The burned Engineering West Building was not covered by fire insurance

By Dawn J. Jackson
Staff Writer

The burned Engineering West Building was not covered by fire insurance and Cal Poly will have to go to the state to ask for funds to repair the damage.

Most campus buildings are not insured by the State of California because the state is basically self-insured. Exceptions are the residence halls, University Union and any building leased to an auxiliary organization, such as Cal Poly Foundation Food Services.

The residence halls are supported by bond financing and the bond holders require insurance. Asl, the U.U. and the Foundation carry fire insurance.

Executive Dean Douglas Gerard, who is in charge of facilities planning and operations, said Cal Poly has two options for possible funding. The university can get an executive order through the state Department of Finance. If that is not possible, a representative of the university will have to appear before the state legislature and ask for an appropriation.

Before they even begin this process, Gerard said he will have to find out exactly what it will cost. He estimates repairs will cost about $750,000.

A Santa Barbara architecture firm has been hired to come to Cal Poly to give an evaluation and estimate of the damage. Gerard hopes the report will be completed within 10 to 14 days.

Payment for the evaluation will come either from funds inside the campus or systemwide funds.

Two firms specializing in fire salvage and clean-up were on campus Tuesday and submitted bids for the two-floor job.

These firms have a special process which gets rid of the soot and the smell from fire-damaged articles. The faculty offices in the building had primarily smoke and heat damage and furniture on the second floor will be cleaned up and moved to other buildings.

Funds for the clean-up will probably come out of the CSU Chancellor's Office resources, Gerard said.

There were no smoke alarms or sprinkler systems in the building. The state fire marshall's office inspects the plans for any state building and designates if alarm systems are required.

"We're going to ask for sprinklers when the damage is repaired." - Douglas Gerard or sprinkler systems will be required. If they call for the systems, the building organization must comply.

This does not prevent the organization from adding the systems, but Gerard said the Department of Finance's legislative analysts look very closely at the cost of these buildings and sometimes delete items that are not required.

"We're going to ask for sprinklers when the damage is repaired," Gerard said. "When we're successful or not remains to be seen.

Any disaster of this kind enlightens us to the possibility of the same thing happening again.

Vice President for Business Affairs Jim Landreth has been working with Gerard on the fire damage. He said he has given out claim forms so faculty members can be reimbursed for personal property used for teaching or research purposes that was lost in the fire, such as a personal library.

Not enough student use

Infirmary will close in fall

By Chris Meri Barks
Staff Writer

Blaming decreasing usage and increasing costs, the director of the Cal Poly Health Center said in a recent interview that the infirmary will not reopen next fall after closing in June.

Infirmary will close in fall after closing in June.

The infirmary, Nash said, serves the university with facilities comparable to a small general hospital, with beds for up to 24 patients and staff on duty 24 hours a day.

Admission to the infirmary have dropped dramatically during the academic year, Nash said.

ASU Student Senate unanimously passed a resolution that should not have been passed at all.

The resolution recommends, "...that university administrators and faculty strive to remain impartial and unbiased in connection with ASI Elections. The senate passed the resolution with little discussion. No dissenting voice was heard."

The imetus to the creation of the resolution came from the controversy surrounding the athletic program. Kendrick Walker, director of the athletic program, spoke to a large group of athletes prior to the April 16-17 election and urged them to vote for a particular ASI presidential candidate. He said the candidate had the athletes' interests in top priority and he would be good for the athletic program. Some remaining candidates and the Student Senate found this unfair.

The Mustang Daily Editorial Board does not. Though the resolution states that it is not its intent to restrict the free speech of individual faculty members, it surely does. Any special interest group — be it athletes, ethnic minorities, scholastic achievers or specific clubs — has the right to band together and support a candidate who has their special interest in mind. For an administrator, faculty or staff member to suggest or inform them that a particular candidate represents them should not be considered coercion. For the Student Senate to believe that students are so naive or impressionable as to be unduly influenced by admiration or fear of reprisal is underestimating and insulting the student body.

We urge the Student Senate to reconsider this resolution.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Public Safety says fire response quick
Editor — In response to your editorial in the Monday, April 28 issue of Mustang Daily regarding the response time of the fire units to the fire which occurred on April 26, I might add the following:

After the Department of Public Safety received the call, one Cal Poly fire unit and one City of San Luis Obispo fire unit were on the scene in approximately two minutes. Upon arrival, they stationed themselves on the opposite side of the building away from the crowds and immediately attacked the fire and entered the building. Shortly afterward, a second Cal Poly fire unit arrived on the crowd side of the building and soon after, a second city unit arrived.

 hijacked by the thousands of people in the roadways. The fire had been underway for several minutes prior to notification to the Department of Public Safety. What I have stated and verifiable facts. People who write editorials should be required to check all the facts prior to composing their material. Hearn and Monday morning quarterbacking cannot be respected.

I wish to commend the members of Cal Poly's Department of Public Safety, which include the Fire Section, Police Section, Parking Section, dispatchers and other staff personnel. Commentaries are also in order to the City of San Luis Obispo Fire Department, California Department of Forestry, Cal Poly ROTC members, student club members, Plant Operation staff and the many students, staff and off-campus people who volunteered their help to quickly dispose the crowds and bring the fire under control.

The quick response by all involved prevented the fire from spreading and resulting in further damage to the buildings and its contents. I am proud of all those people involved in fighting this fire and wish to say thanks for a job well done.

RICHARD C. BRUG
Director of Public Safety

Editor's note: The Monday editorial merely asked "Why did it take so long for the fire department to get to the fire?" The Mustang Daily Editorial Board expressed the hope that the answer would be found in the next few days.

"We Envision" theme should be 'Let Us Out'
Editor — I do not have much talent for drawing; if I did, I would vary much more to update and redo this year's Poly Royal poster. "We Envision" features a large eye with wild mustangs galloping out of it. While there is nothing artistically wrong with the poster, it is sadly inadequate to convey the events of this past quarter. Specifically, my updated version would feature a thoroughly bloodshot eye. Instead of mustangs galloping out of it, terroristic crowds would be por­ trayed feasting a large burning building. The upper right hand corner of the poster might feature a rendering of certain grinning ASI presidential candidates rubbing their hands together as they participate in various forms of fraud and resume-engragement. In the background, the words "student opinion" would be crossed out by a large red international "don't do" symbol. Airbrushed into another corner of the poster would be several masked robbers carrying computer equipment under their arms as they run from the business building under a beauteful moon. Yet another corner would portray the door of the ASI Tutorial Center crossed by a large chain and padlock. A sign taped to the door would ask, "Where did the money go?" At the bottom of the poster would be this year's new Poly Royal theme, "Let Us Out" in large stylistic letters. Why this new high in low achievement? And why doesn't anybody seem to care?

Two killed in nuclear accident

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced Tuesday that two people were killed in the Chernobyl nuclear power plant accident. It said people living around the plant and in some nearby population centers were evacuated.

A statement by the Soviet government, distributed by the official news agency Tass, said the "radiation situation" at the plant had been stabilized and medical aid has been given to those affected.

Tass said Monday the accident was at the Chernobyl plant, but did not say the accident occurred only 60 miles from Kiev, a city of 2.4 million people.

Western reporters and diplomats had difficulty getting telephone calls through to Kiev, 473 miles from Moscow and the nearest large city to Chernobyl.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said it might be dangerous to travel to Kiev.

Libyan scouted potential targets

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A prosecutor’s indictment says a Libyan intelligence officer visited Turkey in January to scout American targets for terrorist attacks.

Security Court prosecutor Ulku Coskun prepared the indictment, a copy of which was obtained Tuesday by The Associated Press, for the trial of five Libyans accused of planning a grenade attack on a U.S. military officers' club in Ankara.

Two of the Libyans were captured near the club before the attack could be carried out on the evening of April 18, three days after the U.S. air raids on Libya. They were carrying a bag containing six hand grenades.

The indictment said the club was chosen because it would be crowded. About 100 people were attending a wedding party that Friday night, and the prosecutor has said the explosion of just one grenade could have killed or wounded half of them.

Student arrested on arson charge

A Cal Poly student was arrested and charged with arson Tuesday for setting fire to a trash dumpster on the Engineering West Patio, said Police.

Marco Amador, a 25-year-old architecture graduate student, was arrested by Cal Poly Police on arson charges and taken to San Luis Obispo County jail where he is being held on $3,500 bail.

The dumpster fire was reported to Cal Poly Public Safety around 9 a.m. Tuesday morning, and the Cal Poly fire department responded to extinguish the flames.

Police officers at the scene questioned witnesses who were able to give a description of a suspect. Tuesday afternoon police picked up Amador for questioning and later booked him on the arson charge.

A STUDENT COMMUNITY
How much do you need to go to college?

The most difficult test some students face this fall isn’t getting into college. It’s paying for it. Because for many students, financial assistance such as scholarships, grants, work-study programs, and family resources don’t cover the bill.

That’s why Chase offers four different educational loans, with affordable interest rates and flexible repayment plans."

What’s more, you don’t even need to have an account with us. Chase makes loans to qualified students and parents throughout the U.S. And we usually process your application within 24 hours.

"She had so many children she didn't know what to do..."

It isn't just a nursery rhyme to two San Luis Obispo moms whose jobs as fraternity and sorority housemothers keep them working full- and over-time.

A mother with her hands full, Rita Meland lives in the Cal Poly Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity house with her 79 "sons."

Meland, 56, known simply as "Mom" around the house, has been the AGR housemother since 1983.

A mother of five, Meland retired from Bank of America where she worked as a loan officer before being convinced by her son that she should become his fraternity's housemother.

Meland's son was a charter member of the San Luis Obispo AGR chapter. "At first I was very much against my son participating in a fraternity. But then I came down to my first Poly Royal, visited the house and fell in love with the fraternity."

When Meland was offered the job as housemother, she said she jumped at the chance. "Now I can't imagine doing anything else."

Applying for and receiving a Bank of America transfer to San Luis Obispo, Meland started her housemother duties while still working full-time for the bank. A year-and-a-half later Meland retired and now devotes most of her time to "her boys," the house and even a small garden in the fraternity's backyard.

Her duties, Meland said, are mostly to talk to the guys, give advice, plan the meals and "really just be a mom."

"Boys miss their mothers more than girls do. They need someone around who cares about them. I think just knowing I am around helps."

However, Meland performs above and beyond the call of duty. She said she picked berries and made 70 quarts of jam for the house last summer. "It was all gone in six months," Meland said, laughing.

"Anytime you need to talk to her she's there," said Jeff Parker, an Alpha Gamma Rho member. Parker said his own family is 12,000 miles away and "Mom" set up a Thanksgiving dinner for all the guys who were too far away to go home for the holiday.

Monica Mazzuco, a Rho-mate little sister to AOR said, "Mom is the number-one lady in the world. This house would be a lot rougher without her." In fact, Alpha Phi's housemother, Margaret Faye, says she is really more of a "big sister" than a "mom" to sorority members.

Meland said she attends all the house functions and social functions such as sorority exchanges and parties.

At the spring formal, Meland was chosen the chapter's "Sweetheart," an honor she said was "very definitely the first in the nation."

Meland said she loves being around young people. "I have been a kid for 56 years. I figure, if you can't beat them, join them!"

Margaret Faye, 28, brought her husband and their 20-month-old son to the housemother's apartment when she started the job last October.

Faye said the family moved to San Luis Obispo and she was looking for a job, when a friend in Alpha Phi called and said their house mother had quit and they needed an new one.
Fashions exhibited through photos

By Taffy Reakowit

A photography exhibit featuring fashions from local stores will be on display during the month of May at the Robert E. Kennedy Library.

The show, Take Two, was developed and produced as a senior project by two art and design students, Jenann Alhadad and Chrissy Van Berkum.

The exhibit consists of 20 color prints done on cibachrome, a museum quality paper. Alhadad said, Each picture represents a downtown store in San Luis Obispo, which include places such as The Village Squire and Riley’s department store.

Four months ago owners of the selected stores were asked to fill out a questionnaire regarding their marketing techniques. “We wanted to capture in our photographs what each store was trying to represent,” said Van Berkum.

The finished product is more than just a print, Alhadad said, it’s a quality advertisement. All but one of the models selected for the pictures are Cal Poly students. The only non-student is a department secretary.

“We found them everywhere,” Alhadad said, “from bathrooms to friends in classes. Only two of the models are professional.”

The photographs are all mounted on white with the store names placed underneath in black lettering. The frames are silver.

Alhadad said, “The stores were not obligated to have their name under the print, they had final approval.” However, everyone who has seen the pictures has been pleased, she said. About half of the owners have viewed the photographs so far.

Most of the shooting was done on location, Van Berkum said, at places such as Cafe Roma and the Madonna Inn. Each of the students took ten pictures.

The show was named Take Two because there are two of us, Alhadad said. Also, she said, when people hear the name, they think of something to do with photography.

The pictures at the show will all be available for sale. “We’re only asking to cover half of the expenses,” Alhadad said, “because we don’t want to make a profit.” Every model will receive a print for their time.

The students began taking the pictures in January. Alhadad said it was difficult to get quality prints in such a short period of time, especially with all of the bad weather this year.

One of the many benefits of the exhibit, Alhadad said, was recognition of the art department downtown. Many of the stores didn’t even know that the department existed.

Take Two will be held in the Photography Option Gallery from May 1-28. The public is invited to attend a reception on May 1 from 7-9 p.m.

The sun sets just over the horizon. The fog starts rolling in like a hungry monster in a hurry of swallowing up the little town, and soon it will invade all the visible space surrounding. Somewhere in that vicinity, between the purple sky and the wholesome earth, a few solitary birds are trying to reach home before nightfall. It's not quite dark yet. Twilight is still on the edge of emerging, and often at this time of the day when everything calms down, I'd catch myself in sorrow thinking about a land I once lived in, a country I was once a young citizen of, and a place once full of my childhood memories. It’s my native land, Vietnam, my beloved back-country to which I could never return, and once a young citizen of, and a place once full of my thinking about a land I once lived in, a country I was when everything calms down. I'd catch myself in sorrow and tears on their faces. I saw wounded soldiers running with blood dripping from their wounds, and white flags hanging over some deserted government buildings. I saw the sky was thickened with dark smoke from the horizon, which covered the sun, blocked out the light, and spread the dreadful atmosphere over the city. The sun of liberty would never be seen again in my homeland. It was more than 10 years ago since the day I fled Vietnam with my family, the day that I would never forget. There were a lot of noises, a mixture of chaos and panic, a moment of life and death; all were vividly displayed on the streets, on the faces of the soulless people. I heard noises from people's mourning, from the speeding vehicles, from the ambulances, from the helicopters above and most of all from the discontinuous gunshots from different sections of the city. I saw people running with their bags, their belongings in their hands, and tears on their faces. I saw wounded soldiers running with blood dripping from their wounds, and white flags hanging over some deserted government buildings. I saw the sky was thickened with dark smoke from the horizon, which covered the sun, blocked out the light, and spread the dreadful atmosphere over the city. ASI to present mission statement

By Taffy Renkowitz

ASI President Mike Mendes will present an ASI mission statement at the Student Senate meeting tonight.

Mendes said the mission statement will serve as a guideline for both ASI employees and those who govern ASI to provide a sense of direction and purpose to the organization.

"A mission statement is a primary mechanism for continuity in a corporation," Mendes said.

The new mission statement was composed by current ASI leadership. Mendes said, adding that nothing like it has ever been written down before.

"We want this to be something that our employees and volunteers can understand," he said.

Mendes said the time has come for ASI to define itself and its role in the university. He said ASI has two roles. It is not only a student corporation, but a government entity as well.

Mendes said, "The mission statement will define who we are and what we should be doing. It also projects who and what we want to be in the future."

According to the statement, "The mission of ASI is to enrich the lives of the university community. As a nonprofit, educational service corporation, this will be achieved through social, educational, cultural and recreational activities. These activities will be designed to stimulate individual initiative and innovation."

The statement continues: "The ASI is a dynamic business entity that maximizes its human and economic resources. The ASI will be aware and responsive to the present and future needs of the university population. The ASI will achieve its goals through the development and motivation of dedicated, energetic and culturally diverse people."

As a nonprofit, educational service corporation, this will be achieved through social, educational, cultural and recreational activities. These activities will be designed to stimulate individual initiative and innovation."

thousands of years from our ancestors. I love those ancient cities in Vietnam, where kings and dynasties made glories, where many statues of heroes who marked history with blood and courage stand through the endless time. I love those temples with red ceramic tile roofs and hundreds of charred bamboo trees. They contain the myth, the forbidden landmarks, and tales of each event that happened in history. All are still there to show generation after generation what our ancestors had done in the past to keep this land for us until this day, until the spring of 1975.

It’s spring again; it’s April again. April of 1975 and now April of 1986 have come and gone, like the migrating bird. Mindlessly, time kept passing by, but unlike the lucky bird, once I migrated from home there was no way back. I’ve learned to love my second language, my second homeland and the principles for which it stands. I’ve learned to adapt to the new way of life, and accept the values, the customs in this country. But for whatever I do, wherever I live, however I’ve changed, and how endlessly time proceeds, I will never forget Vietnam, my beloved back-country.

Jackson goes first in NFL draft

NEW YORK (AP) — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers made Bo Jackson the No. 1 pick in the NFL draft Tuesday and made it clear they would outbid baseball for him, while other teams tried to outsmart each other with a flurry of trades.

Jackson, Auburn's Heisman Trophy-winning running back, is considered one of the best pro football prospects ever, and a pretty fair outfielder, too. The Bucs said they would match any baseball team, dollar for dollar, for his services.

Bucs president Hugh Culverhouse vowed to make him "the highest-paid draft choice in NFL history." But Jackson was noncommittal, saying he would make no decision before baseball's June 2-4 draft of college and high school players.

Jackson is a major-league prospect, but is considered by scouts in both sports a better bet for football, particularly since he would have to put in time in baseball's minor leagues.

"I can offer a career and investment opportunities," Culverhouse said. "If it's a question of money, we'll win."

But Jackson said he didn't want people saying he had been bought, "that he did something because somebody said he could do this or that for Bo ... It will be because it's what I want to do."

Of more immediate concern Tuesday was the draft pick maneuvering, particularly among four NFC teams with Super Bowl ambitions for 1986 — the Dallas Cowboys, New York Giants, San Francisco 49ers and Washington Redskins.

Dallas' move had the most bright spots for the Mustangs, Melleberg was one of 12 players chosen for the all-CCAA team. Melleberg was picked as the No. 6 singles player and Hilliard was awarded an at-large spot on the team.

The 1986 season was a tough one for the Mustangs. They finished the season 5-7 in league and 9-15 overall, which earned them a fourth-place spot in the league behind Cal State Northridge, Cal Poly Pomona and Cal State Bakersfield in that order.

But Yeast said the Mustangs' record isn't the only thing that is important. "The women played and practiced with a steady effort this year, but best of all they played as a team, with unity," he said. "I am proud of this team and have enjoyed working with them."
The Giants ended up with Notre Dame defensive end Eric Dorsey and traded discontented cornerback Mark Haynes, to Denver, and the rights to USFL offensive lineman Gary Zimmerman, to Minnesota. They wound up with four second-round picks this year and an additional selection next year.

Washington, without a first-round pick for the 15th time in 11 years, made the No. 16 pick of this year's crop to grab an extra third-round pick, their first-round choice to San Francisco in anticipation of Everett being gone.

Hawaii's Walter Murray, a wide receiver who felt they desperately needed.

San Francisco, in addition to its five trades involving draft picks, also traded backup quarterback Matt Cavanaugh to Philadelphia for a third-round pick this year and a second-round pick in 1987. And San Diego, victimized by their own defense, traded up for Minnesota's pickup, No. 8, in an attempt to grab one of the few impact players on defense — Oklahoma State end Leslie O'Neal.

Buffalo, 2-14, took advantage of San Francisco's disdain for this year's crop to grab an extra first-round pick, ahead of the Los Angeles Rams and New York Jets, and take Will Wolford, a highly regarded offensive lineman from Vanderbilt.

Philadelphia emerged as this year's big gambler.

With his first pick, No. 10 in the first round, the Eagles' new coach, Buddy Ryan, took running back Keith Byars of Ohio State, close to Jackson in ability but suffering from a broken right foot that limits his potential.

El Corral Bookstore has offered to supply the students with the basic necessities, such as T-shirts, to get them through the next few weeks.

Jon Jang, a third-year architecture major, said, "I've gotten folders, pens, papers and basic tools from the bookstore. I lost at least $1,000 worth of stuff, and only gotten about $10 from the bookstore."

Martin tried to cheer up the group, saying, "You have to have a bit of humor. I realize it's disrupting to your lives, but the only way we're going to get through it is to have a bit of humor."

One of Laffranco's professors walked by and told her she saw something of hers she had missed. She grinned as she walked back toward the building and said: "I don't like being in there. It's awful."

pass 13 years, Nash said. For the 1972-1973 school year, 460 students checked into the infirmary as patients. The lengths of their stays combined added up to 1,450 days. In contrast, as of Jan. 31, 1986, total admissions for the 1985-1986 school year totaled 74, with the length of their stays totaling 185 days.

In recent years, Nash said, the Health Center in-house staff, the office of the Dean of Students and the Business Affairs office have all "acknowledged that as a service it's a fiscal nightmare," referring to the infirmary. However, he said, "If the usage was still up, then I would fight like crazy to get the extra dollars."

The cost of running the infirmary is approximately $600,000 a year, Nash said. Beginning next year, the Health Center staff, which is unionized, will receive a 5 percent pay increase.

"Assuming that our income is the same, we will have a $17,000 deficit," if the infirmary remains open, he said. "By not having the services of the infirmary, we are losing $50,000 or $55,000, which is a very serious surplus." Nash said the Health Center has been considering contracting with one of the three local bookstores to provide students with the services currently provided by the infirmary, at a flat rate.

The infirmary closure will open up many possibilities, Nash said. "The biggest single complaint we get is the waiting. We hope to have more staff, because the ones we're receiving from the Oddfellows infirmary hours will be moving to the busier hours," he said. Nash said the Health Center will be enhancing the services of dermatology and dental care and adding ophthalmology to the program.

Nash said he is saddened by the closure of the infirmary. "We have about 200 to 300 students, over the eight years I've been here, in school thanks so well," he said. "The people who have two broken arms and can't feed themselves, won't be able to take care of them. There's just no way to justify the spending."

Landreth has also given the School of Architecture and Environmental Design claim forms from the State Board of Control. These forms are for students to list what property they lost in the fire, such as drafting supplies, books and calculators. Those claims go through a review process in Sacramento.

El Corral Bookstore is also helping students by replacing books and project supplies lost in the fire.

Stain American hostage receives military burial near San Francisco Bay

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Peter Kilburn, who spent 17 months as a hostage in Lebanon and was slain by his captors in revenge for the U.S. bombing of Libya, was remembered Monday in a funeral at an Army post in the shadow of the Golden Gate Bridge.

"My uncle always wanted a military burial — he was a World War II veteran," said nephew Tim Kilburn, 35, of the Santa Cruz County town of Aptos. "The Army went out of its way to find a place for him here."

Kilburn, 62, a native of Berkeley, Calif., was one of three hostages found slain April 17 near Beirut. A group calling itself the Arab Fedayeen Cells left a note with the bodies claiming the killings were in response to the April 15 bombing by the United States of coastal targets in Libya.
