SAS directors respond to harassment charges

Accused say complaints were filed for woman's 'own benefit'

By Steve Harmon

Director of Student Academic Services Armando Pezo-Silva and SAS Director of Developmental Outreach Everardo Martinez said the sexual harassment allegations listed in a complaint by a former subordinate are false.

"I hope you understand the incredible human pain caused by something that is not true," Pezo-Silva said.

Wendy Reynoso, a former SAS academic adviser of liberal arts students from 1980-89, filed a complaint in May accusing the two men of sexual harassment. Cal Poly investigated and concluded none had occurred.

Reynoso appealed the university's findings and said it had not conducted an adequate investigation or used pertinent testimony in its conclusion.

The process is now at the Chancellor's office and is awaiting a decision within the next few weeks.

Martinez said the complaint was filed for personal reasons. "She's doing it for her own benefit," he said.

"The only incident listed in the original complaint document involving me was an incident in 1986 at Woodstock's Pizza," Martinez said. "It's 100 percent fictitious."

Martinez said Reynoso's sexual harassment complaint was filed in retaliation for a memo dated April 20, 1989, that told Reynoso her job requirements.

"It said 'failure to perform your duties in this capacity may result in disciplinary personnel action.'"

Three former SAS workers have supported Reynoso in her complaints, giving dates and details of events of sexual harassment by the two men.

Martinez said not one of the six allegations of sexual harassment made by Reynoso is true.

"It is very unfair for me, for my wife and for my family'

See SAS, page 3

Mayoral Race

• Allen Settle — "What we have in this community is a necessity for the university and the community to work together in a joint effort on housing accommodations. This campus has 5,000 acres and what I'm proposing to you tonight is work ing with the (California State University) Board of Trustees directly to provide group housing, married student housing, Greek Row and lease agreements associated with this campus."

• Ron Dunin — "I hope to ask (Cal Poly President Warren) Baker to form a task force which would study the needs of the students for the housing, the style in which they would prefer to live. The other task force in the community, the building industry, will address the needs of housing in the city including the students so the market will be answerable to the need and not driven by the demand of the outside world."
I was walking through Sacramento's Capitol Park a couple of months ago when a man approached me and asked for my spare change. I gave him some money and asked him why he was going to do with it. He told me he was going to buy beer. Then he said he was kidding. He said he was hungry.

I asked him if he had a job. He said no, and added that a rowdy group of bikers (every time they tried to get a job he had to show his card. He pulled it out of his pocket). The said that he had been in prison. He explained that he killed a man. I got butterflies in my stomach. He said he killed the man who raped his girlfriend. He said he had done this fair time in prison, but employers don't want to believe it. Now he travels the state in boxcars and provides only one picture of California's homeless.

There are no concrete statistics on the numbers of homeless in the state — the very nature of homelessness makes it difficult to collect data. But officials estimate there could be up to 200,000 California residents without homes.

The circumstances surrounding a person's homelessness are as varied as the people in this world. But one thing is certain — the homelessness touch each of us in some form or another — maybe in ways you never thought.

My mom teaches 8- and 9-year-old elementary school children in Bakersfield. A couple of years ago, at a school where she used to work, more than half of her pupils would walk to school in 90-degree weather with no jackets and no food in their stom­achs. Most would walk to school via Bakersfield's "redlight district" across the school, the majority would walk along that same busy street to the church across the street, called home.

The stereotypes of the homeless are changing. No longer are they just the drug addicts, the morally sick, single women and children. They remain the fastest-growing segments of the homeless population. A Department of Education study, about 25,000 homeless, school-age children have been identified in shelters and classrooms across the nation.

The Sacramento Bee found 39-year-old Al Fultz at the Transition House shelter in Los Angeles.

"If I just met you and told you I was homeless, you wouldn't know I was a high school All-American football player," Fultz claimed. "You see, I was a high school All-American football player." Fultz claimed. "You see, I was a high school All-American football player."

"I met John Groopie one morning in Sunshine Donuts. I'm sure you've seen him around San Luis Obispo; he moved here from Santa Cruz about three years ago. He told me he likes San Luis Obispo — especially the students. He also says the students don't have to stick to a church around town in order to get food.

Although his clothes were disheveled and dirty, John did not reflect the typical stereotype of a homeless person. His intelligence impressed me. He was sharp, really sharp. He was, in a way, like you and me.

When mom and dad cut the financial umbilical cord or we no longer qualify for student financial aid, we will be left alone to sink or swim. Keep in mind the faces of California's homeless are many, varied and changing. And someday, we could be one of them.

Christine Kohn is the INSIGHT editor.
Architecture students design Mexican clinic

Year-long project in Puerto Vallarta started by Rotary
By Karen Kendzor
Staff Writer
Senior architecture students Ted Luthin and Chris Kerins opened locked doors and rolled out the red carpet for students to enter. According to Kerins, the door would open locked doors and rolled out the red carpet for students to enter.

The project was started several years ago by the Rotary Club of Puerto Vallarta. It was created to establish a short-term educational program for architecture students, especially those who are polio victims, said Luthin. Puerto Vallarta, which has 250,000 people, has only four polio patients in small clinic, he said.

"They do have vaccines there, but people in rural areas don't know about them," said Luthin. "The clinic hopefully will give the people in the rural areas a place where they can come." The project was initiated as a fourth-year design class semester project with 16 students participating, said Luthin. It developed into a contest, with the winner sponsored by Rotary to Mexico to show their work.

Luthin won first for his design and Kerins took second. Three months later they were asked by the Rotary Club to work as a team and come up with a completely different design adapted to Mexican-style architecture, said Luthin.

"We took some of the angularity we had in our design and a lot more of the modularity of Ted's," said Kerins. Puerto Vallarta uses a lot of small scale domes and towers, said Luthin. "It's almost Santa Barbara-like except Santa Barabara uses a flat-topped roof, kind of a silo roof, and then dines it," he said.

Participants in architecture also wrote letters to local authorities, said Luthin. "We brought in some elements of style, the Spanish style, that we know of that isn't theirs," said Luthin. "Their style is much more straight and flat, with big white walls. We tended to put things into those big white walls."

Luthin said the hardest thing to adapt to was the communication barriers. All the drawings were done in Spanish and in the metric system.

"We went there to design it the way they would design it," said Luthin.

Kerins found the people to have very nonchalant attitudes about making appointments. That same nonchalance was found in their lack of rules and regulations, said Kerins. They didn't have 1 percent of the codes that we have here in California," he said.

The hospitality of the families that they stayed with, however, was incredible, said Luthin. "Families almost fought for who would have us staying with them," he added. Kerins added that they were impressed with the standard of living.

"We expected to be sleeping on a dirt floor and lucky to have a mattress when we got off the plane," said Luthin.

\[SEE CLINIC, page 5\]
Herald Examiner prints last issue; most newsstands empty by dawn

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The last edition of the once powerful Los Angeles Herald Examiner hit the streets Thursday, but only briefly, as souvenir seekers cleaned out most newsstands shortly after dawn.

Entrepreneurs were reported to be getting as much as $20 a copy for the papers with the bold "SO LONG, L.A." headline.

"Some kid on fraternity row dragged down the Herald truck when it got here this morning and bought six bundles (of 50 papers each)," said Gary Pine at the sports information office at the University of Southern California.

"The last we heard, he'd sold three bundles — at $20 a copy."

At a Herald Examiner building downtown, crowds jammed a lobby to buy papers.

Some, like Robert Fregoso, bought the 50-paper bundles — for the normal 25 cents a copy.

"I've read the Herald all my life," said Fregoso, 43. "I used to sell them on the street 15 years ago down on Alameda and 42nd."

Fregoso said he was going to give the papers away to his best customers at Ricky's, a cocktail lounge he runs on Beverly Boulevard.

"It's very sad," he said. "This is an L.A. paper for L.A. The Times is worldwide, but if you wanted to know what was happening here, you got the Herald."

As Fregoso walked out the door about 11 a.m., Herald Examiner employee Belen Cruz bought the remaining 120 copies, and said, "When this is gone, that's it — no more."

"This morning we sold 1,000 copies in an hour," she said.

The Herald Examiner was born in 1912 when the morning Examiner, founded by newspaper baron William Randolph Hearst in 1903, was merged with the evening Herald Express, founded in 1871, and became the city's sole afternoon paper.

That paper and its predecessors were a huge part of the city's newspaper history.

Thousands of dollars were once kept in a safe in case Hearst needed quick cash or a reporter had to be bailed out of jail.

The Examiner had scoops on everything from the "Black Dahlia" murder case to the explosion of the first H-bomb.

Former police officer-turned-activist fails at police sting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former police sergeant who has become self-styled civil rights activist attempted to "sting" the Los Angeles Sheriff's Department, prompting a warning to deputies to avoid Don Jackson, 31, said Wednesday.

Jackson's head through a shop window, prompting a warning to deputies to avoid Don Jackson, 31, said Wednesday.

Los Angeles Sheriff's Department arrested and bought six bundles (of 50 papers each) as souvenir seekers cleaned out most newsstands shortly after dawn.

Fregoso said he was going to give the papers away to his best customers at Ricky's, a cocktail lounge he runs on Beverly Boulevard.

"It's very sad," he said. "This is an L.A. paper for L.A. The Times is worldwide, but if you wanted to know what was happening here, you got the Herald."

As Fregoso walked out the door about 11 a.m., Herald Examiner employee Belen Cruz bought the remaining 120 copies, and said, "When this is gone, that's it — no more."

"This morning we sold 1,000 copies in an hour," she said.

The Herald Examiner was born in 1912 when the morning Examiner, founded by newspaper baron William Randolph Hearst in 1903, was merged with the evening Herald Express, founded in 1871, and became the city's sole afternoon paper.

That paper and its predecessors were a huge part of the city's newspaper history.

Thousands of dollars were once kept in a safe in case Hearst needed quick cash or a reporter had to be bailed out of jail.

The Examiner had scoops on everything from the "Black Dahlia" murder case to the explosion of the first H-bomb.

Former police officer-turned-activist fails at police sting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former police sergeant who has become self-styled civil rights activist attempted to "sting" the Los Angeles Sheriff's Department, prompting a warning to deputies to avoid Don Jackson, 31, said Wednesday.

Jackson, a former police sergeant, has attempted on several occasions to catch Southern California law enforcement agencies using excessive force against minorities.

Jackson staged the "sting" Friday night to prove his belief that the department mistreats minorities. Jackson is black.

The problems at the Herald Examiner, once the largest afternoon paper in the country with a circulation of more than 300,000, were longstanding, officials acknowledged when they announced the closure Wednesday.

At the same time Hearst merged the two papers into one afternoon daily in 1962, Times Mirror Corp. merged its Times and Mirror into the morning-delivery Times. That started a gradual slide in circulation and advertising away from the Herald Examiner.

The moral blow was a bitter 10-year strike beginning in 1967.

Hearst tried to recover by hiring talented editors such as Jim Bellows, Mary Anne Dolan and Marshall Croehl, broadening coverage beyond the traditional blue-collar sports-and-crime emphasis, changing to morning publication and toying with the idea of changing to a tabloid format.

Former police officer-turned-activist fails at police sting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former police sergeant who has become self-styled civil rights activist attempted to "sting" the Los Angeles Sheriff's Department, prompting a warning to deputies to avoid Don Jackson, 31, said Wednesday.

Jackson, a former police sergeant, has attempted on several occasions to catch Southern California law enforcement agencies using excessive force against minorities. Jackson is black.

The problems at the Herald Examiner, once the largest afternoon paper in the country with a circulation of more than 300,000, were longstanding, officials acknowledged when they announced the closure Wednesday.

At the same time Hearst merged the two papers into one afternoon daily in 1962, Times Mirror Corp. merged its Times and Mirror into the morning-delivery Times. That started a gradual slide in circulation and advertising away from the Herald Examiner.

The moral blow was a bitter 10-year strike beginning in 1967.

Hearst tried to recover by hiring talented editors such as Jim Bellows, Mary Anne Dolan and Marshall Croehl, broadening coverage beyond the traditional blue-collar sports-and-crime emphasis, changing to morning publication and toying with the idea of changing to a tabloid format.

Former police officer-turned-activist fails at police sting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former police sergeant who has become self-styled civil rights activist attempted to "sting" the Los Angeles Sheriff's Department, prompting a warning to deputies to avoid Don Jackson, 31, said Wednesday.

Jackson, a former police sergeant, has attempted on several occasions to catch Southern California law enforcement agencies using excessive force against minorities. Jackson is black.

The problems at the Herald Examiner, once the largest afternoon paper in the country with a circulation of more than 300,000, were longstanding, officials acknowledged when they announced the closure Wednesday.

At the same time Hearst merged the two papers into one afternoon daily in 1962, Times Mirror Corp. merged its Times and Mirror into the morning-delivery Times. That started a gradual slide in circulation and advertising away from the Herald Examiner.

The moral blow was a bitter 10-year strike beginning in 1967.

Hearst tried to recover by hiring talented editors such as Jim Bellows, Mary Anne Dolan and Marshall Croehl, broadening coverage beyond the traditional blue-collar sports-and-crime emphasis, changing to morning publication and toying with the idea of changing to a tabloid format.

Former police officer-turned-activist fails at police sting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former police sergeant who has become self-styled civil rights activist attempted to "sting" the Los Angeles Sheriff's Department, prompting a warning to deputies to avoid Don Jackson, 31, said Wednesday.

Jackson, a former police sergeant, has attempted on several occasions to catch Southern California law enforcement agencies using excessive force against minorities. Jackson is black.

The problems at the Herald Examiner, once the largest afternoon paper in the country with a circulation of more than 300,000, were longstanding, officials acknowledged when they announced the closure Wednesday.

At the same time Hearst merged the two papers into one afternoon daily in 1962, Times Mirror Corp. merged its Times and Mirror into the morning-delivery Times. That started a gradual slide in circulation and advertising away from the Herald Examiner.

The moral blow was a bitter 10-year strike beginning in 1967.

Hearst tried to recover by hiring talented editors such as Jim Bellows, Mary Anne Dolan and Marshall Croehl, broadening coverage beyond the traditional blue-collar sports-and-crime emphasis, changing to morning publication and toying with the idea of changing to a tabloid format.

Former police officer-turned-activist fails at police sting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former police sergeant who has become self-styled civil rights activist attempted to "sting" the Los Angeles Sheriff's Department, prompting a warning to deputies to avoid Don Jackson, 31, said Wednesday.

Jackson, a former police sergeant, has attempted on several occasions to catch Southern California law enforcement agencies using excessive force against minorities. Jackson is black.

The problems at the Herald Examiner, once the largest afternoon paper in the country with a circulation of more than 300,000, were longstanding, officials acknowledged when they announced the closure Wednesday.

At the same time Hearst merged the two papers into one afternoon daily in 1962, Times Mirror Corp. merged its Times and Mirror into the morning-delivery Times. That started a gradual slide in circulation and advertising away from the Herald Examiner.

The moral blow was a bitter 10-year strike beginning in 1967.

Hearst tried to recover by hiring talented editors such as Jim Bellows, Mary Anne Dolan and Marshall Croehl, broadening coverage beyond the traditional blue-collar sports-and-crime emphasis, changing to morning publication and toying with the idea of changing to a tabloid format.
Two fraternities question constitutional basis of city noise law, label it 'vague'

By Barbara Courrain

Two Cal Poly fraternities are questioning the constitutional basis of their city's noise law, and label it "vague." The San Luis Obispo city attorney, the motion bid of 1 yen; investigation may be sought Commission, whose officials say More than 1,500 Chinese confess their sins a contract the company won last company officials in the Nagano at Fujitsu's headquarters in U.S. cent, the Japanese com­ attention of Japan's Fair Trade ordinance, said lead counsel at­ dismiss a noise citation issued a Municipal Court judge to nunities on November 7, the date pentangelo filed a motion asking ient to the San Luis minors and major industrial center. If 175 people had surrendered to... they said their decision would... about an "animal patrol." They turned them selves in to authorities for economic crimes into whether the unusually low bids constitute unfair trade under the Anti-Monopoly Law. In the Nagano deal, Fujitsu and electronics giant NEC Corp.

Tokyo computer giant tries to withdraw bid of 1 yen; investigation may be sought

TOKYO (AP) — Just days after Fujitsu Ltd. failed in its at­ tempt to escape a contract for which it bid 1 yen, about 0.7 of a U.S. cent, the Japanese computer company agreed to back out of it after withdrawal from another 1- yen deal says lacks "common sense." Akira Imagawa, a spokesman at Fujitsu's headquarters in Tokyo, said Wednesday that company officials in the Nagano prefecture in late August had asked local authorities to cancel a contract the company won last month involving a $1 million in Chinese cash. About $122,000, in its budget for the project, the officials said on condition of anonymity. "Front-line salesmen desper­ately wanted to win the contract, but lacked common sense," Imagawa said. In the earlier case, Fujitsu offi­ cials said their 1-yen bid to design software to map the city's water system represented a long-term business strategy. But later they ap­ peared to change their minds and asked the city to cancel the con­ tract. The city had budgeted $78,000 for the project. City officials refused, although they said their decision would depend on the outcome of a possible Fair Trade Commission

More than 1,500 Chinese confess their sins

White-collar crimes include embezzlement, taking bribes

BEIJING (AP) — More than 1,500 people in Beijing and Shanghai confessed to committing crimes in exchange for leniency under a national "repentance" campaign, newspaper reports said today. During the 10-week campaign, 136 officials, police auth­ orities in Beijing confes­ red to taking bribes and other economic crimes involving a total of $1 million, reports said. Daily. About $389,000 was returned, it said.

In Shanghai, China's largest city and major industrial center, 1,175 people had surrendered to authorities by Monday, admit­ ting they illegally received $2.08 million in Chinese cash. About half of that was returned, accord­ ing to the local newspaper Wen Hui. Among those who confessed in Shanghai were factory managers and mid-level officials of various enterprises, the Wen Hui reported.

News reports did not say how many other officials were involved in the nationwide campaign. It was the latest effort by the ruling Communist Party to root out cor­ ruption and white-collar crime which have spread rapidly under the economic liberalizations of the last decade. The Supreme People's Court and Supreme People's Pro­ secutor's office announced on Aug. 15 that all people who turned themselves in to authorities for economic crimes by the end of this year would be treated leni­enty. The government has stepped up anti-corruption crackdowns since the pro-democracy demonstrations in Hong Kong this year. Ending corruption was a popular cause among students, workers and other residents who filled Tiananmen Square and the major cities during the testing of the pro­ tests. Also today, the Communist Party said some Chinese college students still "have knots to be untied" because they believe their pro-democracy protests this past spring were patriotic.
This weekend in sports

Friday, November 3

• Volleyball — The Mustangs are coming off a big win Tuesday against the 12th-ranked team in the nation, UC Santa Barbara. Poly will face off against Fullerton in a Big West conference matchup. An early season road win over the Titans was the beginning of the Mustangs turnaround following an outright conference loss last weekend. A win tonight would help keep Cal Poly in the hunt for a NCAA playoff spot. The match begins at 7:30 p.m. in Mott Gym.

Saturday, November 4

• Cross Country — The men’s and women’s cross country squad will head for Humboldt State this weekend to compete in the Western Regionals. Both squads are coming off impressive wins last weekend at the CCAC championship. The top three teams in the region will advance to the Division II national championships, which will be held in East Stroudsburg, Pennsylvania. The women’s squad is in search of its eighth-straight national championship, and the men are expected to make a strong bid for the national title as well.

Baseball officials look to expand

Denver, Tampa-St. Petersburg have leg up on competition

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Denver and Tampa-St. Petersburg, Fla., are ahead in the race to add two new baseball franchises, Kansas City Royals co-owner Avron Fogelman said Saturday. Both cities are moving quickly to extend their winning streaks to two at Southern Utah this weekend. Although both teams spent a few years on the front burner, the Thunderbirds have a 2-1 conference mark, while the Mustangs are still in search of their first conference win. The game begins at 7 p.m. in Cedar City, Utah.

NBA season opens tonight

With Kareem Abdul-Jabbar out of the picture for the first time since 1969, another group of veterans who started their careers in the 1970s are setting their sights on NBA milestones in the 1990s.

Entering his 14th NBA season, 34-year-old Moses Malone has a chance to become the first player in NBA history to crack the 15,000-point barrier. Malone, who will be at center for Atlanta when the Hawks open the season against Indiana Friday night, has made 7,197 free throws, 497 behind Oscar Robertson. Malone made 561 free throws last year.

Other season openers Friday include Milwaukee at Boston, Washington at Chicago, New Jersey at Miami, the Los Angeles Lakers at Dallas, New York at Detroit, Cleveland at Chicago, Denver at Utah, Minnesota at Seattle, Golden State at Phoenix, Houston at the Los Angeles Clippers and Sacramento at Portland.

On Saturday, it’s Miami at New York, Milwaukee at Philadelphia, Detroit at Washington, New Jersey at Orlando, Cleveland at Chicago, the Los Angeles Lakers at San Francisco, Phoenix at Denver, Houston at Golden State and Seattle at Portland.

Denver's Alex English, 35, is a good bet to become the seventh player in NBA history to reach 25,000 points. English begins the season with 22,417 points after finishing 1988-89 as the first player to score more than 2,000 points in eight consecutive seasons.

English, who took 1,881 shots last season, needs 1,163 this season to crack the NBA's top five.

Adrian Dantley, 33, starting at guard for New Jersey, has made 6,614 free throws and should crack the NBA's top four by season's end. Dantley, who made 460 free throws last season, needs 366 to pass Dolph Schayes for fourth.

Danley, with 8,071 free-throw attempts in his career, is also within easy reach of sixth place on that career attempts list. Malone, who has 8,071 career makes, is 109 back of Chamberlain's 11,862.

Larry Bird, who came into the week with 19,202 points to become the 15th NBA player to score 20,000 in his last full season, 1987-88, Bird had 2,275.

Magic Johnson, who joined the NBA with Bird, needs to average 25 points a game for the next two seasons to become the league's career leader. Oscar Robertson retires at 21,040, while 8,025 career assists, had 988 last season.

Utah's John Stockton, the only player with more than one 1,000-assist season, goes for his third straight.

Earl Taylor's Dale Ellis, the NBA's career leader in 3-pointers with 4,725, could become the first to reach 500. Bird has 455.
Alternative paper hits Poly stands

‘Hot Coffee’ focuses on art, politics

By Ken A. Forkus

 Mustang Daily is not only the only Cal Poly newspaper anymore. Hot Coffee, in the new alternative newspaper, and according to Greg Heirshberg, director of the newspaper, “We are not trying to compete with the Mustang Daily.”

The main goal of the paper is “to try and focus on the artistic and the political sides of Poly,” said Heirshberg, a third-year English major.

Heirshberg said the first edition of the paper lacked a lot of material they had originally wanted to run. Only five people worked on the first issue, and Heirshberg said it took almost six weeks to produce. The campus coffee staff is currently trying to get another edition out on Monday, Nov. 6.

“After the first issue came out, we were swamped with material people have written for the next issue,” Heirshberg said. He said he thought the first issue was too visual and did not contain enough written material.

The paper is scheduled to come out twice a month, and Heirshberg said unless they get more help, “we will be struggling to get the paper out that much.” He said the first edition came out he had a lot of good response.

The new coffee, which can out-compute others faster, cheaper and more efficiently, said Wednesday.

New computer out-computes others faster, cheaper

SUNNYVALE (AP) — MIPS Computer Systems Inc. said it has produced the world’s fastest general-purpose computer, a $150,000 system that can handle data faster than mainstream processors chips in larger systems,

The whole idea of the paper is to give the students at Cal Poly, the right to hear both sides of the issues at hand. Heirshberg feels Mustang Daily does not must get involved enough with political issues, both local and international.

Hot Coffee will publish anything thing people submit to them regardless of whether or not the staff agrees with it. Heirshberg said, “Both sections were kind of harsh and a little immature,” admitted Heirshberg.

Heirshberg also pointed several minor mistakes that he said would be taken care of for the second issue.

Immediately after the announcement, Control Data Corp. said it would sell the new system and other Mips machines under the Control Data label. Control Data, based in Minneapolis, said it expects to resell $100 million worth of Mips computers by 1991.

For Sale

MAC PLUS Extended keyboard, hard drive, imager/burner printer & software $1400, $500 deposit
One-way: Ticket LAX-Hanford Nov 22 $220. Adult Sticker: Mon. to Fri. $70.00

Apexes & Cycles

HONDA EXPRESS SCOOTER -Great tranp, but not running Full $ 500 trade-in.

Automobiles

1983 HONDA CVCC 1050  95K

1985 CUTTHROAT CUSTOM CRUISER

1983 HONDA CB400F $900

1983 HONDA CB400F $900

Roommates

Female roommate needed to share from 246 Apartment, 1st floor

ROOM FOR RENT own room in a good house, available after 5pm $1200/3

ROOM SHARE- CLOTHES (M)

Homes for Sale

APARTMENT 1 bedroom, kitchen, bath, washer, dryer.

BOB'S 390A $2000

DERBY DAY at 10AM

1983 HONDA CVCC 1050 95K

1985 CUTTHROAT CUSTOM CRUISER

1983 HONDA CB400F $900

1983 HONDA CB400F $900

ROOM FOR RENT own room in a good house, available after 5pm $1200/3

ROOM SHARE- CLOTHES (M)

Homes for Sale

APARTMENT 1 bedroom, kitchen, bath, washer, dryer.

BOB'S 390A $2000

DERBY DAY at 10AM

1983 HONDA CVCC 1050 95K

1985 CUTTHROAT CUSTOM CRUISER

1983 HONDA CB400F $900

1983 HONDA CB400F $900

ROOM FOR RENT own room in a good house, available after 5pm $1200/3

ROOM SHARE- CLOTHES (M)
Another quake jolts Bay Area; minor damage in San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Another aftershock to the devastating Oct. 17 earthquake jolted northern California from San Francisco to Watsonville late Wednesday. The magnitude 4.4 aftershock hit at 9:50 p.m. and was centered slightly north of the epicenter of last month's magnitude 7.1 main shock, said Pat Jorgenson, spokesperson for the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park.

The aftershock was felt in San Francisco, Santa Cruz and Watsonville.

San Francisco police said there was only very minor damage in the city's Marina district, which was devastated by the Oct. 17 temblor. "Awesome," said Santa Cruz County sheriff's dispatcher Kevin Pink. "Shook pretty good. We were sweating bullets for a few seconds."

"We've had a couple of reports of minor stuff nothing major at this time, just bricks falling, people calling in sheer panic saying, 'The big one is on the way,'" said Lt. Jeffrey Babineau at the National Guard Armory in Watsonville, which is housing some 100 people who lost their homes in the Oct. 17 quake.

"We heard a rumbling, then everything started rolling and the cars in the parking lot started jumping around," he said. "A few of the people in the shelter screamed out, but then it stopped."

The Watsonville Police Department received about a dozen calls from people who were worried about any additional damage the aftershock might have caused their already damaged homes, said police dispatcher Terry Hernandez.

"Apparently a lot of people ran out into the street," she said. "We got a call from an apartment complex and they said everyone ran out."

She said there were no immediate reports of damage. An Santa Cruz police dispatcher who refused to give her name said there were no immediate reports of damage.

From page 1
looking for affordable housing; we are looking for clean air and a clean environment; we're looking for having adequate capacity to handle additional growth; we're looking for slow planned growth that will protect the environment. All these issues are the same you share as I share."

* Richie Ray Walker — "I'm for a cap on enrollment (at Cal Poly)... in fact I think the colleges should roll back their populations because we have to keep in mind the water situation. The landfills are filling up. We have to take into account traffic."

* Pierre Rademaker — "I'd like to see the city get involved in purchasing land from the State of California and joint-venture it or lease it back to a private developer to develop student housing. Housing that meets today's student housing needs and not延期 or Mustang type."

* David Blaine — "The student's social role is no different than that of the rest of the community. Politically, the students haven't voted. If you do, like I know you're going to this year, I think you will decide your role politically. All I can say is, be informed, get out there and do it and you will show the community what your role is."

WE CAN CHOOSE OUR OWN FUTURE

Councilmembers Allen Settle, Peg Pinard & Penny Rappa have been elected for only 2 reasons:

1) They are backed by a well organized anti-student, anti-business, anti-working person political machine.

2) The majority of voters, including the council candidates Gary Kunkel & Pierre Rademaker, haven't voted. If you do, like I know you're going to this year, I think you will decide your role politically. All I can say is, be informed, get out there and do it and you will show the community what your role is."

Authentic Thai Cuisine

Complete Dinner

$8.95

Appetizer, Soup, Salad, Rice, Main Dish & Dessert

Daily Lunch Specials

$3.25

20% OFF with this ad on any other selections Mon-Thurs

WE NEED BIGGER LANDFILLS

The landfills are filling up. We have to take into account traffic.

WE ARE LOOKING FOR CLEAN AIR AND A CLEAN ENVIRONMENT; WE'RE LOOKING FOR HAVING ADEQUATE CAPACITY TO HANDLE ADDITIONAL GROWTH; WE'RE LOOKING FOR SLOW PLANNED GROWTH THAT WILL PROTECT THE ENVIRONMENT. ALL THESE ISSUES ARE THE SAME YOU SHARE AS I SHARE.

* Richie Ray Walker — "I'm for a cap on enrollment (at Cal Poly)... in fact I think the colleges should roll back their populations because we have to keep in mind the water situation. The landfills are filling up. We have to take into account traffic."

* Pierre Rademaker — "I'd like to see the city get involved in purchasing land from the State of California and joint-venture it or lease it back to a private developer to develop student housing. Housing that meets today's student housing needs and not延期 or Mustang type."

* David Blaine — "The student's social role is no different than that of the rest of the community. Politically, the students haven't voted. If you do, like I know you're going to this year, I think you will decide your role politically. All I can say is, be informed, get out there and do it and you will show the community what your role is."

Cal Poly 1981 Graduate • Engineering Consultant • University Teacher

Gary Kunkel has shown the leadership to join with Mayor Dunin and Councilman Reiss to speak out against the Housing Ordinance. Gary has offered an alternative plan that includes designating areas close to Cal Poly for affordable housing.

Paid for by the Committee to Elect Gary Kunkel

Kevin Swanson (former ASI President) Campaign Manager

WE HAVE TO KEEP IN MIND THE WATER SITUATION. THE LANDFILLS ARE FILLING UP. WE HAVE TO TAKE INTO ACCOUNT TRAFFIC.