus if a proposal is accepted by ASI and a long-range planning committee.

John Watson, senator from the School of Business, said recently that a full-service bank is being considered for the office space now occupied by the Cal Poly Foundation when those offices are moved to the recently approved recreation facility in 1989 or 1990.

The proposal will be included in a "wish list" of ideas contained in a spring marketing campaign by ASI to promote and develop the corporate image of the group.

"Banks just don't like students," Watson said. "They don't like to deal with penny-ante accounts."

In the proposal local banks would submit bids to establish the campus facility which would provide checking services, savings, loans and a credit union that would cater to the needs of students and alumni.

Students would participate in the management of the credit union, which would pool member assets and make loans more readily available to students, a segment of the population most bankers consider too risky. After graduation, alumni could enter the job market with an established credit history and the bank would benefit from a continuing stream of new depositors.

The Cal Poly bank would be modeled after a facility at UC Berkeley, Watson said. Many banks consider student accounts risky, but a campus bank, complete with checking services and loans, may solve the problem.

The space now occupied by the bank and credit union in the U.U. will be a bank when the U.U. was built in the late 1960s, Watson said. But when a similar facility at UC Santa Barbara was destroyed by fire during anti-establishment protests, bankers became cautious about associating too closely with universities and pulled out of the U.U.

The feasibility of putting a bank and credit union in the U.U. will be considered by the Student Finance Committee when it meets in the coming weeks to consider long-range proposals.

"It's a perfect location for a financial institution," Watson said. "I would like to see a credit union be a part of that."

Until an on-campus facility is opened, San Luis Obispo banks offer a number of different checking plans. Some have accounts aimed especially at the small student depositor and most encourage the use of automatic teller machines to reduce labor and mailing costs. Minimum balances, the number of checks written per month and maintenance fees are the variables that determine the costs of doing business with different institutions.

George Beardsley, an economics professor, teaches a course in consumer economics. He encourages students to compare the opportunity costs of the various plans offered. "Think about individual situations and shop around," he said.

Architecture, construction students help rebuild Mexico

By Angela Darnell

Two-year architecture and construction management students will leave for Mexico spring quarter to help rebuild a girls' school damaged by the earthquake in September last year.

"We thought that it would be a good idea to put what we've learned into practice," said Stuart Allen, student coordinator of Project Mexico.

Allen began searching for a project in 1983 during fall quarter. "We found this one and asked around and decided it would be a good project, Allen said students were selected on a first-come basis to participate in Project Mexico. The students will add Construction Management 480X, a special problems course, during the add/drop period at the beginning of spring quarter, Allen said.

The students will leave April 16 for a seven-week stay in Mexico City. "Architect students will do the designing and drawing necessary to build the school using construction systems available in Mexico," said Allen. "Architecture engineering students will be involved in the calculations required for structural analysis." Construction management students will estimate the cost of the project and the schedule for construction.

"At most, the cost for the trip will be $242 for the round trip airfare," said Allen. "Housing and meals will be provided by the families each student stays with." A fundraiser by the Associated General Contractors of America student chapter on campus will help raise money for the trip. The group will begin selling raffle tickets Thursday in the University Union Plaza during activity hour. The winner of the drawing, which will be held during Poly Royal, will be given a 1986 Ford Ranger sponsored by Hysen-Johnson Ford of San Luis Obispo.

Allen said the project will benefit both the school in Mexico and Cal Poly students. "We hope to help the school in Mexico in any way we can," he said. At the same time, "Cal Poly students will get hands-on experience and the experience of seven weeks in another country while living with a family of another background."
Free classes help Cal Poly employees

By Katie Bright

Many Cal Poly employees are attending classes on campus as part of a fee waiver program which allows them to go to school at no charge.

The program is the result of an Assembly bill put before the California Legislature in 1974 which gave authority to CSU trustees to grant a full or partial fee waiver to employees enrolled in work-related courses.

According to the CSU Statewide newsletter of the CSU system, an average of 4,000 CSU employees use the program each year throughout the system as part of CSU employee benefits, allowing them to return to the classroom and complete a degree or develop skills.

An average of 177 employees take classes at Cal Poly each quarter, said Sandy Sidah, an administration operations analyst in the personnel and employee relations office. Sidah processes paperwork, verifies eligibility and composes quarterly reports on the fee waiver program.

She said in 1975-76 about 295 employees participated in the program and in 1984-85 that number increased to 682 employees.

"We're very pro-education and our philosophy is to encourage people to take courses and to help them use this benefit," said Sidah. "We at Cal Poly really feel that any course in the university directly benefits each employee."

Sidah said eligibility requirements include full-time state employees, part-time employees who have attained permanence in a full-time position and then reduced their time base and those who are on an approved full or partial leave of absence.

She said the university waives fees for certain types of courses if employees are eligible. These include job-related courses or courses that prepare employees for advancement when employees are enrolled in a major and obtain a degree, said Sidah.

Sidah, a business major, said:

'We're very pro-education and our philosophy is to encourage people to take courses ...'

— Sandy Sidah

Lund said a lot of the effort came through time management and discipline. "You have to have a lot of commitment," said Lund. "There is stress and trade-offs, because in school there's less time with the family. You have to be willing to set priorities and accept the consequences."

Lund said one of the reasons she takes courses at Cal Poly is for professional growth. "I saw qualified applicants and knew I couldn't compete without a formal education for career advancement."

Carole Abbey, a secretary in the department of art and design, said she has been taking classes at Cal Poly through the fee waiver program for most of the five years she has worked here.

Abbey said she is working on a degree in social science for career and professional development.

She said she often has to compromise when it comes to taking classes. "Because with a family and full-time job, you don't have the time to do as much as you want," said Abbey. "There is a lot more pulls on your time. I would like to do better, but I settle for what I can."

James Donnell, a coordinator with Cooperative Education, said, "I usually take a night course or late afternoon course ... usually one course a quarter."

Donnell said he took courses from 1977 through 1979, then gave up his position to pursue a master in business administration, and returned to cooperative education with the degree in 1982.

Donnell said he needed a master's degree to be more effective on campus.

"As a coordinator with Cooperative Education I do a lot of interviews with students, placing them in positions in industry," said Donnell. "As I talk to students I get areas I'm interested in and I've been taking courses to satisfy that interest."

Now Donnell is working on prerequisite courses for a degree in mechanical engineering. "A mechanical engineering degree is a long way off but something I want to pursue long-term. So it allows me to nibble at it and still work full-time," said Donnell. "It's a convenient way for me to work here and continue on a future goal."

Peace marchers are 44 miles into cross-country trek

RANCHO CUCAMONGA, Calif. (AP) — The Great Peace March headed toward the base of the San Bernardino Mountain on Wednesday, as organizers sought to settle insurance and funding problems nagging the cross-country nuclear weapons protest trek.

The long line of nearly 1,100 marchers left Chaffey Community College in San Bernardino County, after completing the first 44 miles on their 3,235-mile walk to Washington D.C.

The marchers, many of them carrying banners and flags, headed for Glen Helen Regional Park at the foot of the San Bernardino mountains, about 37 miles east of Los Angeles.

They were expected to camp there over night and rest on Thursday, before beginning their climb through the mountains, said Anthony Benson, a spokesman for PRO-Peace, which organized the march.

Indian bingo decision up for court review

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — The county will join the state attorney general's office in asking the U.S. Supreme Court to review a decision allowing high-stakes bingo games on Indian reservations.

Appeals ruling Feb. 23 upheld the right of the Morongo and Cabazon tribes in Riverside County to conduct bingo games, rejecting arguments by California and the county that the games are illegal.

A state law and a county ordinance allow bingo for charitable purposes only, and limit prizes to $250. But attorneys for the two tribes say $250 limits do not apply on Indian land, which is held in trust by the federal government.

Bingo games on the Morongo Indian reservation near Banning, 90 miles east of Los Angeles, and the Cabazon Indian reservation near Indio, 120 miles east of Los Angeles, offer jackpots in excess of $250.

More than one-third of the 263 Indian tribes recognized by the federal government conduct bingo games.

The fight between the county and the Morongo and Cabazon tribes over bingo began in early 1983, when bingo halls opened on both reservations.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Students living in the two oldest dorms on the University of Southern California campus have been told to move because the buildings are earthquake safety risks and will be closed.

The 233 students living at Tonton Hall and the Harris Plaza Apartments received their eviction notices on Feb. 6, sparking student demonstrations in front of the Student Union and campus housing office.

University officials have guaranteed new quarters for all the displaced students, but the students claim the new housing will cost as much as $800 a semester more than they're now paying.

In addition, students claim the crime rate around off-campus housing, which they will have to use, is higher.

Other students are angry they didn't know about the problems. The buildings were identified by city inspectors in 1981 as being in a medium risk.

"I feel like the university was lying to me," said Stacey Gong, 18, student president of the Harris Plaza Apartments. "I know my parents are furious that I was living in an unsafe building," the sophomore said.

"There have been conversations specifically about Tonton Hall for two years," countered Kristine Dillon, associate vice president of student affairs.

"There's been a lot of time to evaluate the situation and for the students to have their input."

"I think the thing that people were upset about was that it took Mexico City for them to make a decision," said J.C. Braam, 18, a Tonton Hall freshman. "Before that they were procrastinating."

The students have asked the university to renovate the buildings and keep them open. The 134-student Tonton Hall on 34th Street and 99-student Harris Plaza on Exposition Boulevard are the oldest student residences on campus.
STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Losing weight through diet alone or by exercise alone are equally effective in improving cholesterol and blood pressure levels, a study by Stanford University shows.

But Dr. Peter Wood of Stanford's Center for Research and Disease Prevention, said a weight loss program that combines diet and exercise is the best way to achieve the optimum physical and physiological benefit.

Wood, Dr. Stephen Fortmann and Dr. William Haskell presented their findings at the Conference on Cardiovascular Disease Epidemiology sponsored by the American Heart Association in San Francisco.

The study was sponsored by the National Institutes of Health and investigated changes in cholesterol levels and blood pressure to see how they were affected by different methods of weight loss.

Wood said each weight loss method — diet or exercise — similarly reduced blood pressure levels and increased levels of high-density lipoprotein, the so-called "good cholesterol" believed to help prevent heart disease.

In the study, 155 healthy but moderately overweight men were divided into three groups: an exercise-only group that jogged 10 miles a week, a diet-only group that decreased its caloric intake by about 300 calories a day, and a control group that did not change its diet or exercise habits at all.

After one year, the diet-only group had lost an average of 16 pounds and the exercise-only group lost an average of 10 pounds, Wood said. But the percentage of body fat in both groups remained the same, he said.

Wood said the participants' blood pressure levels decreased an average of 5 percent in real life situations such as a meeting at work or relaxing at home. He said their "good cholesterol" level tended to increase regardless of which weight loss regimen they followed. But in the exercise-only group, the cholesterol increased in direct relation to the number of pounds they lost, while in the diet-only group, it was much more random.

House panels oppose contra aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two House panels, ignoring President Reagan's argument that the United States must be spared sending "our own American boys" to Nicaragua, voted Wednesday to recommend against giving $100 million to rebels fighting the Sandinista government.

The House Intelligence Committee voted 9-7 against the aid package. A short time later, the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on the Western Hemisphere voted 8-3 against the proposal.

The two sets of votes in the Democratic-controlled panels marked the opening salvo in legislative battles over Reagan's proposal. The votes came shortly after Reagan said that Democratic-controlled panels giving $100 million to rebels to Nicaragua, voted Wednesday to recommend against giving $100 million to rebels fighting the Sandinista government.

Reagan earlier had told a White House audience that "if we give them the aid they need, the Nicaraguan people can win this battle for freedom on their own. American troops have not been asked for and are not needed."

Reagan's appeal came shortly before the two panels were scheduled to vote on the request, which includes $70 million in military assistance and $30 million in non-lethal aid. "We must make sure they (U.S. troops) never are needed," Reagan told members of a Jewish organization. "We send money and material now so we will never have to send our own American boys."

"But if the members of Congress hide their heads in the sand and pretend the Nicaraguan threat will go away, they are courting disaster and history will hold them accountable," he said. "Nothing less than the security of the United States is at stake."

Earlier, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger argued that the leftist Nicaraguan government was becoming a "second Cuba on the American mainland (meaning) the Warsaw Pact will have effectively ousted us."

Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., an intelligence committee member, said Wednesday's vote indicated that Reagan's proposal faces major obstacles in the Democratic-dominated House.

Aquino frees former communist leaders

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino freed two former communist rebel leaders Wednesday despite reservations from the military, and paid her first visit to the palace in which Ferdinand E. Marcos lived for 20 years.

Meanwhile, attorney Lupino Lazaro said two men cleared in the 1983 murder of Aquino's husband, Benigno, had given sworn statements admitting involvement and implicating the former president, his wife Imelda and four former Cabinet ministers. Gen. Fabian C. Ver, Marcos' military commander, was among the 26 people acquitted.

"I'm sorry for the delay," Mrs. Aquino told Jose Maria Sisón and Bernabe Buscayno when they were ushered into her tehp­ery for a 90-minute session. The two men were released after a "candid, cordial, and vigorous exchange of views."

Mrs. Aquino had pledged to free all political prisoners held by Marcos, who fled the country a week ago and has not gone home because of required medical checkups and paper work.

Presidential spokesman Rene Aquino, was said to be hospitalized last week in Manila, where he was visiting Mrs. Aquino.

Sison told journalists, there is no cer­tainty that the rebels will lay down their arms.

Mustangs win four straight
By Tim Robinson

Just as the weather got hot so did the Mustang baseball team, which has scored its way to a four-game winning streak, including nine of its first 12.

The four-game win streak started with a 18-7 win over St. Mary's on Friday and continued on Sunday when the Mustangs swept a double-header from Santa Clara.

The Mustangs then shut out Cal State Hayward 5-0 on Monday with a solid pitching performance and fine batting. Head coach Steve McFarland said he believes the team's batting is responsible for the early-season success.

"I think offensively we've been able to score some runs and basically it has been the homeron that has been our main weapon," said McFarland. "We've hit a lot of home runs for this early in the season. I think if you look in the last that we've never hit so many homeros this early in the year.

"The homeros have been a weapon and it was never more obvious than in the Mustangs last four games, where they had two or more homeros in three of the four contests. Meanwhile, the pitching hasn't been bad either, especially considering the Mustang's near two week layoff due to bad weather.

"I think our pitching has been able to keep us in in most of the ballgames, with the exception of the Fresno State game," said McFarland, who added the pitching has been an important factor in the hitting.

Starting this weekend Thursday in Ogden, Utah, the site of this year's PCAA Wrestling Championships, the Mustangs will have two wrestlers competing for the National Championship.

The Musungs are coming off a fifth-place finish at the Chico Invitational, a 10-team competition at Chico State.

The Mustangs scored 163.80 points behind first-place Seattle Pacific University, 177.63, second-place Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, 173.61, Chico State, 168.05 and Cal State Long Beach, 171.1.

"Out of more than 100 gymnasts competing, Rhonda Richter finished 11th in the overall competition with a 32.85. Kristy Broder finished 12th (32.80) and Jana Lehman placed 13th (32.75)."

The meet Saturday against Northridge will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Main Gym.

In the St. Mary's game Mike Brotz, 3-4, had a no-hitter going into the eighth inning despite giving up three runs in the first. The Mustangs as a team had 16 hits, which included a 4-for-4 day for Evansinger.

They also received a three-hit performance from shortstop Scott Fore, which included a three-run homer.

On Sunday the Mustangs swept Santa Clara by scores of 9-7 and 12-4. The Broncos, a team the Mustangs have taken four out of five from this year, went ahead early in both games, but both times the Mustangs recovered to pull off the sweep of the twinbill.

For the most part the first game was no contest, as Cal Poly led 9-2 going into the ninth, but See MUSTANGS, page 14

Cowell added that if Tracey is on and has some luck in the nationals he could take the championship. But he'll have to defeat Melvin Douglass of Oklahoma, the current National Champion, and fourth-ranked Marvin Jones of Cal State Bakersfield, who he lost to earlier this year.

"Mark beats a poor kid the same way he beats a good kid. Depending on the level of competition, he just raises his standards enough to win. He's an amazing athlete," said Cowell of Tracey, who will have to be amazing in order to capture the National Championship.

There was, however, a very sour note to the PCAA Championships for the Mustangs, as Andrew Merheb's season ended with a broken hand.

two-run homer was his first of the year, while Wright's solo homerun was his third. The Mustang's also got a 4-for-4 performance from sophomore catcher John Orton, whose batting has been an added boost to his outstanding defensive play behind the plate.

"He's had some big days, but I expect that for him ... I anticipated him being a very good offensive player for us... we need him for his defense, and obviously he's one of the best defensive catchers in the country," said McFarland. "He's proven that so far in the first 12 games, because I think he has only allowed three or four stolen bases in those 12 games."

The Mustangs must now take their four-game win streak on the road to play Loyola-Marymount, a team which is ranked 13th in non-league game we have all year."

likely than non-veterans to die of suicide in the years after the war, and they were 53 percent more likely to die in traffic accidents.

The research was based on a survey of death records of men who were involved in the draft lottery from 1970 through 1972. They concluded that military service during that three-year period was directly linked to an estimated 1,250 non-war deaths throughout the United States in the years that followed.

"If the draft affected men in the same way through the whole Vietnam era as it appeared to affect them for these three years, then the number might be in the tens of thousands," Hearst said.

The study, directed by Hearst, was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

Four million Americans served in Indochina during the Vietnam War, and 800,000 were assigned to combat. Some studies have found higher levels of depression, drug abuse, marital problems, criminal charges and other difficulties among the veterans.

However, some critics speculate that the veterans have trouble because they were poorer and less educated than those who avoided the draft, not because of any lingering effects of military service.

The new study was based on a review of death records of 14,143 men in Pennsylvania and California who were born between 1950 and 1952 and died between 1974 and 1983.

Between 1970 and 1972, the military lottery randomly assigned these men on the basis of their birth dates into two groups — those with low lottery numbers who were eligible for the draft and those with high numbers who were exempt.

The researchers noted that because of the random lottery the two groups were identical except for their draft status. So any differences between them in later years must be caused by the draft.

"We've hit upon what we call an experiment of nature," Hearst said. "When we see a difference, it's clearly a cause-and-effect relationship."

The suicide rate was 13 percent higher among those with low lottery numbers than those with high numbers. This figure was diluted, however, because a low lottery number didn't necessarily mean military service. In fact, only 26 percent of the draft-eligible men entered the military during the three years, while 9 percent of draft-exempt men served as volunteers.

"When the researchers took into account the percentages in each group who actually served, they projected that the suicide rate was 86 percent higher among the veterans.

Engle said, "I'm fearing things will be much worse." She predicts an increase in family disruption and an increase in poverty and malnutrition.

In Third World countries more women work than men. According to Engle, one of the problems with existing programs set up to help these countries is that the programs address men and the information doesn't get passed on to the women.

Engle said, "One of the goals of my research will be to make policy makers in this country more aware of these problems." Engle's research will also be used to help develop better, more efficient curriculum planning for these countries.

Engle will be affiliated with the Institute of Nutrition for Central America and Panama in Guatemala City. Part of her research will be funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development.
