CANDIDATES CHAIRMAN OF BOARD ELECT'S CAMPAIGN FINANCES

$381 UNREPORTED RECEIPT FOR PRINTING

The Ad Hoc Committee has concluded that Sanders didn't violate election rules.

Six hundred dollars may seam excessive to some college students, but to ASI candidates it's just part of the campaign game.

BILLS MAY OVERFLOW AS SLO SEWER IS REPAIRED

By Ron Espelo

Cal Poly students and San Luis Obispo tenants may face an increase in their water bills come 1992, possibly a 45 percent jump by 1992.

As a result, students will find that many apartment complexes and houses in the city may increase their monthly rents.

A plan was endorsed Monday by the San Luis Obispo City Council to spend $26 million to improve its outdated sewage treatment plant.

City policy states that expenses must be paid for by sewer bills, which means city residents face huge increases in the next several years.

According to an article in the Tribune, the city would have to pay approximately $740 for sewage improvements, $6 million would be spent on renovating its sewer system.

A federal crackdown on schools with high student loan default rates will not affect Cal Poly's default rate, according to a financial aid official.

The federal government will be releasing proposals for punitive and punitive measures for schools with default rates of 40 percent or more.

Mary Ann Hinkle, the California Polytechnic State University's Student Loan Aid Office, said Cal Poly's default rate would not be affected by the proposed measures.

"This is really going to have no affect on us at all, because they're only targeting people that have a default rate of 60 percent," she said. "(But) 40 to 60 percent (schools) have some measures that they're going to be taking. With our (rate) at under 10 percent, it isn't going to have an affect on us.

Cal Poly's default rate is 8 percent, and Hinkle attributes this low figure to the high level of employment of Cal Poly graduates.

"Our (low) default rate is more than likely because our students are employed. Most Cal Poly students that graduate from here, get work basically in the area, good paying jobs, and they are able to pay their loans back," said Hinkle.

The types of schools that are being targeted by these proposals are predominantly trade and vocational schools.

"The problem happens when the trade school student or the community college student are not able to be successful in the field they have chosen," Hinkle said. "(They're) dropped out of their program and they haven't completed their studies.

Hinkle said another reason for high default rates at these schools is the economic backgrounds of their students.

"We know that they (the schools) are the highest defaults, but they get the poorest students -- the ones that can't repay their loans," Hinkle said. "(The proposed measures) were put together by Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos, who will submit them to Congress as a way of easing the default problem.

Under Cavazos' proposal, schools with rates higher than 60 percent would be limited, suspended or terminated from participation in the federal student loan program. Those schools between 40 and 60 percent will have to reduce their rate by 1 percent a year to avoid these punitive measures.

Our (low) default rate is more than likely because our students are employed. Most Cal Poly students that graduate from here, get work usually in fairly good paying jobs, and they are able to pay their loans back.

Chinese aren't only who suffer

Editor — The young woman standing at the door of the room that housed the forum concerning China's problems offered me an armband. It was white with red Chinese characters on it. I refused.

I've come to understand the armband is worn as a symbol of solidarity with the 500,000, possible thousands of students who were murdered by the Chinese military last weekend. I refused the armband because the girl just assumed that since I was a student I would just blindly join their cause. She did not even allow me to see what was going on in the room before offering the armband.

This situation got me thinking:

If you neglected the thousands of students who were marching in the streets of China, you aren't suffering enough to be concerned about them. You need to be concerned about them because the people of China aren't concerned about them.

Letters to the Editor

Editor — After attending Wednesday night's ceremony to honor the students in Beijing, I was sincerely touched by the participation and the compassion expressed. However, as a black student (and a human being), I had to wonder if we truly understood the magnitude of what happened.

Reporters dig dirt, dog officials

Journals are lonely people. They spend their days lurking under rocks, looking for fezid scraps of corruption. When they uncover a rotting mess, they are often blamed for the stench.

There is little glory in the job. Hours are long and hard, pay is scarce and friends are few. Journals are sustained only by their pride in their work: being keen watchdogs in finding Truth, whatever it may be.

It is this watchdog function of the press that makes readers and public officials uncomfortable. They accuse reporters of violating privacy, seeking sensational headlines and printing only bad news. A recent letter to the Mustang Daily read, "I'm sure you're all looking forward to getting 'real jobs' in the 'real world.' Grow up and get concerned about real issues."

This letter came after an investigation by the Daily turned up controversy in Asian campaigning spending.

The letter outlined the misunderstanding facing student newspapers, especially in light of recent "real issues." Richard Nixon likely would have served another term as president if Woodward and Bernstein hadn't uncovered the Watergate affair.

Oliver North would still be funneling funds to the Contras. Jim Wright would still be selling his books and leading the House on the side.

Mustang Daily reporters try to tell Cal Poly students what they need to know — whether they want to know it or not — even if it means angering ASI or the Greeks or the Academic Senate or President Baker.

And so journalists are a lonely bunch. They must be autonomous. They take pride in remaining above influence. They cannot be bought.

human rights including freedom of speech. This is advocated in both the United States and Chinese constitutions... The students are the future of China."

Political science professor Carl Lurin brought his six year old son Lawren to the vigil. "I think it's a nice turnout because there must be several hundred students here and it's dead week," said Lurin. "I'm heartened by it."

When asked why he was at the event Lawren said, "Because people died yesterday, I feel very sad."

Other letters that were read at the vigil included sentiments from Congressman Leon Panetta, Assemblyman Eric Seastrand.

A wreath of flowers was placed at the speakers podium. Father Vincent Walsh, Catholic chaplin for Cal Poly and Cuesta said, "The wreath made up of flowers is a reminder of lives that have come and gone through violence and that of lives that remain."

A moment of silence was recognized, followed by a Chinese tradition of bowing three times to commemorate the dead.

The hundreds of people moved closer together to form a tight circle in which they lit candles and sang, "We Shall Overcome."

"May you go out of this plaza with hope and good wishes for the people across the ocean from us," said Tom as the ceremony closed.

Students didn't leave the Union at this point. Instead they formed an even larger circle encompassing the entire Union and chanted phrases such as "Long live democracy," "Long live human rights" and "Free China now!"

I choose to aid every walk of life with the exception of South Africa (even going so far as to support our most powerful adversary, the USSR).

I'm appalled by the swiftness of our government/media to rush to the aid of almost any and every crisis, while continually sweeping the horrors of the situation in South Africa under a rug. I would like to pose just two questions in regard to our government/media:

• Why has President Bush been so quick to impose policy concerning China, while essentially ignoring the needs of South Africa?

• Why are we, as Americans, so selective in our compassion and support of our fellow human beings around the world?

As a student community, I hope we can answer these and other questions in our minds and hearts. However, my ultimate hope is that we will continue to support the students of Beijing and more strongly advocate reform policies concerning South Africa. Peace!

Daily is racist, reader charges

Editor — Once again the Mustang Daily has done another great job in the exploitation of black students. Referring to the article about violence at U.C. Davis’ Black Family Day (“Fights at Davis prompt close of ‘Family Day,’” May 22), the paper neglected to cover the positive events that occurred that day. Black Family Day is a celebration of black achievement and also the reunion of the strongest bond to the black race, the family. Why is it that every time blacks do something negative, it’s time to blow it up and take up the whole front page so that every red-blooded American can shake their heads and say, “I told you them coloreds were savages.”

While every day, blacks everywhere are doing outstanding achievements to make this a better place for everyone. The only place you can find room to print our achievements is on page 99 by the comics section.

Great American melting pot isn’t

Editor — Since the beginning of this great country, we have done ourselves a grave injustice. The injustice of which is one of miseducation, or lack thereof. An example of this is the term “The Great American Melting Pot.” Culture allows us to relate and is a necessary ingredient of a pot. But in today’s educational institutions, melting is an issue that is rarely taken seriously. Culture is the base which builds a melting pot. But in today’s educational institutions, melting is an issue that is rarely taken seriously.

Where to go for great ice cream? Here's the scoop!

Okay, so school's almost out, and for you poor saps who have to stick around and take summer classes instead of going on some exotic world trip, don't despair. It's not that bad. We, here at the Mustang Daily have decided to help you out and try to make your summer a rip-ragin' good time. You already know about the bars. So second most important in summer fun is, of course, ice cream.

Ice cream? "Grow up," you say. "Ice cream is a confection reserved mainly for kids. We go to college," you say. "We don't worry about such trivial matters. We are the frozen yogurt generation." Ah, this might be true, but ice cream is still a treasured treat among young and old alike. Remember the days when you used to meet your sweetie at the local ice cream parlor for a root beer float with two straws? No? Well, I don't remember either, but I'm sure it happened. At any rate...

We've decided to guide the true ice cream lovers through the world of the best ice cream available in San Luis Obispo. At first we wanted to concentrate on the shops that made their own ice cream, but further investigation revealed there was only two of them. So, we concentrated on those and make reference to the others. Our recommendation is that you go out and conduct your own taste test. Ice cream is much better if you eat it yourself, rather than listen to others who have experienced the tasting adventure.

The official Mustang Daily taste-testers were Tara Gianimalo (opinion page editor and self-proclaimed chocoholic), Rob Lorentz (the sports editor who hates bananas, but adores ice cream) and me (a lowly reporter). Our judgments were based on one simple principle: does it taste good? Our categories were: best vanilla, best chocolate, best banana split, most outrageous flavors, and overall parlor atmosphere.

And the competitors are:

- SLO Maid: Located at 728 Higuera. The official SLO Maid Ice Cream, located at 728 Higuera. Among their exotic flavors included Macadamia Nut, Chocolate Eclair and Mandarin Chocolate (an orangy-chocolate) was great, we all decided. Among their borderline weird flavors was Apple Pie (gives a new meaning to pie a la mode), and carrot cake. And we're still wondering exactly what "Bit Swt Cho Nug" is. The atmosphere is clean and worth stopping in after a movie (Fremont and Mission theaters are nearby). A single (big) scoop is $1.50. Banana Splits are $3.65. Debbie's also moonlights as a deli.

- Burndard's: If you're in Arroyo Grande or Grover City, stop in. Monstor scoops and extra-tasty ice cream has earned it numerous awards, including the recent New Times Best Ice Cream Award. It's worth the drive.

- The Cone Ranger: Located in the Madonna Shopping Center across from Pizza Hut. They serve Dreyer's ice cream, as well as a plethora of deli items and frozen yogurt.

- Baskin Robbins: A longtime favorite. They think they've exceeded 31 flavors a while ago. My personal favorite is Caramel Chocolate Crunch.

- Julian's: As well as coffee-stuff, they've got a full line of ice cream and other frozen treats.

And of course...

If you don't want to go out to eat ice cream, hit the Campus Store and pick up a half gallon of Cal Poly's own. Numerous flavors are available and could be enjoyed alone or in the company of another. I guess times haven't changed that much.

Happy summer, and happy eating!

“We do what we have to do, if we get charged more, I have no choice but to pass it down to the tenants.”

“it sounds ridiculous if bill·

At the Valencia Apartments, where price increases are set in full on an individual contract, manager Mark Kennedy said he couldn’t check that all his tenants con­

An ordinance for the water and sewer rates may be drafted by the city staff for the council to vote on after the hearing has been held.

The city staff said the increase would pay for water related projects, such as drilling wells, checking water and replacing the 100-year-old water pipes beneath the city streets.

SPENDING

Ellen Sanders, ASI vice president-elect, said she started saving back in September in order to run in this spring's election. "Six hundred dollars is too minimal to spend," she said.

"If you priced out what the price of doing things is, just pure photo copies ... everything is so expensive." Teresa Huffman, defeated candidate for ASI vice president, stressed the importance of a strict budget in her campaign. She also agreed that in order to compete, a candidate cannot expect to save money here and there. "You can't do that. Especially when you know you're running against someone who's going to spend all of it."

Huffman's parents loaned her the money to run. She said she will be spending her summer working to pay them back.

Is the $600 figure a barrier for some students who would like to run for the offices? Sam Lurin, adviser to this year's election committee, said no. "I really doubt that the money is the reason people don't run."

"In the three or four years I've been here no one has come to me and said, 'Gee, I don't have the money but I'd sure like to run.'" Lurin agreed that campaigns are costly.

"If you're going to rely heavily on printing materials they have to look fairly good," she said. "I don't know if printing materials are the most effective way to get votes."

Roger Conway, ASI executive director, said money is not the only factor that is important in a successful campaign. "Money is certainly a contributing factor. But money alone is not going to get the votes."

Experience, creativity and creativity are key components. Conway said. "We're really at a point in our society where people need to re-examine a political stance."

UCE approves lease pact for credit union

By Tracy C. Fowler

The University Union Executive Committee approved a lease agreement for an on-campus credit union Wednesday night.

The agreement must now be approved by the Chancellor's Office in Long Beach and the credit union's board of directors. If the agreement is approved, Sesloc, a federal credit union, will begin renovations in rooms 103 and 104 of the University Union this summer.

The credit union, which is expected to open its doors for business this October, will accommodate all of the ASI and UU's checking, said David DeJong, chairman of the Credit Union Steering Committee.

The accounts were previously handled by the Foundation, which acted as middle man between the organizations and a bank, DeJong said. The credit union will be more convenient because it will eliminate the middleman role, and all transactions can be handled on campus.

Another advantage to Sesloc, said DeJong, is that ASI will be able to keep more than $100,000 in its accounts and still be insured.

"The credit union is a non-profit corporation," said DeJong. "It's a mutual benefit deal."

Students will be able to open checking and savings accounts, said DeJong. Sesloc will offer credit cards, automatic-teller machines, and 5.25 percent interest on checking accounts with no per check charge or ATM charge, he said.

Previously, only Cal Poly faculty and staff have been able to have accounts with Sesloc, said DeJong, so "student accounts are a radical move for them."

Disabled Student Services, which is currently located at the planned Sesloc site, will move upstairis to the ASI Business Office. The ASI Business Office will move to the Cal Poly Foundation office. The Foundation office will move to the new Foundation building, near the fire station.

Sesloc will spend an estimated $85,000 for renovations of the new location, and $2,100 annually for rent.

The committee looked into Sanders' ethics and the procedure she used in reporting her finances, which were in question.

"We are going to work the utmost ethics," said Fitzpatrick. "We investigated the questions that were raised by students."

A large number of students attended Wednesday's meeting and several spoke under open forum about the issue of Sanders' campaign finances.

Agricultural sciences junior Mary Jo Gonzales read a letter, signed by 54 students asking for a "formal external investigation, excluding ASI officers, directors, and management of Ms. Sanders campaign finances to decide whether improprieties such as fraud, perjury, distortion of fact is apparent."

The letter also requested that an interim vice president (chairman of the board) be selected until the findings of the investigation can be determined.

Gonzales, who is a member of the University Union Ad Hoc Committee, said that she would be starting to collect students' signatures in response to the possible campaign improprieties.

According to the ASI Codes, "officers shall be subject to recall upon presentation to the senate (board of a separate petition for that purpose signed by 10 percent of registered students)."

Gonzales said she will be seeking 900 signatures within the next two weeks.

Other speakers under open forum included Pete Sauerborn, a past student senator, Matt Wisby, a student senator from School of Architecture and Environmental Design, and Daron Spears, one of Sanders' campaign managers. They all spoke in support of Sanders and said they would not change her campaign.

Spears also said that from the beginning Sanders and her campaign managers "have run a very clean campaign."

In other business, the board voted to postpone, until the first board meeting of fall quarter, the approval of Bill 89-04, which would grant the alcohol control committee a one-year moratorium.

"We are going to use the summer to solidify the legal basis of the bill ... none of the bill thus far has been found to be illegal," said Tom Bongi, ASI Greek Relations.

not always though, because "we've had them ripped off too," he said.

Some other ways students can protect themselves from break-ins are: never lock the car with the keys in the ignition; closing the windows; and not leaving anything of value in sight. And for on campus students, don't leave the car for a long period of time without checking up on it.
Health Center to end psychiatric care in July

By Kathryn Brunello

The mental health division of the campus Health Center will discontinue services beginning July 1, as a result of a division-wide student affairs budget cut.

"Mental health is not among our duties," said Dr. James Nash, director of the Health Center. "It is not our basic function to provide mental health care, and of all our services, we had to cut this one out... there wasn't a service we didn't consider."

The Counseling Center is separate from the Health Center and equipped with psychologists and a psychiatric nurse to handle mental health issues.

"We will probably see a load-up in our traffic," said Kerry Yamada, director of the Counseling Center.

Although Yamada expects an increase in services sought at the Counseling Center, no increases in staffing or facilities have been indicated.

Despite the discontinuation of the mental health division at the Health Center, there will only be a loss of one psychiatric nurse, Rita Rich, from the Health Center. Rich presently sees approximately seven to nine students a day plus group counseling.

"She's the type of person you like and trust on sight," said Nash. The Counseling Center will continue with group sessions on anorexia nervosa and bulimia that are presently led by Rich.

Hazel Scott, dean of Student Affairs, has told Rich that "nothing is definitive." Rich plans on returning to Cal Poly in the fall and will make some career goal decisions at that time.

If mental health is discontinued as planned, the administration plans to transfer Rich to the Triage department of the Health Center.

"I feel I have developed an expertise in this area," said Rich. "I am really saddened that this is happening. I believe there is a link between psychological, emotional and physical well-being of a student, and the Health Center has created an atmosphere for students to feel comfortable in utilizing this service."

"Of the possibilities we had to choose from (in terms of budget cuts), this option will affect the fewest people," said Nash. There is a slight possibility that this discontinuation of services will not be approved by President Warren Baker. But Nash said because they have worked closely with the dean and no other options are left except for the possibility of laying off workers, the end of the mental health division will take place July 1.

Mental health is not among our duties. It is not our basic function to provide mental health care, and of all our services, we had to cut this one out.

— Dr. James Nash

The Counseling Center is also really good at picking up on these things and referring students in need of help to the proper people."

Poly players Wilson, Crowe picked in draft

By Rob Lorenz
Sports Editor

The amateur baseball draft began on Monday, and as expected, Ben McDonald of LSU was the first player chosen. But he most certainly wasn't the only player chosen.

After three days of waiting, two Cal Poly baseball players heard from professional baseball teams that had drafted them. Pitcher Dave Wilson, a junior, was drafted by the Detroit Tigers in the 31st round. Shortstop Ron Crowe, a senior, was drafted by the Mixed Giants from the San Francisco Giants.

“I was surprised to go a lot higher,” said Wilson. “But I strained my arm, so I wasn’t 100 percent at the end of the year. I was supposed to go somewhere.”

Wilson attributed his late-season arm trouble to fatigue.

“I was throwin’ a hell of a lot this year,” he said. “I wasn’t poppin’ the ball. I was about 90 percent at the end, but I’m back now. I’ve had about a week and a half rest since the series, and I’m ready to go.”

Wilson has had scouts at every game he has pitched this year, and if he likes what they offer, he can sign. They may come up with something he likes a week before school starts. He told them then that if he doesn’t get what he wants right now, he should wait.

Wilson has already turned down the Tigers’ first offer, a luxury he can afford because he can always come back to school.

“They made me an offer and I turned it down,” said Wilson. “It wasn’t worth leaving. I told them what I wanted, and if I don’t get it, I’ll come back for my senior year.”

Wilson and Crowe to be drafted, and that he had also expected three other players to get looks. "Other than those two guys, I expected (outfielder Rich) Shepperd, (pitcher Kevin) Paxton, and (pitcher Kirk) Chura to get drafted," he said. "I thought they could have been drafted, but they may get a chance as a free agent." McFarland said that none of the five had ever been drafted before. A player can be drafted straight out of high school, but if he opts for a four-year college instead of professional baseball, he may not be drafted until he turns 21 or completes his junior year.

"Wilson can negotiate, because he’s only a junior," said McFarland. "He can come back for his senior year or if he likes what they offer, he can sign. They may come up with something he likes a week before school starts in the fall. I told him that if he doesn’t get what he wants right now, he should wait."

Wilson has had scouts at every game he has pitched this year, according to McFarland.

"He didn’t pitch well the last three weeks of the season," said McFarland. "I think that might have dropped him a few rounds." Cal Poly head coach Steve McFarland said that he had expected Wilson and Crowe to be drafted, and that he had also expected three other players to get looks. "Other than those two guys, I expected (outfielder Rich) Shepperd, (pitcher Kevin) Paxton, and (pitcher Kirk) Chura to get drafted," he said. "I thought they could have been drafted, but they may get a chance as a free agent."

Wilson and Crowe will get free agent offers. If they do sign, it is likely that they will play in a summer rookie league, where a majority of the players will be recently drafted or signed college students like themselves. But it is likely that they will all sign sooner or later.

"The publicity we’ve gotten from the national championship will definitely help their chances," said McFarland.

Students with bicycles to use a U-lock, remove the front wheel, if it is a quick-release one, and lock that, along with the bicycle frame to the rack.

"Students should engrave their driver's license on the bike, and register it with Public Safety," Schumacher said. "Should students have their bikes stolen, know their serial number, and have it registered with us, it would make our process of logging it on our computer easier."

Free bicycle licensing is available to students on campus, courtesy of Public Safety, and Sergeant Schumacher encouraged all students to take advantage of the service.

Soviet mob tries to seize arms

Death toll rises to 71 in 5-day Uzbek, Meskhi Turk clash

MOSCOW (AP) — Thousands of rioters in Uzbekistan attacked government offices and a police station in a bid to seize firearms, and the death toll in the five-day rampage rose to at least 71, official media said Thursday.

"Corpses are being found in gutted houses and the wounded are dying in hospitals," Uzbek Premier Gairat Kadyrov told the government newspaper Izvestia. At least 71 people had been killed and the figure was likely to continue climbing, he said.

The violence began June 3 with fighting between ethnic Uzbeks and the Meskhi Turk minority, forcibly resettled in the Fergana Valley of Uzbekistan by Stalin in 1944. Oficials have not been able to contain it despite evacuating more than 10,000 of the Meskhi minority and sending in 9,000 Interior Ministry soldiers.

The bloodshed in eastern Uzbekistan was the latest in a series of violent clashes that have embroiled the southern rim of the Soviet Union for more than a year.

Scores of people have been killed in the Caucasus republics of Georgia, Armenia and Azerbaijan, but the violence has spread recently to Turkmenia and Uzbekistan in Central Asia.

The Tass news agency said the latest spark was Wednesday in Kokand when "thousands of people excited by alcohol, drugs...stormed the city police department to seize firearms."

At the same time a crowd of 500 to 600 attacked a local Interior Ministry transportation office, it said.

The attacks failed, but a preliminary count indicated six people were killed. More than 90, including soldiers, were injured. Sixty-five houses and six offices were burned down, it said.

"More houses are burning," Tass added.

Tass said the soldiers were given orders to shoot to protect themselves, but so far had avoided opening fire.

"The crowds of attackers have been dispersed and most active rioters have been detained," it said.

Official Radio Moscow said more than 600 people have been hurt and more than 400 suspects in the ethnic violence have been arrested.

The official radio said that shooting and arson attempts continued Wednesday night in the regional center of Fergana, with a population of more than 200,000. More than 400 houses, most of them belonging to Meskhi Turkmens, had been burned.

The official reports did not specify which ethnic group was responsible for the attacks in Kokand, but it was likely Uzbek because the Meskis have been the victims of most of the violence and many of them already have been evacuated.

Finals Week June 12-16

Shooting a falcon, Martin MacDonell, 32, sentenced to three years in state prison for his shotgun after a large, hawk-like bird killed one of his racing pigeons.

A rare peregrine falcon was shot to death by a racing pigeon fancier who thought the powerful bird killed one of his collection.

"I think he felt real bad," Capt. Mike Wade of the state Department of Fish and Game said of Martin MacDonell, 32.

Wade confiscated MacDonell's shotgun as evidence on Wednesday after it was knocked from a tree by shotgun pellets early Tuesday evening.

MacDonell told Wade he went for his shotgun after a large, hawk-like bird killed one of his racing pigeons.

The peregrine falcon nearly became extinct in the United States in the 1960s and '70s when ingested residue of the now-banned insecticide DDT caused the bird to lay eggs with shells so thin that few produced chicks. The bird was placed on the federal endangered-species list in 1973.

She said she suddenly realized she was giving birth to her first son, and left the toilet "screaming with pain" on the bathroom floor as she went for the telephone to call a drug dealer to bring her more coke.

Four hours later, she delivered the other twin, dead. Finally, weak from loss of blood, she called an ambulance three hours later. On the way to the hospital, she told the attendants about the births.

"She seriously sabotaged the chances of normal birth and survival of healthy twins," it was testified.

Deputy District Attorney Ken Burr said Stewart's conduct reflected a callous disregard for the safety and well-being of the children developing inside her.

"This is really a shock for us bird lovers," said Eric Germon of the wildlife-rescue volunteers who tried to save the falcon.

In court documents, Stewart said she had been smoking cocaine for several days before the births, describing herself as "on fire."

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A judge reluctantly placed a crack addict on probation Thursday for her role in the deaths of her premature twin sons, whom she delivered and abandoned during a cocaine binge.

"Let's put it where it is," Alameda County Superior Court Judge Stanley Golde growled at 37-year-old Deborah Stewart, appearing for sentencing Wednesday after her conviction for involuntary manslaughter.

"Your use of cocaine," he said, "contributed to the untimely births and resulting deaths of your children." And he warned the former legal secretary, who has used drugs since the age of 18, that one slip during her probationary period and he would send her to prison.

The judge said he was following the recommendations of the state Department of Corrections evaluation of Stewart, adding ruefully, "But I'm holding my breath."

Conditions of probation include regular drug testing and continued drug rehabilitation counseling. Golde warned Stewart that if she failed to meet the requirements, "just once, you're headed for three years in state prison."

Stewart, who was originally charged with two counts of murder, in a deal with prosecutors pleaded guilty to one count of involuntary manslaughter in the Feb. 11, 1988 deaths. In court documents, Stewart said she had been smoking cocaine for several days before the births, describing herself as "on fire."

The offense, a misdemeanor, carried a maximum penalty of a $2,000 fine and a year in county jail. The year-old female falcon died of internal bleeding several hours after it was knocked from a tree by shotgun pellets early Tuesday evening.
