Poly photography instructor helps magazine celebrate 35th anniversary

Kauffman shot cover for introductory Sports Illustrated issue

By Robert Grove

Cal Poly Photography Instructor Mark Kauffman was honored last week at a luncheon in New York celebrating Sports Illustrated's 35th anniversary.

Kauffman, 67, helped revolutionize sports photography while at LIFE and was asked by the Time-Life Corp. to help them with a new magazine. That project later became Sports Illustrated, and Kauffman became its first photographer.

"I had the first two cover shots on Sports Illustrated," said Kauffman. "At the time we did not know what the magazine was supposed to be. They told us to make a weekly leisure magazine."

That leisure magazine has grown to one of the biggest weekly sports publications in North America.

"The anniversary lunch was really fun," he said. "The event was held Wednesday night in the U.S. plaza.

ASI postpones bill on authority of IFC

Would give power over expansion

By Karen Kendzor

Discussion of Associated Student Inc. Bill 89-04 has stopped until the Interfraternity Council can get documentation supporting the legality of the bill, said Franklin Burris, president of Phi Delta Theta.

ASI Bill 89-04 was first presented at the Nov. 8 ASI Board of Directors meeting by ASI Greek Relations Chairman Terry Alberstein.

The bill would grant the IFC more authority in the expansion of its membership, said Burris. IFC has tried in the past to gain more control over the number of houses that come on to campus, and none of those worked, he said.

"This bill is sort of a last ditch effort to try to be able to gain the control the IFC currently does not have," said Burris.

There has been an expansion policy, but it supposedly is only recommended, he said. None of the houses have to apply. They are only urged to apply.

"As it is now, anybody who wants to start a greek organization can do it at any time."

"You can have eight people living on a floor of one of the dorms decide they want to be a fraternity and the next week they are. And that's kind of a scary thought," said Burris. "We don't know how many of them are out there until maybe six or eight months later when they're in the community and can do things which will hurt us as a whole."

"My house came on three years ago," he said. "We followed all those rules and I feel they were beneficial. My house, by going through that process, realized how important it is to work with this community and with ASI as far as bettering our reputation in this community that we live in."

IFC Treasurer Jaime Luckman said that the IFC has had an explosive growth rate over the past two years.

"I know how hard it is to try and govern the greek community as a whole," said Luckman. "And right now we find it very difficult to deal with all the problems based in the greek community as much as having to govern the new houses."

Next year three new houses are expected to come on campus at once, said Luckman.

"We have unlimited resources and we're basically looking at the reputation as a whole," he said.

Next week, the turkey will be a carcass, the tablecloth will be a collage of food stains and Uncle Sam will be sleeping off that second helping of stuffing.

As a child, I looked forward to the holidays as a time when I could eat too much, talk too much and get away with tormenting my brother.

At the time of year when my grandmother would let me dip my little finger into her glass of wine and teach me dirty words in Italian. It was the time of year when my grandfather would wear a suit and bolo tie and tell me how pretty I looked in my new dress — and my little brother would laugh and say, "If only I have this much room in my tuxedo." It was the time when my grandmother would shake her head with a laugh and say, "If only I have this much room in my stomach." It was a moment when I could eat too much, talk too much and I didn't have to answer for anything.

Two years ago, my brother died after a long, painful illness. My grandmother and grandfather followed a year later. The holiday table seems emptier now.

If we don't speak up for the democratic freedoms of others as my brother. I hope they learn to be thankful for life's lessons, hard as they may be.

Letters to the Editor
Flag burning law 'assaults' liberty
Editor — When I read the overload of negative commentary about Philip Bolom's flag burning, I'm led to believe that people living in this country just do not understand the American Constitution. This is constitutional democracy, theoretically. In order for us to keep the rights we share under this system, everyone must share them. That's right, even the people we don't agree with.

It seems that making flag burning illegal is just a harmless display of patriotism, when in fact it is more evidence of the existence of the dangerous anti-liberty legislative trend in this country.

Democracy includes a vital tradition of tolerance and dissent. Where would the civil rights movement be if Rosa Parks hadn't refused to sit in the back of the bus? Civil disobedience was an integral part of Martin Luther King's efforts to give minorities their just constitutional rights. Henry Thoreau and other civil rights leaders are role models for us.

If we don't speak up for the democratic freedoms of others as my brother, I hope they learn to be thankful for life's lessons, hard as they may be.

Nov. 15 edition was 'outrageous'
Editor — While I was thoroughly devoted to Mustang Daily, I am usually satisfied with the quality of the publications. Certainly it is distressing when a paper is lacking in copy as that of Nov. 14, but I remain confident that running as high an ad-line as was done on that day was a mistake. Perhaps the somewhat vacuous edition on the 14th was intentionally designed to further empty the quality of the paper.

It was with surprise and pleasure that I read the edition on the 15th. Every article was interesting, well-written. There was timely copy on the front page and inside. It was a pleasure to be features both entertaining and educational. Of particular note was the guest columnist who was obviously not affiliated with the Daily. Allowing diverse and perhaps unpopular opinions to be aired in quite appropriate a college newspaper.

The Daily may well come under fire in the future for a tactless account of the sexual harassment story, but I believe it was pure, fair journalism.

The story was a matter of public record, and I feel it is inexcusable to read watered-down versions of sensitive, controversial matters that occur on this campus and affect me personally.

I am a frequent contributor to Tara Giambalvo and her staff for producing the most outstanding paper of the year, Volume 54, No. 38.

Give thanks for life's lessons

"America, love it or leave it!" That grand bumper sticker was what hard ears were hearing on the campus. It was May 1970 as they stormed New York's City Hall and forced officials to raise a flag lowered to half mast for four Kent State students killed by the National Guard.

They felt the American flag was being desecrated. No, 45 students at UC Berkeley burned paper flags to protest a new federal law prohibiting the desecration of the flag. They felt the American flag was being desecrated.

We agree. The flag, always a mirror of those looking at it, represents the ideals of freedom and tolerance, secular government and democracy.

At various points in our history our dedication to these values has been severely tested. In the '50s, when, in 1942, 100,000 Japanese-Americans were summarily imprisoned in camps, it showed the darker side of nationalism.

This darker side, a potentially repressive, virulently jingoistic streak, has once again reared its hideous head by attempting to make the flag legally sacred.

On a proverbial groundswell of opinion, President George Bush has led a movement to counter a Supreme Court decision striking a flag-burning ban from the books. Creating a law they knew to be unconstitutional. Bush and Congress pandered to our common lust for nationalistic,vidermic patriotism.

The law went into effect at midnight, Oct. 27. It was enacted by spineless legislators quivering at the thought of potential retribution.

Cal Poly students to spend a night on the streets of SLO

Homelessness can happen to anyone, says group leader

By Adrian Hodgson

Cal Poly students will have a chance Monday night to experience what much of San Luis Obispo's homeless population goes through every night — living on the streets.

The second annual "Night on the Streets," put on by Beyond Shelter, will take place from 5:30 p.m. Monday until 7 a.m. Tuesday.

The first annual "Night on the Streets," held on Thanksgiving weekend in 1986, was the inspiration for the current "Night on the Streets." Beyond Shelter, a group that works to aid homeless people in the county, is one of the groups that sponsored the event.

Participants will be placed into groups of two, and will have to survive on $1.25 until 6 a.m. when they are fed, free of charge, at Farm Boy Restaurant.

Beth Nester, co-director of Beyond Shelter, said the idea for the second annual "Night on the Streets" came about after she heard about the first event.

"I thought it would be a great way to learn about homelessness," Nester said.

She said she met "daily, frequently alone" with the president of Beyond Shelter's other co-director, said she and Nester intentionally planned "Night on the Streets" around the Thanksgiving holiday a long time ago.

"It's a way to learn how close the homeless are to us," said Nester. "We're only one step from being homeless. Just look at last month's earthquake."

The Oct. 17 quake in the Bay Area, he said, left thousands in the Watsonville and Santa Cruz areas without homes.

Liz Wolski, Beyond Shelter's lead consultant, said the Iran-Contra criminal case against Oliver North and also discussed the accuracy in spending nights on the streets.

"What are we going to do?" she asked.

Poindexter, in support of his request, said he met "daily, frequently alone" with the president during the Iran-Contra affair.

The two men, according to Poindexter, talked of the role of Richard Secord as a middleman in the transfer of arms to Iran and also discussed the accuracy of a chronology prepared by North and reviewed by Poindexter.

Poindexter now is accused of lying to Congress in connection with the chronology.

"I have no comment," Nester said in response to Greene's order.

Earlier this year, U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard Gesell had quashed a subpoena for documents "bearing on the criminal charges against him."

The judge ruled last month that Poindexter is entitled to see Reagan's diaries and notes he took at key meetings with the chronology.

Graduation ceremony split to accommodate more guests

Speaker options yet to be decided; commencement to run under 2hours

By Karen Kendzor

The upcoming Dec. 9 commencement will feature two separate ceremonies in order to fill graduates' pockets with twice the amount of guest tickets, said Commencement Coordinator Robert M. Bostrom. "It is hoped that the additional tickets will provide enough slack so there will be no sales of tickets," said Bostrom. "Those who do not use all their tickets are encouraged to give their extras to friends who might need them." In order to have equal numbers of degree candidates at each ceremony, the Schools of Agriculture, Engineering and Science and Mathematics will be grouped for the first ceremony. The second will begin at 2 p.m. for the Schools of Architecture and Environmental Design, Business, Liberal Arts and Professional Studies and Education, said Bostrom. Both ceremonies will be held in the Robert A. Mott Gymnasium, a facility big enough to accommodate 340 graduates and each of their 10 invited guests, said Bostrom. Bostrom anticipated that the ceremony will last an hour and 45 minutes rather than its usual two and a half hours, said Bostrom. Certain redundancies have been eliminated from the ceremony in order to make it shorter, he said, such as alumni will not be asked to speak. The impact of having two ceremonies will be most critical in terms of whether an outside speaker is chosen or not, said Bostrom. "We see a problem with inviting outside speakers to come and give two speeches," said Bostrom. Bostrom also foresees problems with inviting two separate guests because one group is bound to think it got the better end. "You can't please three people, much less 3,000," he said.

The President of Costa Rica had been invited to speak at the commencement ceremony last June, but it was learned in

"Night on the Streets" last year when she received a newsletter telling of a North Dakota school that did a similar activity. For those interested in participating in Monday night's event, Nester said to meet at the Student Life and Activities office, the sponsor of Beyond Shelter, on the second floor of the University Union at 5:30 p.m. or call 756-2476 for more information. "Bring whatever you want — a sleeping bag, a pillow, a blanket," she said. However, alcohol, drugs, portable radios, snacks and extra money are not allowed, she said. "There will be a hotline in case there are any problems," Nester said, adding that if some people get too cold or encounter other difficulties, they can be picked up and taken home. Nester and Wolski said they are expecting between 10 and 20 people to participate, but there is no limit on the number of students who spend Monday outside in the San Luis Obispo streets. Nester also had some advice for participants: "Pretend like you are homeless. Treat it like you're on your last $1.25."

April 21 Could Be The Most Important Day of Your Career

Why April 21? Because that’s when you can take the Fundamentals of Engineering exam and become qualified as an engineer-in-training, the first step in becoming a Professional Engineer.

If you are an engineering student consider this. P.E. registration allows more career flexibility and choice. Professional Engineers aren’t locked out of a career path; jobs are theirs for the choosing in government, industry, construction and private practice. Many employers require registration for advancement to senior engineering positions.

Don’t delay. The opportunity to take the exam is now, while courses are still fresh in your mind. The test will be administered on April 21 at sites selected by The Board of Registration for Professional Engineers and Land Surveyors. The cut-off date for exam applications is March 20.
