Cal Poly Partners with San Luis Obispo Marathon; Alumnus and Ultra Runner Karnazes to Compete

SAN LUIS OBISPO – Cal Poly alumnus Dean Karnazes and university President Jeffrey D. Armstrong will join thousands of avid and recreational runners at the San Luis Obispo Marathon + Half races Sunday, April 7. Alumni, students, faculty, staff, and friends of the university can join Karnazes for the full race or Armstrong for the half marathon through historic San Luis Obispo and the Edna Valley.

“We are delighted to be involved with this showcase community event and at the same time be able to welcome alumni and friends back to the community for the races,” Armstrong said. “It’s a wonderful opportunity to set a personal goal, enjoy San Luis Obispo, and get reacquainted with fellow members of the Cal Poly family. And you don’t have to be in great shape to do this – walk, jog or run. The important thing is to join in the fun.”

Karnazes (B.S., Nutritional Science, ’87) is an internationally known elite endurance athlete, celebrated for his many athletic accomplishments including running 350 continuous miles, running across Death Valley in 120-degree temperatures, and running a marathon to the South Pole in negative 40-degree temperatures. He recently ran 50 marathons in 50 states in 50 consecutive days.

Participants running the San Luis Obispo Marathon, half marathon and 5K can gather at the Cal Poly tent on the SLO Life Expo grounds at the Madonna Inn to connect with family and friends, recover, and enjoy the post-race activities. Karnazes and Armstrong will greet Cal Poly participants and friends after the race.

"Cal Poly is integral to our community, and we appreciate the university's support," said Heather Hellman, SLO Marathon event director. "Many students and alumni ran and volunteered last year, and we hope many more will join President Armstrong and Dean Karnazes this year."

Early registration ends Feb. 1. To register, view course maps, volunteer, or for additional SLO Marathon information, visit www.slomarathon.com.
