Southern SLO targeted for greek row, possible annex

By Sharon Sherman

The greek community at Cal Poly is closer than ever to having a group of homes specifically for its members. But members of fraternities and sororities shouldn't start packing their bags just yet. The chances are it will be two to five years until any houses are actually built.

And when they are built, they may be a little farther from campus than earlier anticipated.

The Student/Community Liaison Committee unanimously approved a motion Thursday that focuses the efforts of the Greek Row Subcommittee in the southern portion of San Luis Obispo.

The adopted motion states, "The Greek Row Subcommittee should continue at this time to plan the use of the land in the Tank Farm/airport area until such time that other possibilities become viable, such as state land or city land closer to campus.'"

The motion does not rule out any sites either on- or off-campus, but the failure of prior attempts to secure land closer to Cal Poly makes a greek row near campus unlikely, said Tom Bongi, chair of the subcommittee.

"Greek row was first proposed at Cal Poly in the early 1970's," Bongi said. "Itself, which seemed to be the most feasible and likely place to groups for the purpose of housing."

Mayor Ron Dunin, a member of the committee, said the action of the Board of Trustees has made it clear that a greek row will never be built on the campus.

"It's time we accept that and start looking at the locations that aren't only tangible but realistic," Dunin said.

The area of focus for a greek row is currently not within the city limits, but may be considered for annexation in the future.

"At this point any annexation is out of the question," said Dunin. "Once the water problem is resolved I will have no problem with annexing the land."

Bongi said that since the 1983 motion made by the trustees to search for land has been in effect, "Whenever there is a little farther from the greek row, sometimes the city has put in the way," he continued. "And when they are built, they may be a little farther from campus than earlier anticipated."

$2,500 workshop welder stolen

Equipment weighed 500 lbs, multiple thieves sought

By Mike McMillan

A brand new arc-welder valued at $2,500 was recently stolen from Agriculture Shop 7 on campus.

Sgt. Robert Schumacher of Public Safety said there is more than one suspect due to the equipment's large size.

"Although it was transportable, it weighed over 500 pounds and we believe a truck was used," he said.

It is believed the burglary occurred sometime between the closing Saturday of April 8 and the morning of April 12.

The welder was discovered missing by equipment technician Jim Matheny on Wednesday morning.

"We were building a trailer for a group," Matheny said. "It hadn't even been used yet. It really bothers us that we were taken advantage of," Matheny said.

There were no signs of forced entry into the shop. Schumacher added that the theft is under investigation, but the early efforts were aimed at Cal Poly. "After 15 years of being involved in this, I think that we are at the stage, both in the community and the student body, where we are unwilling to go after it. And that's what we are doing now." said Schumacher.

Beware: Lopez Lake itching once again for swimmers

By Laura Bestor

Several Cal Poly students did not know they were recently bitten by a mosquito while cooling off in Lopez Lake last weekend.

Ron Altbaum, an agricultural management junior, and his friends went Saturday, April 8 at Lopez Lake swimming and windsurfing. By the end of the day many of them were itching violently, Altbaum said.

The students had contracted Schistosoma Dermatitis, commonly known as swimmer's itch, according to Tom Gallagher, the parks superintendent for the county. Swimmer's itch is caused by the microscopic parasitic Schistosome.

"I was in the water for about an hour-and-a-half," Altbaum said. "I started itching in the water. When I got out I was itching really bad. I ran to the shower to try and wash off — it just got worse."

Last April the first cases of swimmer's itch appeared from contact with the water at Lopez Lake. According to Gallagher, "it never left.

Swimmer's itch is prevalent in many lakes around the country, but is relatively rare to Lopez Lake, Gallagher said.

"There were something posted," said Altbaum. "If people start itching they'll know what's going on and won't worry."

Gallagher explained that swimmer's itch is no different than sunburn, mosquito bites, or poison oak.

"Posting signs would be like posting signs warning against mosquito bites," he said.

Freshwater snails are hosts to the parasite. After a period of time the parasite is released from the snail into the water. This is the stage where the parasite is able to penetrate human skin, said Doherty, supervisor for the environmental health center, said. Human skin is not a suitable host for the parasite so it eventually dies.

"Something like this doesn't go away (from the lake)," Doherty said. "We can only treat it on a seasonal basis."

He explained that they treat the water with copper sulphate crystals that kill the snails. Signs are posted closing the treated area for 24 hours.

Symptoms of swimmer's itch include itching and the appearance of a rash on parts of the body that had contact with the water. Gallagher said.

"The best way to avoid swimmer's itch is to avoid going into the water, to rub yourself vigorously with a towel when you come out of the water," Gallagher said. "This knocks the parasite off."

If you do get swimmer's itch, the best thing you can do is apply topical ointment, Doherty said. If you have an extreme case, a physician should be contacted.

Library cuts are shameful

Cal Poly graduates, especially those in technical fields, have long enjoyed a reputation for excellence with major corporations.

If the diminishing supply of new periodicals and books is any indication of future success, Cal Poly graduates may soon find themselves adrift out of jobs by private university grad.

Periodicals in Cal Poly’s Kennedy Library have been cut to 200 titles, from 3,230 in 1986 to 3,030 in 1989. New books have suffered an even greater cut. The library purchased only 6,890 volumes this year, 4,670 less than 1986’s 11,560. If new funding is not found, library officials project a purchase of only 1,240 new books in 1991.

All CSU libraries are facing the same budget crunch because of Proposition 4 and Proposition 98. In 1979, Proposition 4, the Game Spending Limit, restricted state and local government spending. Then, in 1988, Proposition 98 set minimum funding levels for K-12 schools. Consequently, four-year state universities, such as Cal Poly, are suffering the brunt of limited funding despite a recent 10 percent increase in student fees.

CSU libraries are doing what they can to curb the damage. They are organizing periodic cancellations so that at least one campus will have a copy of each subscription. These periodicals can be shared through the interlibrary loan program, which often takes three to four days to transfer.

This is not enough. It is shameful that Cal Poly cannot stock its library shelves with the latest books and magazines. Cal Poly is the largest source of reference in the county. It is absurd to cut this fundamental source of information. Even at its peak, the library was not strong in liberal studies resources. Many literary journals were either outdated or missing altogether. County residents as well as students will suffer.

The best solution on the horizon appears to be Project 90, which will modify Proposition 98.

Project 90 will tie funds to economic growth instead of tied to economic growth instead of

Roe vs. Wade does not give women right to abortion

Editor — On Monday, April 10, and then again on Tuesday, April 11, the Mustang Daily’s headline article about the Supreme Court’s Roe vs. Wade decision was incorrect.

The Supreme Court’s ruling stated that a doctor has the right to grant abortion in the third trimester of pregnancy if the physician deems it necessary for medical reasons.

Before the ruling, abortion was neither legal nor illegal under federal law. Each state’s elected representatives decided. The overturning of Roe vs. Wade would not make abortion illegal. It would only return control of the issue state governments. These legislative bodies can be more responsive to the wishes of the people and the rights of the fetus.

I would like to have the legislature in Sacramento decide rather than the Supreme Court in Washington, D.C.

Kids DARE to say no to drugs

By A.J. Schuermann

Last weekend I was watching a game show called ‘Kid Quiz’. It’s like ‘Jeopardy!’ for kids. Of course, the college students who watch ‘Kid Quiz’ think they know all the answers.

When the buzzer went off, answering all the questions before the kids could ring their buzzers. That was my first time.

I had no idea. I’ve seen tee-shirts that say, “D.A.R.E. to keep your kids off drugs,” but no one told me what the letters stood for.

Although I was stumped, some kid answered the question in a split second. She hit the buzzer and said “Drug Abuse Resistance Education.”

I’ve been reading about the D.A.R.E. program for the past year, and I’ve heard of it. However, it’s absurd to cut this program.

It goes without saying that the goal of U.S. policy toward the Soviet Union is to decrease the influence of Eastern Europe, the policy of glasnost that makes it possible to achieve political and economic progress.

But it is not possible to ease the Soviet Union out of Eastern Europe without Moscow noting the weakening of Yalta will surely be complex. The strategy should be to enable the countries of Eastern Europe to associate themselves — on a case-by-case basis — with the European Community while the North Atlantic Treaty Organization those that the Warsaw Pact continue at reduced levels in Central Europe.

Students, city overcome rocky past in committee.

By Sharon Sherman

The relationship between the community, the city and students may have a rocky past, but the future promises increased communication, a Cal Poly student told representatives from these three groups Thursday.

Improvements in the relationship are in large part due to the efforts of the Student/Community Liaison Committee, a 19-member group which includes Mayor Ron Dunin, police Chief Jim Gardiner and other representatives from city government, in addition to student and administrative representatives from Cal Poly, Cuesta College and San Luis Obispo High School.

Jeff Schumacher, vice chair of the committee, said, "What we've tried to do is bring representatives from all areas and work together to try and solve the problems that are facing us."

The committee is nearing the end of its second year and held a reception Thursday to outline its accomplishments.

Cal Poly President Warren Baker was among the 50 people in attendance at the state's Personnel Building.

"The first year was a formative period in which we communicated with each other," Schumacher said. "This year we've actually moved into the direction of tackling problems and seeing what kind of results we can achieve together."

Schumacher said five attempts failed and I think I was the reason was that students did not have a voice in the committee. Schumacher said, "Mayor Dunin proposed the idea to form a committee which students would run."

The committee has been active in pursuing the formation of a greek row for Cal Poly fraternities and sororities and coordinating police ride-alongs for students.

"The group is also working on a brochure that outlines how to be a good neighbor," Schumacher said. "I think we are aware that there is a lot of conflict between students and some members of the community."

Baldwin said she feels the goals of the program is personal exchange.

In addition to teaching, Baldwin said she will be able to research cultural differences relative to special education. Her work will include looking at the coping strategies of families with disabled children.

The ability and willingness to share ideas and experiences with people of diverse cultures were one of criteria included in the scholarship selection.

"It has been a goal of mine to teach in a Central American country," said Baldwin.

She is fluent in Spanish, but views learning a foreign language as an incredible challenge. Besides earning a minor in Spanish, she said she is taking an immersion course in the language. While in college, she lived in a dorm designed for students who didn't speak English and traveled to Mexico taking English classes.

"We here to give folks a hand, and to help out with things they can't do themselves," said Sam Lantern, adviser for Student Community Services.

The event began at 8 a.m. with a breakfast provided by local merchants. Several speakers, including Mayor Ron Danin, encouraged the students to make a difference in the community.

"You're going to make a difference in someone's life today," said Betsey Nash of KJDJ 1030 News Radio.

When you have finished you will have positively affected the community.

Job assignments were split among the students before they headed out at 9 a.m. to all parts of the city. The students worked until 2 p.m.

Glenna Kieffer, a SLO resident, had seven students at her mobile home doing various gardening jobs.

She said of the workers, "They're doing a very good, very tedious job."

Posters were placed in supermarkets, community centers and even bingo halls to reach members of the community who might need some work done. People in need of the volunteer help called Student Community Services and were placed on the work schedule.

Eileen Aguila, Fremont Hall resident, pulled weeds for her part in Good Neighbor Day. She said the best aspect of the job was being in contact with the elderly.

"We are closing the gap between college kids and the elderly," she said.

Her weeding partner Joyce Kamimura said, "It shows the community that Cal Poly students actually care about the city. An event like this breaks down the negative stereotypes of college students."

Rich Gonzales, of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, felt the best aspect of the job was finishing.

"I got a chance to sit down and talk to the lady I was working for afterwards," said Gonzales.

Diablo Unit 2 reactor up to 30% capacity
SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — The Unit 2 reactor at Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant was operating at 30 percent of capacity Sunday after a one-week shutdown to replace a leaky cooling system valve, a utility spokesman said.

The reactor was providing 300,000 kilowatts of electricity, enough for about 300,000 people in northern and central California, said Pacific Gas & Electric spokesman Ron Rutkowski.

The reactor was restarted at 5:49 a.m. Saturday and the gradual process of returning to full power was expected to be accomplished sometime Monday.

"We're going to do various tests. That is the normal procedure when you bring a unit back into operation," Rutkowski said.

Families look for relatives among satanic cult victims
MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Families who traveled hundreds of miles from across Mexico viewed mutilated corpses on Friday to learn whether their missing ones were among the 13 victims of a cult's human sacrifices.

"From all over the country, families have been coming here. Thursday will continue," said Hector Olvera Garcia, an employee of a funeral home, El Rosario, where seven bodies were taken after being dug up at a ranch west of this border city.

Authorities found 12 bodies buried there Tuesday and five others among the 13 victims of a cult's human sacrifices.

"We think they might be coming this way," said Illinois State Police Master Sgt. Clifford Mann, who added that Constanzo, known as the cult's "godfather," and Ms. Aldrete, its "witch," had not yet been seen.

At full power the reactor supplies 1.1 million kilowatts to 1.1 million people.

Unit 2 was shut down April 8 because of a leak in a pressurizer safety valve, which helps maintain constant pressure on its cooling system. The valve opens if pressure in the reactor cooling system exceeds proper levels.

The valve was leaking low-level radioactive water at the rate of two-tenths of a gallon per minute into a containment system called the pressurizer release tank.

Safety standards allow a leak up to 10 gallons a minute, according to Rutkowski.

No radioactivity escaped from the system, he said.

The Unit 1 reactor, which has continued to operate at 100 percent, also generates 1.1 million kilowatts.

The suspects told police they killed 14 people.

Authorities say the suspects belong to a bizarre cult that smuggled more than a ton of marijuana into the United States each week.

Police in both Mexico and the United States continued the search for the two suspected leaders of the cult, Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo, 26, and Sara Aldrete, 24. The two were last seen in Brownsville Tuesday in a luxury car.

Illinois State Police were given a description of the car Friday after authorities in Brownsville, Texas, just across the border from Matamoros, learned the pair have friends near Chicago.

"We think they might be coming this way," said Illinois State Police Master Sgt. Clifford Mann, who added that Constanzo, known as the cult's "godfather," and Ms. Aldrete, its "witch," had not yet been seen.

track frosh 'discusses' his 'shot' in Mustangs' arsenal

By Neil Farrell

What do you do if you can't run or jump in the fifth grade? You take up the shotput and the discus, naturally.

That's what Cal Poly track standout Chris Carter did. Now he's one of the best in the CCAA and Poly's number one performer in the shot and discus. And he's a freshman.

In a recent meet with Fresno State, Carter set a personal best in the shotput at 49 feet, 7 and three-fourths inches, which was good enough to be the fourth longest heave in the conference this year. He also set a personal record in the discus at 157 feet, 6 inches, which is the third longest in the CCAA this year. The dual wins brought a particularly broad smile from Poly track coach Tom Henderson. "Carter is improving every week," Henderson said. "I know he's the only freshman up that high in the conference."

The real significance is that it's the first time we've beaten Fresno State in the shot and discus in eight years. Chris's discus mark is the 10th best in Cal Poly history. "It's the first time we've had anyone break into the top 10 since 1981. He's the best we've had for at least eight years."

Carter, 18, is majoring in computer science. He halls from Fair Oaks, a Sacramento suburb. He went to Jesuit High, a parochial school, where he set school records in the shot and discus. He came to Cal Poly for the academics but is pleased with the track program.

The Poly program is pretty organized," he said. "Though we don't get much money from the athletic department. It's a program we have to run on fundraising."

Henderson said his star wasn't heavily recruited by Poly but that he was in contact with Carter and knew he was coming. Carter's rapid development is somewhat shocking when the differences between high school and college are considered.

In high school a 12-pound shot is used; at Poly, Carter had to get used to a 16-pounder. (Just for reference, imagine grabbing a backpack filled with books and important papers and heaving it 60 feet, using an almost shoving motion with the rear of your shoulder. A shot is probably heavier.) Carter said the heavier shot was a large problem to overcome.

"Just getting used to the heavier implement was hard," he said, "but the key in the shot and discus. Carter said they're very similar.

"You use the same techniques for both of them," he explained. "You have to have good technique because brute strength will only get you so far. The basic differences are in the implement itself."

Carter, who stands 5 feet, 10 inches and weighs 210 pounds, doesn't have a preference between the shot and discus.

"I've gotten mad and dropped each one this year. I'll get mad at the shot and drop it for a week, then it'll be the discus for a week. I don't really have a preference."

He's kept out of the weight room for a month and a half but keeps up his leg strength withometrics, which are jumping exercises. Oh, and he throws his bat in Mustangs' arsenal

The Mustangs kept their playoff hopes alive this weekend by sweeping a three-game series with the Highlanders, including a double-header on Saturday.

"We're really excited about this," said Head Coach Steve McFarland. "This means that we've still one of the top three teams in contention for the CCAA title. There is only a one-game difference between each of the teams, so we need to keep winning games." Pitching was the key to the Mustangs' 4-3 first victory Saturday. Dave Wilson started and went for 11-and-one-third innings before being relieved by Phil Crumback.

Wilson struck out 10 batters and allowed only eight hits before Crumback took over for him. Defensively the Mustangs started off well, until the sixth inning, when Poly made some costly errors. A missed throw by first baseman Pat Kirby allowed one run to score, while errors by third baseman Matt Drake and second baseman Bill Daily gave the Highlanders plenty of opportunities to advance the runners.

The Mustangs were not the only ones with the defensive problems. Coach Jack Smitharan of the Highlanders changed pitchers three times, once in successive innings. Steve Green, who relieved David Cooperstein in the eighth inning, walked the winning run home in the 13th inning.

One of the biggest headaches for the Highlanders was the number of passed balls allowed by catcher John Holms, which permitted the Mustangs to steal. Over seven passed balls and one wild pitch got by the catcher, all with runners on the bases. Offensively the Mustangs got 13 hits in the first game, which was five better than the Highlanders.

A bunt attempt to advance runners was contained in the fourth inning when Mustangs' runner Kirby, took off for home but was out in a rundown. It was a result of overcrowding, the police just let them walk in. There are people lying dead there on the floor."

Many people died as they collapsed barrier kills 85 at soccer semifinal

SHEFFIELD, England (AP) — A barrier collapsed under the crush of thousands of fans at a soccer match Saturday, killing at least 85 people, officials said.

Julie Rhodes, a spokesman for the Ambulance Service in Sheffield, said about 200 people were injured. Her death figure was higher than that given by police, who reported 74 killed.

Many people lay on the field barrier holding thousands of Liverpool fans behind one of the collapsed goals. Many of the fans had apparently slipped into the crowded stadium without tickets. Many died as they were smashed against the front of the barrier. Others died when they tried to fight their way out of the crowd.

The crush appeared to be purely a result of overcrowding. Reports said hundreds of fans without tickets poured through a turnstile gate behind one of the goals, placing an area marked off for team followers and crushing those at the front against the fence.

The tragedy occurred in the opening minutes of the English Football Association Cup semifinal between Liverpool and Nottingham Forest at Hillsborough Stadium. The match was canceled.

Officially, the game attracted a capacity crowd of 94,000. "A gate or gates were opened without proper authority," said Graham Kelly, chief executive of the English Football Association. "There were too many fans in the area, obviously, and they spilled over."

The end result was a doubleheader on Saturday.

Phil Crumback started off well, until the sixth inning, when Poly made some costly errors. Kings win, advance

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Wayne Gretzky scored two goals and assisted on one of Bernie Nicholls' two second-period goals as the Los Angeles Kings eliminated the defending Stanley Cup champion Edmonton Oilers with a 6-3 victory in the seventh and deciding game of their Smythe Division playoffs Saturday night.

Gretzky set a club record with 12 points in the series against his former teammates.

Chris Kontos scored his playoff-leading eighth goal and NHL playoff record sixth power-play goal for the Kings, who became only the sixth team in NHL history to rebound from a 3-1 series deficit.

The victory vaulted the Kings into the Smythe Division finals against the Calgary Flames, who earlier clinched their first-round series with a 4-3 overtime victory over Vancouver.

Gretzky scored his 84th career playoff goal on a 2-on-1 break in the first minute of the game, then clinched it in the last two minutes with an empty-net goal while the Kings were short-handed.

With his second goal, Gretzky tied Mike Bossy's playoff record of 85 goals.

Nicholls got the big one in the second period that put the Kings ahead for good. With 3:37 left in the period and the Kings holding a 5-on-3 advantage, Gretzky passed to Nicholls, who skated across the slot and dumped a backhander past Fuhr.

Los Angeles goalie Kelly Hrudey made two great saves on Craig Simpson in the closing minute of the second period, stopping a wraparound with his stick and then, while on his back, knocking away the rebound shot.

The tragedy came less than a week after the ruling body of European soccer, the Union of European Football Associations, announced it was lifting its ban on English teams in time for the 1990-91 season.

The ban was imposed after the English Football Association was found guilty of disorderly conduct at an intercontinental tournament and the winners of the Liverpool-Forest semifinal, to be played in Brussels, Belgium, in which 39 supporters, most of them Italian, died in a stampede by Liverpool fans at the European Champions Cup final against Juventus of Turin.

The English Football Association is the world's oldest, domestic single elimination soccer tournament and the winners of the Liverpool-Forest semifinal are assured a place in next month's championship game.

On Jan. 2, 1971, 66 people died when an overcrowded staircase collapsed during a local soccer match between Glasgow Rangers and Celtic in Glasgow, Scotland.

Fifty-six fans died on May 11, 1985, when a fire engulfed the main stand during a match at Bradford City's stadium in northern England.

"It's good to be back home," said McFarland after the game.

To be able to do a series sweep such as this and to do it at home should really help us. We've got a nice eight-game stand here, which will hopefully give us a chance to move up. After we finish up at home, we've got a very important series with Pomona, and we have to be ready for that."

McFarland also talked about what his team's chances were of getting into the playoffs after this weekend's sweep of River- side.

"There'll be three teams from the west, Sacramento State's already guaranteed to go. The other two spots are still open, and it's still a very tight race between Pomona, Northridge and Poly. If we can continue to win like we did today, we'll be there."

The Mustangs next test will come on Friday at 7 p.m. when they face Cal State Dominguez Hills at San Luis Obispo Stadium.

Volunteers blaze trail to firefighting

By Neil Farrell

Nature has a way of calling people.

Forests and wildlife areas attract people like magnets. The beaver, too, with a type of aphrodisiac people can't seem to get enough of.

But people have a way of ruining things and when that happens, a group of Cal Poly students springs into action.

A year earlier, the volunteers had been gathering together since the early 1970s and working as seasonal firefighters who specialize in wildlife, for the United States Forest Service.

Brandon Fleming, a sophomore natural resource management major, saw his first fire season in 1988. It was eventful.

"My very first shift," Fleming said, "we (had a) 24-hour shift with only three hours of sleep. Usually the shifts are 16 hours down to 12. Then you can sleep."

Los Padres Crew 2, which consists almost entirely of Poly students, is lead by Kevin Chambers. Chambers graduated from Poly in 1988. His involvement started in 1979 and after one season he was hooked. He now acts as a labor contractor.

"I sign a contract with the Forestry Service," Chambers said. "I provide a certain number of people for a certain amount of time. We have to be packed and ready to move out within an hour. Last summer was a good fire season. We worked 30 days without a day off. Believe me when they come, days off are appreciated."

The crew's best response time for a fire last season was 30 minutes. But they saw the smoke long before the call came from the dispatcher in Goleta. The crew is based in the Los Padres National Forest at Pozo. But they can be flown anywhere the Forestry Service needs them.

"We saw the smoke from a brush fire coming over the grade and were rolling in half an hour," Chambers said. "When we got there a crowd was gathered and they started applauding. We looked at the fire and the flames were 200 feet high. We just said sorry there's not much we can do."

The crew was flown to Idaho and then bussed into Wyoming to help fight the fires that ravaged Yellowstone National Park. Both Fleming and Chambers agree that the forest needed to burn. It was overgrown and in decline.

"We were flown into Yellowstone by helicopter," Fleming said. "They flew us in everywhere because of the terrain. The Forestry Service air-dropped supplies to us and sometimes they'd get caught in the trees. So we'd cut the trees down. There were a lot of dead trees and standing trees in Yellowstone and fire is a natural way to clear out the dead vegetation."

Nearly two million acres burned in Yellowstone, which is about half the park. Chambers said the fires were incredibly fast, one fire burned 30,000 acres in one day. He contrasted that by saying in 1985, 200,000 acres burned in the Las Posas area, a particularly bad year.

Doug Aversano, the full-time Forestry Service officer for the Pozo area, works with the crew during the season. He said the work was well paid and worthwhile.

"You gotta like it," Aversano said. "You can't be afraid. It's good action and there's a mission. It's not just trees and bushes they burn, but someone's home or cabin."

As for the pay, Fleming said he earned $6,900 last season and was the least paid on the crew. The average pay for the season, which runs from the end of spring quarter to a week before fall quarter, was between $5,000 and $7,000.

Councilman requested to apologize for remark

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — The Orange County Human Relations Commission asked a Westminster councilman to apologize for spurning organizers of a South Vietnam Armed Forces Day parade and suggesting they "go back to South Vietnam."

The commission voted 6-0 Thursday, with four members absent, to urge Councilman Prock Pry to apologize for comments he made during a meeting earlier in the week.

Fry acknowledged Thursday that his remarks at the Westminster City Council meeting Tuesday night may have been too harsh. But he stopped short of apologizing, saying he "only meant to urge the Vietnamese immigrants to assimilate."

"He should apologize for his insulting remarks and the statement he has cast on Westminster and Vietnam," said Mike Henri Front, a commissioner and former Alabama estate broker. "Everywhere I go, people are talking about it. Mr. Fry's remarks were so racist."

Parade organizers vowed to recall Fry and said they would discuss a discrimination suit with the American Civil Liberties Union.

The Westminster City Clerk's officer said it had received 29 calls in support of Pry and nine in opposition.

"It's not fair to deny them their culture or pretend they are not Vietnamese," said Mike Warren, president of the local chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America. "If this country is really fighting to heal its wounds from the Vietnam War, we have to accept the Vietnamese, not hate them."

But Bob Kakuk, spokesman for Brothers of Viet Nam in L.A. Hibes, said Pry should be condemned.

"Why should they have a different holiday to honor veterans? .. It's time somebody stood up for the Vietnamese."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III today praised the economic reform program in the Soviet Union, but said Mikhail S. Gorbachev could be in trouble unless "there are consumer goods on the table and in the markets."

Baker told the American Society of Newspaper Editors that the risk to the Soviet leader could come from opponents of change, entrenched elements of the bureaucracy and from "sources of nationalistic discontent."

He said Gorbachev's economic program, known in Russian as perestroika, is in the best interest of the United States and the world because it would lead to a more secure and stable Soviet Union.

"We very much want perestroika to succeed," Baker said in response to a question after a speech.

"We very much want the General Secretary to succeed."

But, Baker said, political reform in the Soviet Union is proceeding faster than economic reform.

"That might trigger something," he said. "These things generally have to proceed apace."

Baker, due to meet with Gorbachev and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze in Moscow May 10-11, said "there is some risk" to the Soviet leadership.

"If they are unable to get the economic part of this going and going well so there are consumer goods on the table and in the markets, that's going to give rise to some feeling on the part of some that this idea of perestroika doesn't mean much to the common man in the Soviet Union," he said.

Baker added: "I see a chance of it, and I think it would be unfortunate."

He called again for renunciation of the Brezhnev Doctrine, which asserts Moscow's right to intervene militarily on the side of East European governments under internal attack, and for destruction of the Berlin Wall, which divides East and West in Europe.

Baker also criticized Soviet military support to Nicaragua and the sale of new bombers to Libya, which he said supports terrorism.

"There remain too many areas where the slogans of new thinking lack content," he said.

Governor defends CSU, UC fee hike
Says higher education still a bargain

SACRAMENTO (AP) - Declaring that he has brought higher education in California "back from the brink of mediocrity," Gov. George Deukmejian on Saturday defended his proposed 10 percent increase in student fees. Despite the proposed increases, from $1,434 to $1,577 annually at the University of California and from $684 to $750 at the 19 state university campuses, UC student fees have increased at less than the rate of inflation over the past six years, Deukmejian said in his weekly radio address.

Reiterating remarks in his January state budget message, the Republican governor said despite the proposed increases, higher education in California is still a bargain, and that both student aid and overall public support of the universities have increased far more than fees or the rate of inflation.

He said UC student fees are "$800 less than at other comparable public universities, and $9,000 less than the average tuition at private institutions in our state" while state university fees are "less than half the cost of attending a comparable institution elsewhere in the country."

Deukmejian made no reference in his defense of the fee increases to the rally five days earlier that brought 3,000 students protesting fee increases to the Capitol steps chanting "Nuke Duke" and other anti-Deukmejian slogans.

"Even though we have proposed a fee increase for next year, it should be remembered that for three consecutive years of our administration, we prevented any increases at all. And at UC, fees have gone up less than the rate of inflation over the last six years," Deukmejian said.

At the same time, Deukmejian said, loans, grant and work programs for students have expanded by 62 percent, to total $83 million annually in aid to 77,000 students.

"I'm proud that our administration has brought public higher education back from the brink of mediocrity to a position of international respect and excellence," Deukmejian said, adding that overall state support of higher education during his six years as governor has increased by 73 percent, which he said is "nearly 30 percent in real dollars" after adjustments for inflation.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some 300 people rallied on the steps of City Hall Saturday to protest legislation that would ban assault rifles.

The Liberty Coalition Against Crime, which was formed in February, sponsored the rally to call attention to the two bills which will go to both houses of the California Legislature for votes on Monday.

Both bills call for a ban on 52 types of weapons, and have support of several law enforcement leaders and groups.

"We're hoping to carry a message to the Legislature before they vote on this thing Monday," said Manuel Fernández, vice president of the coalition, saying his group was a grass roots organization and not associated with the National Rifle Association.

Steve Hall, a spokesman for the Inland Empire Coalition Against Crime, and a member of the LCAC, said the purpose of the rally was to show that gun control will not solve the problem of crime.

TO CHANGE

Not everyone is cut out to change the world. After all, it takes education, skills and a spare two years. Also a willingness to work. Hard.

This year 3,750 Americans will join the Peace Corps to do just that. They'll do things like build roads, plant forests and crops, teach English, develop small businesses, train community health workers, or even coach basketball. However, what they'll be doing isn't half as important as the fact that they'll be changing a little piece of the world... for the better.

And when they return, these 3,750 Americans will find that experience doing hard work will have another benefit. It's exactly what their next employers are looking for.

So, give the Peace Corps your next two years. And while you're out changing the world, you'll also be making a place in it for yourself.

PEACE CORPS
STILL THE TOUGHEST JOB YOU'LL EVER LOVE.
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, facing congressional leaders Friday announced a showpiece budget compromise to reduce the 1990 federal deficit to under $100 billion without raising taxes.

But the pact puts off major hard decisions, and Democratic leaders suggested it could open the way to tax increases next year.

Bush, flanked by top lawmakers at a White House ceremony, told them he had accomplished "the first such agreement reached ahead of schedule and not framed in the context of a crisis." He called it a "first manageable step in the deficit reduction process."

The plan would enable Bush to say he is holding to his "no new taxes" campaign pledge, while trimming the budget deficit to $94.4 billion, just below the $100 billion limit set by the Gramm-Rudman-budget-balancing law.

Under the agreement, Bush would be forced to accept lower defense spending and more spending for domestic programs than he initially sought, but congressional leaders pledged to abide by Bush's anti-tax stance—at least for one year.

But even as the accord — hammered out all night before administration and congressional negotiators — was announced with great fanfare, key parts of the deal that fell short of spelling out where specific programs should cut to accomplish the savings it trumpeted.

"No one should be deluded into thinking that this is the end of a process," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine. "It is the beginning of a process. Very hard choices lie ahead."

And another leading Democrat, Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bob Bentsen, D-Texas, boasted the Rose Garden session entirely, even though he joined other congressional leaders in attending a preceding White House session with Bush to go over the compromise.

"He declined to go out into the Rose Garden and have his picture taken because he doesn't like the agreement," said Bentsen spokesman Jack Devore.

Bush, his top legislative allies and most congressional leaders were upbeat.

"It is a major step toward a balanced budget," said House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga.

Key elements of the agreement include:

• Total deficit reductions of about $28 billion for the fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1. The projected 1990 deficit of $99.4 billion would fall to $81.3 billion.

• A level of discretionary domestic spending of $181.3 billion, up from the $179.5 billion proposed by Bush, and spending in social programs in which benefit to individuals are mandated by law would be kept at $156.3 billion.

• A decision to adhere, without specifying in what manner, to Bush's call for $55 billion in new tax revenue without enacting what the president considers a tax increase.

In Bush's budget, much of this would come from automatic spending cuts expected to be generated from growth in government revenue.

"In my view, the egalitarian tax, which was advanced by the administration, has two chances of passage by this Congress: slim and none," Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn, told a later news briefing.

But Budget Director Richard Darman said the agreement was "exactly what we've come to hear people say were the kinds of tax cuts and tax increases we would be in here in agreement on a budget resolution before April 15th in the first year of the Bush presidency, the answers would have been 'slim and none.'"

White supremacist group may move to support candidate

GLendale, Calif. (AP) — A white supremacist group is considering moving to Casper, Wyo., to supplant the leadership of a national chapter of Daniel Johnson, a candidate for Congress in Wyoming, according to Republican Dick Cheney.

Cheney contended that the League of Peace Amendment Advocates wouldn't relocate if the Casper City Council approves a resolution next week condemning the group.

"They have not received any support here, and our City Manager Max Trobert told them that," Cheney said.

"Opposition to them has rallied around the issue of minority rights. I have to be rallied around the issue of minority rights," said Cheney, who moved to Casper last month, filed as an independent and appointed Secretary of Defense.

The League of Peace Amendment Advocates, which was advanced by the administration, has two chances of passage by this Congress, according to Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bob Bentsen, D-Texas.

The league moved to Glendale, about 10 miles north of Los Angeles, in early 1987.

Last year, the group proposed moving to Helena, Mont., but met strong opposition there and decided to stay in California.

President demands unity to battle drug war

WASHINGTON (AP) — Colombian President Virgilio Barco says the only way to battle drug trafficking successfully is if all the countries of the Americas join together in the fight.

"Drug production, consumption and traffic is not a problem of one nation, not even of a group of nations," Barco told the American Society of Newspaper Editors on Friday. "It is a universal scourge. ... We cannot expect successful results if Colombia, or for that matter any country, is left to act alone."

Barco said the scourge could not be ended until the United States — which consumes more than half the world's supply of cocaine — reduces its demand for the drug.

Among the summit topics, he said, would be the sharing of police intelligence and satellite information; better interdiction both of drugs and of chemicals needed to make those drugs; better transport and equipment for law enforcement agencies; and more support for programs to develop alternative sources of income in coca-producing areas.

President Bush suggested such a summit during the presidential campaign last year, but there have been no plans set. Bush, who is not meeting with Barco during his trip to Washington, has invited him to visit again in July for an official working visit, the White House announced Thursday.

Barco stressed that his country has suffered extensively, with drug traffickers having directed executions of Guillermo Cano, the outspoken editor of El Espectador, as well as the deaths of another 30 newsmen, a minister of justice, an attorney general, judges and more than 1,300 policemen.

Meanwhile, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh met Friday with the attorney general of Mexico, Enrique Alvarez del Castillo, during which he congratulated Alvarez for the recent efforts by Mexico's new government to crack down on major drug traffickers.

Thornburgh said in a statement that he and Alvarez agreed to establish closer ties in the war on drugs.

Those ties include working on joint operations, increased assistance to the Mexican government in the training of police and drug enforcement agents and the establishment of bilateral working groups "to study proposals for increasing cross-border cooperation, upgrading efforts to seize the assets of major drug traffickers and updating the extradition treaty between our two countries."
