Diets merely slim pocketbooks
by Terrell Sefridj

One of my experiments involved AcuRim appetite suppressants. There were two reasons I failed with these. First, the caffeine content of the capsules was so high that my hands trembled as I swallowed one. Second, and most important, I discovered that I could even eat things that were supposed to inhibit my sensations of hunger. This revelation made me realize that AcuRim is nothing but something rounded in shape that the biological need for fuel.

As a teacher, I have always worked hard to provide fruit year round with no market restrictions. And I was able to do this, in part, because of the “race to the bottom” mentality that characterizes our society. As a result, we are forced to do things that would never be done in industrialized countries.

But how can they complain about being overtaxed? For if we paid our taxes, we would be able to live on less. And instead of spending our money on unnecessary things, we would be able to save money for our future.

In my opinion, it is time to change our priorities. We need to start thinking about what is really important in life. And the most important thing is to be healthy. We need to take better care of ourselves and eat better food.

The only way we can do this is by making better choices. And the best way to make better choices is by reading. So please, read this book and make better choices for yourself.

Thank you.

Wright defender says speaker 'did the only thing he could do'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jim Wright, never comfortable on television, talked directly to the House. He wove detailed, unvarnished stories. He held aloft his famous book. He wiped his brow. He spoke an hour and at the end, almost in a murmur, said: "I could go."

Off in the Republican seats sat Newt Gingrich, modified by Georgia, Wright's nemesis. When the House stood to applaud Wright, Gingrich rose, too, but didn't clap. Beside him, Republican leader Bud Bethel offered a sad shake of his head. He had witnessed a generational change, and he is of the old generation.

Wright's speech was nothing fancy, a detailed point by point rebuttal to the bill personally laid out against him by the ethics committee.

He belittled the $3.25 per-copy royalty received on the book that had been sold in wholesale lots to bookstores. He said his wife, Betty, had earned her $18,000 salary. They had paid for their condominium "per diem," said Wright, "stuffed with" the record.

"There is no vacancy," Foley spokesman Jeff Biggs said late Wednesday, adding that he expected Wright would begin calling his colleagues.

A caucus of the ruling Democratic Party was scheduled for Tuesday to nominate Foley for the speakership.

Jockeying was intense for the other top party positions, which will turn over to Foley because of Wright's resignation and the announcement last week by the third-ranking House Democrat, Lloyd Bentsen, who came over for healing is needed, but bluntly warned that if House Republican leaders were eager to replacement for the defeat earlier

Don't Deal With:
- 12 Month Leases
- House hunting
- Finding roommates
- Subleasing

In avenging the resignation, and that Republicans not try to retaliate for the defeat earlier

And Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., said the House is "like a man who doesn't know where the next blow is coming." He said a time for healing is needed, but bluntly warned that if House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., who filed the original charges against Wright, "wants to engage in open warfare, there will be a Democratic response."

Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., who was involved in Wright's defense, said Wright's "passing gift was a warrant to stop" the vengeance.

Think you’ve reached maturity? Recent study suggests otherwise

By Lynne Hasselman

Adolescence is a time of new identity, rebellion and awakened sexuality — the milestone that marks the transition from child to adult. But a recent psychological study has uncovered some startling new evidence that suggests that adolescence does not end with the onset of the 20s.

The study, conducted on 88 college students from all over the country, found that adolescence actually continues until the ages of 24 to 28 when most young adults experience a dramatic shift in psychological maturity and fully make the separation from their parents. Joan Cronce, director of nursing at the Health Center and mother of four children in their 20s, agrees with the findings. Cronce said that college aged people have to resolve three developmental issues before they are able to resolve their relationships with their parents.

"Young people need to develop mature interpersonal relationships, autonomy and purpose in their lives before they can make the break from their parents," she said. "Everyone develops and grows at different rates and it takes growing through these tasks to reach maturity."

Researchers found that people in their late 20s had far different perspective on their parents than those in their early 20s. They were much better understanding of them as people, and far more likely to agree that "How we interact with our family is an important part of maintaining a healthy relationship."

"When people come home from college during the last few weeks of school, they no longer satisfied with the old rules and there is usually quite a lot of depending on the way to a mature relationship," Cronce said.

Less mature adults rely on their parents to help them with decision-making and are often overwhelmed by feelings of dependency and anger. In contrast, more mature adults have confidence in their decision-making abilities and are able to draw a clear line between their own lives and their parents.

"If you don't know who you are, which most people don't to their late teens, you can't reach emotional maturity, and at age 16 or 17, that just doesn't happen," she said. "Some of these tasks we go through so well, and some we are stymied by, but it is rare that people do not eventually resolve them."

Kathleen White, a psychologist from Boston University who worked on the study with several other psychologists from around the nation, found that in many cases, young adults have a much more mature relationship with their spouses than with their parents.

"People are more compelled to work out their marital conflicts than their relationships with their parents," she said, "than your parents are your parents forever."

Kerry Yamada, director of the Counseling Center, cautions that studies like this one can often lead to overgeneralizations.

"Circumstances the individual finds himself in have much to do with determining maturity as the age factor," he said. "I have seen some freshmen come in at 16 and be more mature than 30-year-olds. I know. Some people have matured far more quickly than others in their own junior high, so variance is greater than shown in studies."

China's chaos

Cal Poly Chinese back protesters, call for democracy

New days have passed since about 1,000 Chinese students from Beijing's Tiananmen Square which set off mass protests throughout China. Although Chinese students at Cal Poly are far removed from their native land, most of them are backing the protesters in Beijing's Tiananmen Square which set off mass protests throughout China.

Some Cal Poly students of Chinese origin have created a list of demands which is expected to be sent to the Chinese government: the government will not lay hands on students or other people protesting; the government will have direct talks with students and meet with them; the resignation of Senior Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping and Premier Li Peng; establish a democratic government.

The protests have done their purpose. They've gotten the attention of the Chinese people and of the world. Now, though, I feel the protesters should step back to figure out what they want the government to do next. We should support the students, but they should not risk their lives. — Alex Lee

Tom, an architecture senior, said: "I support it (the protests)." said Leo Yu, a computer science junior. "I think it's great," added Huey Mach, a senior electrical engineering student, "because with a democratic government, the people can be more creative."

"They have to reform," said Leo Yu, a computer science junior. "I've excited about what's going on right now in China," said Cliff Hsia, a junior computer science major. "People should be able to choose their own lifestyle."

Personal freedom is what Mach sees as the most important goal of the protests. Mach said many of the Chinese farmers who protested with the students feared government retaliation. That is why the farmers went back to work when the government promised to excuse farmers if they returned to work. "A group (of protesters) as large as this shouldn't be afraid of anything," said Danny Fong, a senior mechanical engineering student.

"With personal freedom, people can have their own businesses," said Mach. "Freedom of choice is the most important," Tom said.

Senior computer science major Ada Yue said, "The people don't know what's going on, (because) there is no freedom of news."

"The protests have done their purpose," said Lee. "They've gotten the attention of the Chinese people and of the world. Now, though, I feel the protesters should step back to figure out what they want the government to do next. We should support the students, but they should not risk their lives.'" — Alex Lee

Tom said he thinks the student protest movement overshadowed the visit of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, during which a historic meeting took place as the first Sino-Soviet summit meeting in 30 years.

Tuesday night, protesters erected a new symbol in Tiananmen Square: a recreation of the Statue of Liberty.

"Support from the U.S. has been overwhelming," Mach said about the political statements, medical supplies and money for food and tents sent from the United States.

Stanford University recently held a benefit concert for the protest movement in China. The concert raised $30,000, $15,000 of which has already been sent. In Hong Kong, $2 million was raised to help support protesters.

With the isolation of Cal Poly students, there haven't been special events to draw attention to Chinese students' demonstrations. During yesterday's publicity hour and today, however, Chinese students will staff an information table at the University Union. These students also plan to wear armbands to show solidarity with the protesters.

An open letter, which concerned students can sign by today, will be sent to the Chinese government voicing support and the hope the protests will lead to a more peaceful, open and democratic society.

"Even if there isn't a complete change (made by the protesters), it will change the mentality of the people," said Mach.

A. Senate considers 1990-92 new minors

By Laura Daniels

Two years ago, many new minors were proposed. The dilemma facing the committee (all new minors except for Bailey, who served the previous year) was the lack of a systematic review of minors already in existence.

"Some departments keep really good records on how many students are in the program, (and) how long the program should take to complete ... and other departments don't," Bailey said.

"There were two related core concerns," said Rife. "First, we don't have a way of knowing how many students are pursuing minors which are in place." Secondly, minors must have between 24 and 30 units, half of which are upper division classes. The more students taking minors which aren't allowed within a system, the more students the program can go without a way of knowing how many students are in the program, (and) how long the program should take to complete ... and other departments don't," Bailey said.

"The Curriculum Committee views and recommends curricular proposals," said William Rife, interim associate vice president of academic programs. "(It) doesn't make changes, only recommends."

Tests find AIDS screening can elude

BOSTON (AP) — Some people infected with the AIDS virus may elude screening tests intended to protect blood banks because they produce no telltale antibodies against the lethal virus for years, researchers reported today.

Widely used screening tests cannot see the AIDS virus directly. Instead, they search for antibodies that people produce as part of their natural reaction to infection.

The latest work, however, found that some people produce no antibodies, even though they have been infected for years with HIV, the AIDS virus. Therefore, the AIDS tests are useless against their blood.

In an editorial published with the study in the New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. William A. Haseltine of Boston's Dana Farber Cancer Institute cautioned that the research "raises the sobering possibility that HIV-1 infections may be transmitted by blood and organ donors who are silently infected."

Dr. David T. Imagawa, who directed the study at the University of California, Los Angeles, agreed that people with such latent infections might pass on the virus. He added that homosexuals "should continue to refrain from donating blood."

However, at the American Association of Blood Banks, Dr. Amos Chernoff downplayed the importance of the discovery to the nation's blood banks.

Chernoff noted that the study was conducted in homosexual men who had high-risk sexual practices. If such people gave blood, they probably would also be infected with the hepatitis virus, so their blood would be screened out by other tests.

"The relevance of these data to the blood banks is probably negligible," he said, "but this will be followed to make sure it doesn't have an impact."

Antibody screening of large population groups also is used to gauge how many people are infected with HIV. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control estimates that between 1 million and 1.5 million Americans carry the virus.

The new research "means that the infection could be considerably more widespread than we anticipated," Haseltine said in an interview.

The work shows that HIV can permanently insert itself into the genes of blood cells but stay hidden so the body never attacks it with antibodies. People may make no AIDS antibodies for three years — and perhaps much longer — after they become infected.

While the study raises concern about the effectiveness of current screening tests, there is also a bright side to the finding.

"The good news is that at least some fraction of people, when exposed, seem to control the infection," said Haseltine. "We would guess that as long as it stays in that controlled state, people are going to stay healthy. It gives us a new target to shoot for in terms of therapy."

The research was based on 1,637 homosexual men in Los Angeles. Among them were 133 men who had no AIDS antibodies but continued to engage in anal sex. In test tubes, their white blood cells were stimulated...

"any misleading or fraudulent financial statements shall be considered election violations punishable by a maximum fine of $50 and potential disqualification of ASI officers for any future office." ASI Elections Committee Chair Charley Matthews was unavailable for comment at press time, but said Wednesday night that action probably could not be taken on this matter before fall quarter.

SAUNDERS said she did not tell the Mustang Daily about the reimbursement in an earlier interview about her campaign.

"At the time I was saying as little as possible and just listening to what she (the reporter) had," said Sanders.

Sanders said she did not know whether or not the $381 was the competitive market price, but that Wilson had said that he would have offered the deal to anyone. Earlier Sanders said she believed the $200 she was quoted was a competitive market price.

Huffman said she would have "definitely" worked with the same business if she had known that she could have received the same number and quality of Sanders' posters for $200.

According to ASI bylaws, an officer can be removed "by a two-thirds vote of the total number of Senate (Board) members at the meeting of the Senate (Board) called for that purpose." ASI officers shall be subject to recall upon presentation to the Senate (Board) of a separate petition for that purpose signed by 10 percent of registered students.

According to the ASI Operational code "the petition shall then be referred to a vote by half of the members of the ASI within four weeks. A two-thirds majority of the votes cast shall be required to recall."
Environmental threats apprehended for threats to sabotage Diablo

PHOENIX (AP) — Four members of a radical Arizona environmental group were arrested Wednesday on charges they conspired to sabotage two nuclear power plants, one of them the Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant in San Luis Obispo, the FBI said.

FBI officials in Washington and Phoenix said two men were arrested early Wednesday while trying to use a propane torch to cut down a utility-line pole leading from an electrical substation in Wenden, Ariz. A woman was arrested in Prescott in the alleged plot, the FBI said.

A third man was arrested in Tucson on charges of conspiring with the others to sabotage commercial nuclear power plants in Arizona and the Diablo Canyon plant near San Luis Obispo, Calif., as well as the federal government's Rocky Flats Nuclear Weapons Plant near Golden, Colo.

The FBI said the defendants were members of a radical environmental group calling itself the Evan Mecham Eco-Terrorist International Conspiring.

The organization, which took its name from the former Arizona governor who was impeached last year, has sent communiques to news organizations in the Southwest claiming responsibility for criminal acts, the FBI said.

The FBI notified the operator of the Diablo Canyon plant on Wednesday of the arrests and alleged sabotage plot, said George Sarkesian, spokesman for the Pacific Gas & Electric Co.

"Today was the first we heard of it," Sarkesian said by telephone from the plant outside San Luis Obispo, which lies on the Pacific coast roughly halfway between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

A check on Wednesday of Diablo plant security logs showed that a man, believed to be Davis, drove a vehicle to the plant's front entrance "sometime in late April" and asked if he could hike in the rugged hills of the compound, Sarkesian said.

The flaw was turned away from the gates, located about 7 1/2 miles away from the Diablo's twin reactors, Sarkesian said.

PG&E planned no changes in security procedures because of the arrests. "We have very good security, with visual and electronic surveillance. We've had no problem in the past, and expect none in the future," he said.

The FBI said the arrests resulted from a three-year undercover investigation that began after vandals cut power lines at the Palo Verde nuclear power plant in May 1986. The facility, 30 miles from Phoenix, is operated by Arizona Public Service Co.

Mark L. Davis, 39, and Marc A. Baker, 37, both of Prescott, Ariz., were charged with conspiracy to sabotage a nuclear facility as well as destruction of an energy facility, destruction of property used in interstate commerce and destruction of government property.

Margaret "Peggy" Katherine Millet, 35, of Prescott, was arrested there and charged with the same crimes, the FBI said.

They were arrested while trying to cut down a utility pole on a power line that links an electrical substation with two irrigation pumping stations of the Central Arizona Project.

"A Rankings Isn't Gonna Help You" has plenty of dopey

French Connection ring member arrested in L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A suspected drug ring defendant portrayed in the "French Connection" movie was arrested on Wednesday, 17 years after he disappeared during a heroin deal, an official said, deputising a U.S. marshal.

Stanton Garland, 60, was arrested without incident by federal marshals at the Meadowbrook Motel near the Los Angeles International Airport, said Deputy Marshal Erasto Calif."...

"We interviewed the hospital staff, different people said stories about him, and the father (Garland) was indeed visiting the hospital," Santamaria said.

Garland was unarrested at the time, Santamaria said. "We just approached him and told him he was wanted.

Garland was being held Wednesday night at the House of Correction Picture from the Eastern District in New York, under the subject of an intensive nationwide manhunt since his disappearance in Brooklyn, N.Y. in September 1972, Santamaria said.

At the time of his escape, Garland was trying to offset a $4 million reward ring that allegedly imported heroin from Marseilles, France into the United States.

The ring was depicted in the 1971 film that won five Academy Awards, and a Best Actor Oscar for Gene Hackman, who played the New York City detective "Popeye" Doyle.

U.S. federal marshals who monitored telephone calls to Garland's house in Los Angeles said many were being directed to a "legal" address in Beverly Hills, Los Angeles-based deputies determined.

Los Angeles County sheriff's Lt. Rainer said Garland was in fact Stanton's son and began a stakeout, San

"We've brought a topographical Picture on a request for Garland's extradition to New York, Santamaria said.

Los Angeles (AP) — Four young “skinnies” accused of attacking an Iranian couple were mistaken for Jews pleaded innocent Wednesday to felony assault and civil rights charges. The defendants, who appeared subdued during their brief Municipal Court hearing in suburban Pomona, were released pending a hearing Friday on a request to reduce their $50,000 bail.

In the Sunday attack in the Los Angeles suburb of La Verne, witnesses said a jackbooted quartet confronted a couple carrying a baby in a grocery store parking lot, hurling anti-Semitic insults and then punching and kicking their victims. A black man who came to the couple’s aid was also attacked, police said.

In unrelated Los Angeles-area incidents, several skinheads congregated outside Disneyland Anaheim Wednesday under the watchful eye of police, and swastikas and Nazi slogans were found spray-painted on a Simi Valley synagogue.

About half a dozen skinheads who were turned away from the Disneyland parking lot congregated outside the park, said police Sgt. Jack Jansen. A flyer sent to a radio station invited people to “white workers’ day” at the park.

In another incident, anti-Semitic spray-painting on the wall and storage shed of Temple Ner Tamid was discovered Tuesday, said Simi Valley police.

The wall and storage shed were desecrated with hate phrases and references to Hitler, such as “Hitler was great,” and several swastikas, police said.

“I’m amazed that this has happened,” said Ruthie Cooper, a temple member. “If it’s teenagers, then parents aren’t telling them what happened in history. If they’re Skinheads, they’re demented.”

Sarah Karamas, the temple secretary who discovered the graffiti, said the temple was broken into and defaced with swastikas about 10 years ago at its former location on Los Angeles Avenue. It is the first such incident since the Temple Ner Tamid moved to its new building last June on Appleton Road.

In the La Verne attack, the assailants, who sported the close-cropped hair and black clothes favored by white supremacist “skinheads,” were pulling baseball hats from their car when officers arrived.

Arrested were Scott Wilson, 28, of West Covina; Timothy Zaal, 25, of Glendora; William R. Killackey, 21, of Yorba Linda and his 19-year-old sister, Amy Killackey, of West Covina.

Each was charged with one count of assault with a deadly weapon — fists and bashed feet — and two counts of interfering with the civil rights of another. Both charges are felonies.

The FBI is investigating for possible federal civil rights violations, said bureau spokesman Jim Neilon.
